But the whole story has not been told. The ratio of children of school age to the whole population in the States named is 18.56 per cent., but in Idaho it is but 16.66 per cent.; so she might do worse than as 1 to 20 in the matter of school attendance and still be doing relatively as well as the average of the eighteen States selected for illustration.

The people of Idaho are neither so rude nor so sordid as to be blind or deaf to the advantages or claims of higher education. They are building a home for a Territorial university at a cost of $75,000, and have imposed on themselves a special tax of one-twentieth of 1 per cent. on the assessed value of their taxable property for its present institution and maintenance. When Idaho shall have become a State and its lands shall have reached a good value, this university will have a rich endowment, already provided by the wisdom of the Federal Congress.

Supplementary to the public-school system are numerous private and denominational schools, established by individual enterprise and religious zeal.

For the service of religion churches have been erected at a cost of $225,000 or thereabouts.

There are forty-one newspapers to inform and instruct the people of the Territory.

MEANS OF COMMUNICATION.

Two great trunk lines of railway connect Idaho with the rest of the civilized world. The Union Pacific runs east and west and north and south, across Central and Southern Idaho. The Northern Pacific runs east and west across Northern Idaho. Local railways supplement these greater agencies. There are 894 miles of railway in operation and 535 miles in various stages of location and construction.

There are more than 900 miles of telegraph lines in the Territory.

INDUSTRIAL STATISTICS AND INFORMATION.

There were 600,000 acres of land in cultivation in 1889, producing more than 7,000,000 bushels of cereals, nearly 2,000,000 bushels of vegetables, upwards of 400,000 tons of hay, and large and small fruits in the quantities already stated. The wool clip was over 2,000,000 pounds.

Nearly 1,800,000 acres of tillable land are in preparation for cultivation, part of them included in the 400,000 acres entered at the land offices during the year.

The mineral yield, in spite of a bad year from drought, was more than $17,000,000, and some of it from the richest ores known to the annals of mining.

The products of 1889 had a market value of $27,000,000, and 350,000 tons of freight were moved during the year.

Large stocks of goods are carried by the merchants; mercantile profits average 20 per cent. net; the average rate of interest is 12 per cent., wages are $4 to $5 per day for artisans and $2 to $2.50 per day for unskilled laborers, and living expenses as a whole are not more than 10 per cent. above Eastern rates.

In Northern Idaho the chief industries are mining, lumbering, cereals, and fruits. Burke, Coeur d'Alène, Moscow, Lewiston, Mullen, Post Falls, Murray, Grangeville, Wallace, Mount Idaho, and Wardner are the important towns.

Northeastern Idaho is devoted to mining, cereals, and fruits, and has also rich stores of timber. Salmon City and Challis are the principal towns.

Central Idaho is a great mining, lumbering, and grazing district.

West Central Idaho is distinctively a mining district.

South Central Idaho is a mining and grazing region. Bellevue, Shoshone, Hailey, Mountain Home, Albion, and Ketchum are large and busy towns.

Eastern Idaho is an agricultural and stock-raising district. Soda Springs is a famed sanitarium and pleasure resort, with magnificent hotels and appurtenances. Blackfoot, Pocatello, and Eagle Rock are also important towns.

Southeastern Idaho is noted for fruits, cereals, grazing, cattle, and lumbering. Franklin, Malad City, and Montpelier are notable towns.

Western Idaho is an agricultural, grazing, and fruit country. Boise City, the Territorial capital, and Caldwell, Silver City, Weiser, Payette, and Salubria, important towns, are in this section.

Southern Idaho is an agricultural and grazing district and contains much building stone.

This review of the Territory by sections shows that its industries are diversified and that it already has numerous seats of trade and manufacture.

FINANCIAL CONDITION OF THE TERRITORY.

The estimated value of real and personal property, including marketable mines, is about $100,000,000, and is growing at the rate of 15 to 20 per cent. annually. The total cost of general and local government is $533,000, of which only $28,000 comes from the national Treasury. The expense of Territorial government, excluding the Federal contribution, is $84,000, and is met by a levy of 3.5 mills per $1 on taxable property, assessed at about 40 per cent. of its real value, and some license and poll taxes. The Territorial debt is $146,715.06, but there is a balance of $60,000 in the treasury, and there are public buildings costing $150,000.

In 1891 indebtedness to the amount of $47,000 will mature, and it can be paid, and $4,700 in annual interest saved thereafter, without increase of taxation. Part of the remaining debt is provided for by a sinking fund, and, so far as can be seen, the whole debt will disappear without raising the taxes. The estimated additional cost of State government will be less than 2 mills upon the hundred dollars, and, as the people are now paying less than 7 mills per hundred dollars upon the actual value of their property for the whole expense of central and local government, the increase will not be appreciably felt, while statehood will bring them a large accession of population and capital.

PREPARATION FOR STATEHOOD.

After Idaho had been an organized Territory for twenty-six years the Committee on Territories of the United States Senate reported a bill providing for her admission to the Union. The bill died on the Calendar of the Fiftieth Congress; but, acting pursuant to its moral force and authority, the Democratic governor of the Territory issued a call for a convention to frame a State constitution, which call was ratified and repeated by his Republican successor. Party divisions were not regarded in the selection of delegates, nor was there a material preponderance of either political party in the membership of the convention.

A constitution was framed by the labors of 69 out of the whole number of 72 members of the convention. It was then with due deliberation submitted to a popular vote, which resulted in 12,398 ballots for and 1,733 ballots against its adoption. This constitution has been examined by the Committees on Territories of the two Houses of Congress and has met their approval. Whenever it may please the Congress of the United States to pass an act for the admission of Idaho into the family of States, this constitution, prepared for the people by the people, will enable the change or political status to be effected without public or private injury or inconvenience.

The minority of the Committee on Territories has seen fit to make a report against our admission. It becomes my duty to discuss it, but before doing so I will ask the Clerk to read what I now send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

[Headquarters Democratic Territorial central committee. Francis E. Ensign, chairman, Hailey, Alturas County; James H. Wickersham, secretary, Boise City, Ada County. Executive committee: Charles C. Sterenson, chairman; J. B. Wickersham, Boise City; J. B. Mullen, Pocatello; Green White, Boise City; A. D. Greene, Lewiston; W. G. Lane, Shoshone; D. W. Stanrod, Malad.]

BOISE CITY, IDAHO, March 10, 1890.

At a meeting of the Democratic Territorial central committee of Idaho Territory, held at the capitol, in Boise City, on September 10, A. D. 1889, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted, to wit:

Resolved, That the Democratic party of Idaho Territory through its representatives, the central committee, heartily indorses the movement in behalf of statehood, and we pledge ourselves to use every endeavor to secure the ratification by the people of the constitution framed and submitted by the constitutional convention recently in session in Boise City.

Resolved, That the Democratic county committees of the various counties be instructed to use every effort to present the constitution fairly before the people and bring out the full vote of the party at the election in November next.

Resolved, That E. A. Stevenson, George Ainslie, and Jas. H. Wickersham are hereby appointed the agents of this committee to act in behalf of this committee, with like agents already appointed by the Republican Territorial central committee, to devise ways and means to properly present before the people the benefits to be derived through the admission of Idaho as a State.

I, the undersigned, secretary of the Democratic Territorial central committee of Idaho Territory, do hereby certify that the above and foregoing is a true and correct copy of the resolutions adopted by the said committee on September 10, 1889.

JAMES H. WICKERSHAM,
Secretary.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 31, 1890.

To the Democratic Members of the Fifty-first Congress:

I have the honor of handing you a copy of a telegram received by me from Idaho on yesterday:

"BOISE CITY, IDAHO, March 29, 1890.

"Hon. GEORGE AINSLIE,
"Metropolitan Hotel:

"Democratic Territorial central committee in session unanimously requested Democratic members of Congress to vote for admission of Idaho.

"F. E. ENSIGN, Chairman.
"J. H. WICKERSHAM, Secretary."

I can assure you that such action of the committee reflects the sentiments of the Democracy of Idaho beyond question.

Respectfully,

GEORGE AINSLIE, Ex-Delegate from Idaho.

Mr. DUBOIS. It is very plain that the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] and his colleagues who sign the minority report do not represent the Democratic party of Idaho or any portion of it. They themselves even will not claim that they represent the Republicans of Idaho. Whom, then, do they represent? They represent the Mormon Church and nothing and nobody else.

Could partisan zeal go to more extreme limits? I do not believe they can command the solid support of the gentlemen on that side of the Chamber on this proposition.

I desire to state now that I will be glad to answer any questions which may be asked concerning any statements I may make respecting the Mormons. Having lived among these people and studied their system and having been brought in contact with their modes of life, I speak from actual knowledge. Should the members of the minority committee or others, in their defense of Mormonism, undertake to quote any authorities from Idaho newspapers or individuals, I trust they will extend the same courtesy to me and allow me the privilege of questioning them. I presume the country desires facts on this important subject.

As soon as our constitution was submitted to Congress the Mormons appeared here through a retained attorney, one of the ablest in the country, and fought the progress of the bill step by step before the Senate and then the House committee.

The attorney was untiringly assisted by the Delegate from Utah, a Mormon, and by the leading Mormon of Idaho, William Budge, a president of a "stake." President Budge well represented his people, for he stated to each committee that at the present time he was blessed with three wives. No one else from Idaho, nor the representatives of any one else from Idaho, appeared against our constitution or against statehood. Yet, in the face of the fact that both political parties in Idaho are a unit for statehood under this constitution, the minority of the Committee on Territories totally disregard their wishes and do the bidding of the Mormon chiefs; and, to emphasize the fact that they intend to represent the Mormons, they object to but one clause of our constitution, that which is aimed at this organization. Does it count for nothing that the Supreme Court of the United States has unanimously affirmed the constitutionality of this very clause? It seems not.

Does it count for nothing that Congress has passed laws excluding bigamists and polygamists from the franchise? It seems not, for the minority insist that while yet in a Territory bigamists and polygamists shall be permitted to vote for delegates to a constitutional convention, the Edmunds law to the contrary notwithstanding. This is the language of the minority:

Provided, That no person otherwise qualified shall be denied the right to vote at said election (for delegates) because of alleged crime, for which the punishment embraces disfranchisement as a part of the penalty therefor, except where he has been duly convicted thereof by a court of competent jurisdiction.

The language of the Edmunds law, passed March 22, 1882, is as follows:

SEC. 8. That no polygamist or bigamist or any person cohabiting with more than one woman, and no woman cohabiting with any of the persons described as aforesaid in this section, in any Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, shall be entitled to vote at any election held in any such Territory.

Nothing is said in this law about conviction.

The minority also recommend the adoption of an additional proviso to section 1 of the bill, namely, making it a fundamental condition to our admission that no one shall be denied the right of suffrage unless convicted of crime and that the Legislature shall give its assent to that fundamental condition. In other words, they insist that bigamists and polygamists shall vote in Idaho Territory, when the Edmunds law says they shall not vote, and they insist that bigamists and polygamists shall always vote in the State of Idaho, when the people of that State clearly and distinctly insist that they shall never vote. The minority say:

We insist, therefore, that when Idaho is admitted it shall not be with a provision in the constitution which deprives a citizen of the right of suffrage or of the right to serve on juries and to hold office because of alleged crime of which the party has not been convicted. We insist that these disqualifications shall only result from a conviction of crime.

Methinks they insist too much. What right or precedent have they to impose upon Idaho conditions which have never been imposed upon any State coming into the Union? Heretofore and always the qualified electors of the Territory only have been allowed to vote on the constitution. There is nothing in the Mormon system so commendable as to call for such a radical and unjust departure in their behalf. Should the minority prevail, bigamy and polygamy will be firmly fastened upon the State of Idaho.

The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. WASHINGTON] signs this report. Let us see what the constitution of Tennessee says on the subject of franchise. By article 9:

Ministers of the gospel are forbidden to hold office, also persons who deny God or fight duels.

Yet the gentleman from Tennessee signs a report which says:

We insist that in Idaho disqualifications for holding office shall only result from a conviction of crime.

The people of Idaho say bigamists and polygamists shall not hold office in Idaho, the people of Tennessee say ministers of the gospel shall not hold office in Tennessee.

The State of Texas, whose Representative, Judge KILGORE, signs this report, disqualifies paupers. Several States disqualify those who fight duels, send or accept challenges to fight duels, or aid or assist others to fight duels, without requiring a conviction, as Virginia, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, and others.

Running through the debates in Congress on the laws affecting the Mormons, I notice that those who uphold the institution invariably preface their remarks with the earnest statement that they themselves are opposed to bigamy and polygamy, but, forsooth, their conscience and regard for the Constitution will not permit them to vote for any measure which will tend to destroy these practices. In our country we have a genus homo called "Jack-Mormon," an individual or class of individuals who do not belong to the Mormon church, who profess abhorrence of polygamy, yet who are ever found doing the bidding of Mormon priests and fighting with them to render futile the laws aimed at the destruction of their pernicious practices.

I observe that the minority in their report iterate and reiterate that they must not be classed with the sympathizers of polygamy, yet they would force us to eradicate the only laws which have been at all effective in checking this crime. If the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] were in Idaho I fear he would be classed as a "Jack-Mormon."

Why is it, gentlemen of the minority, that there has always been bitter strife and contention between the Mormons and their neighbors? Why were they driven from Ohio to Missouri, from Missouri to Illinois, from Illinois to Iowa, then across the trackless desert? Why, now, do men range themselves solidly into hostile classes of Mormons and anti-Mormons in Utah and Idaho? Does it bode no significance to the minority that every American citizen brought in contact with this organization is opposed to it? No question has ever confronted citizens of our country, save this one, which absolutely and surely breaks down party lines. The Mormons claim to be Democrats, yet every Democrat in Idaho is in favor of this clause.

In Utah, where the evil is greater, they do not even have Democratic and Republican parties and never have had. Will you attempt to answer with the stale and unprofitable slanders that the Gentiles want their property, and the scheme is a political one? Will you not for once calmly and honestly confront the cold fact that here is a theocracy, made worse because its foundation stone is polygamy, in whose polluted embrace every tender and fond recollection of mother and home withers and dies? Could you but see, as I have seen, the wretched and appalling misery and degradation of polygamist women and children, you would stop at no legal means to destroy the power of a corrupt hierarchy which holds its fanatical and ignorant followers in an iron grasp.

I have seen three sisters living in one room and each raising a family to the same husband. I have seen a mother and daughter who were married to the same husband. I have seen an alleged second wife on the witness stand and heard her swear that she was not married to the defendant, and heard her father, mother, sisters, and brothers swear to the same thing while at the time she was the mother of one child by him and pregnant with another.

I have heard time and time again a father or mother swear they did not know who the father of their daughter's children was, nor did they feel curious to inquire. These are not exceptions which I cite. Every term of court brings numerous cases of this character.

No crime can be greater, in my estimation, than to bring children into the world with this brand upon them, without the ability to furnish sufficient nourishment for their bodies and none for their minds. But with all its hideousness polygamy is not what impels the fiercely partisan ex-Confederate Democrat from Tennessee and the unyielding ex-Union Republican from Illinois to range themselves under the same banner, in opposition to this so-called church, so soon as they come in contact with it.

No matter how different the methods of the ex-Confederate and ex-Unionist, each is loyal to his Government and jealous of its fame and power, and their differences melt away as the snow before our "Chinook" winds when the startling truth quickly and inevitably dawns upon them that here is an organization, firmly entrenched, which is hostile to the Government and its laws in every fiber; that here is a government within our Government in which the priests are supreme and the followers slaves. They quickly recognize that there is but one law, that of the theocracy; they feel instinctively, it is in the very air, that they are dealing with an organized community which has not one element of democracy in it.

There is absolutely no difference of opinion, and all who live among these people are irresistibly led to the same conclusion. They all know that every privilege which is granted this community they use not as other citizens, to build up and strengthen the nation, but to destroy it. These facts are patent, and you must deal with them as statesmen, and not as partisans. All the high civil and ecclesiastical offices were formerly lodged in the hands of the polygamists. The polygamists can not hold civil office now, but they control the politics of the organization as firmly as of old, and still retain the chief offices of the church. They are the dictators. When you break down polygamy, the institution will crumble to pieces; when you break down the political power of the institution, which is the source of strength to polygamy, it will perish.

In this connection I call your attention to the very significant fact that the polygamous Mormons are the ones who represented their church here and opposed this constitution; they are the ones who are vitally interested; it is not a matter of such deep concern by far to the monogamous Mormons.

The effect of this legislation in Idaho has been extremely good, and if we are admitted as a State with this clause in our constitution the monogamous Mormons, who compose the large majority of the organization, as the polygamists themselves persistently state, will either demand that polygamy be abandoned as the foundation stone of the institution or the monogamists will abandon the church.

The monogamists will not consent to be deprived of political privileges in order to maintain the doctrine of polygamy which they themselves do not practice. Either of these courses will be fatal to the polygamists who now, as always, absolutely rule the church. When polygamy is abandoned the members will commence to think for themselves, will refuse to be governed in all their temporal affairs by their leaders, will divide on political lines, and will become the same as members of any other church organization. When the monogamists leave the church and refuse it and polygamy their support the polygamists will occupy the position of ordinary criminals and will quickly meet the fate of other criminals.

In 1884-'85 the Legislature of Idaho passed a law which deprived of the franchise those who are bigamists or polygamists or who belong to an organization which practices, teaches, and encourages bigamy or polygamy. The vote was practically unanimous. Two successive Legislatures have confirmed the law. The same law was put in our constitution by a unanimous vote both in convention and at the polls. I do not deny that its object was to take the political power away from the Mormons. We defend it on that ground. We claim that it is a duty we owe our State and country to protect the State against the insidious and constant attacks of an alien government.

The delegates charged by their fellow-citizens with the preparation of a State constitution for Idaho rightly considered themselves bound to so frame that instrument as to afford guaranties to the Federal Government that the State, when admitted, would become and remain a useful and creditable member of the Union, and guaranties to the people of Idaho that the constitution made for them would secure to them and to their posterity the blessings of political liberty and social integrity. In other words, the framers of this constitution sought, by its agency and assistance, to found an American State, with all the traditional and wholesome characteristics of such a community. In pursuit of this object, the constitutional convention was confronted by the fact that a part of the inhabitants of Idaho, numbering between one-ninth and one-tenth of the present population, were organized into a religious body, holding and exercising a doctrine professedly based on divine revelation, one of the tenets of which doctrine is that polygamous marriage is lawful, meritorious, and beneficial.

There are now forty-two States in the American Union, and in each of them the form of government is republican and the political institutions are those of an advanced democracy. That is to say, there is no State in the Union having any other form or operation of government than that of a government of the people, by the people themselves. In each of these States the social structure of the community, which underlies and precedes the political institutions, is based upon a family organization wherein monogamous marriage is alone recognized or permitted and wherein the practice of bigamy or polygamy is prohibited and treated as an assault upon the safety and welfare of the Commonwealth and pursued and punished at the public expense as a crime against the State.

Furthermore, the people of these forty-two States are organized into a Federal Union, and, through their Federal legislative, executive, and judicial departments of government, they enforce monogamous and suppress bigamous and polygamous marriage in those parts of the national territory not within the boundaries of any State. In view of these examples the people of Idaho could not hope for nor expect admission into the Union, unless they could show the taking of reasonable precautions, in their organic instrument of government, for the maintenance and vindication of the only kind of marriage admitted or permitted by public law or public sentiment throughout the length and breadth of the United States.

At present, in Idaho, this kind of marriage is under the patronage and protection of the Federal Government, the laws of which forbid and suppress bigamy or polygamy within the Territory; but after the admission of Idaho as a State of the Union the enforcement of monogamy must depend wholly upon the State. How the people of Idaho propose to provide for the contingency is disclosed in section 3, article 6, of the constitution for the proposed State. The provisions of that section, so far as they relate to bigamy and polygamy, are substantially identical with the statute law of the Territory on the same subjects, and the legality of the statute has been recently and unanimously affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Davis against Beason, No. 1261 of the October term, 1889. Nothing is left, therefore, for present consideration but the question of the policy of the polygamy clauses of the constitution adopted for and by the expectant State.

The polygamists of Idaho, including both those who merely profess and those who actually practice polygamy, are an inconsiderable minority of the population. Individually considered, their profession of polygamy, being at war with the profession and practice of the whole of the civilized world, is not dangerous, and the individual practice of it could be met by the common-law provisions and remedies against bigamy, adultery, and fornication. But, unhappily for all parties, the polygamists of Idaho can not be individually considered. They belong, each and all, to a theocracy, set up and maintained within the sphere and limits of the democracy constituting the United States of America. All other members of this democracy, whatever their religious beliefs, professions, and practices, reserve to themselves their individual freedom and independence in public affairs, and do not look further than to human advice and guidance in the shaping and performing of their political action.

Not so with the polygamists of Idaho. To them polygamy comes as a divine revelation and injunction, designed for the spiritual and eternal exaltation of those who accept and exemplify the revelation. If this religious doctrine was of such a form and structure that the exemplification of it was, in each case of its acceptance, to be postponed to a future stage and state of existence, the matter would not come within the domain of civic policy or human law. Unfortunately, the doctrine is so constituted that the practice of it is to begin and endure on earth, and thus a rivalry and conflict is precipitated within the sphere of human society and of human regulation for the government of that society.

The laws of civilized communities not providing for the practice of polygamy, but, on the contrary, being directed to its suppression, it follows that polygamy can only be practiced outside the territorial jurisdiction of civic law or in defiance or evasion of that law. In Idaho those who profess and practice polygamy reside within the jurisdiction of civic law and can only enforce their profession or practice by violation of the law, to which every inhabitant of the Territory is equally subject. In order to facilitate this violation of the common law of the Territory, the members of the body by which the doctrine of polygamy is held as a religious tenet, being the denomination commonly known as the Mormon Church, mingle their spiritual and temporal concerns in such wise and to such extent as to subordinate their secular conduct as members of the body politic to the advice, control, and direction of their religious superiors, who have no lawful authority whatever in secular matters, and in case of conflict between the law of the church and the law of the Territory or of the Union preference is given to the former, both as a matter of principle and conduct, wherever and whenever the preference can be practically effected or attempted.

The people of Idaho, without wish or procurement of their own, are thus brought face to face with the question whether or not any individual among them, upon plea of conscience or religion, shall be exempted from prohibitions which the great majority, in common with the vast majority of their race, deem essential to the safety and perpetuity of civilization, and permitted to pursue practices, form connections, and help to found a social system which, in the belief and opinion of this vast majority, would undermine morality, weaken intelligence, impair energy and enterprise, degrade women, debase men, deprive children of necessary example and discipline, substitute for the stability of the family group a fluctuating and temporary relation, based on sordid considerations of convenience or sexual passion, and ultimately destroy the State. Upon such a question there can be but one decision.

If the State constitution for Idaho had provided that any person who should practice, aid, or encourage polygamy should not be permitted to gain or retain a residence within the expectant State it would have gone no further than the exigency justified or than the Federal law has gone in excluding incongruous, enfeebled, and corrupt elements from the population of the Union. But the Idaho constitution stops very far short of remedies with which the people of the United States are already familiar and which they have themselves adopted. This constitution simply proposes to disqualify as an elector, a juror, or an office-holder any person who practices bigamy or polygamy or who teaches, counsels, encourages, or aids others to engage in bigamy or polygamy, or who adheres to, supports, aids, or encourages any organization that teaches, counsels, encourages, or aids persons to engage in bigamy or polygamy, or which teaches or advises that the civic laws, prescribing rules of civic conduct, are not the supreme law of the land.

A polygamist or propagandist of polygamy, as an elector, either from individual preference or from obedience to an authority claiming a divine commission, would vote so as to advance or defend the interests of polygamy; as a juror, he could not render an unbiased verdict in a cause involving polygamy; as an officer, he would not feel free to enforce the laws against polygamy. The people of Idaho, having solemnly and deliberately determined that authorized polygamy within their borders would be inconsistent with their social and political perpetuity and prosperity, and not wishing to persecute their polygamous fellow-citizens, nor to dispute their integrity and sincerity, but being willing that honest differences of belief or opinion should exist and have all the freedom and tolerance that the paramount interests of the community may allow, have sought for a modus vivendi between the monogamists of Idaho, who are in a very great majority, and the polygamists, who are in a very marked minority, until such time as these differences may disappear without heat or violence.

This modus vivendi the people of Idaho believe they have found by leaving the actual individual practice of polygamy to the operation of the common law of the civilized world and by imposing a limited disqualification and disability upon those who desire to propagate polygamy by individual or concerted action, such disqualification being shaped and measured strictly according to the known mode and extent wherein polygamy seeks to promote and shelter itself among the communities wherever it exists.

Is polygamy better than monogamy, having regard to what the American people are now and what they hope to be hereafter? Is it as good as monogamy from that point of view? Can polygamy and monogamy subsist, side by side, on equal terms, without altering, as Americans do not wish them to be altered, the character, the institutions, the destiny of American people, American communities, American States, and the American Union? If each and all of these questions be answered in the negative, as they must be, should not some discouragement and restraint be laid upon polygamy? If so, should it not be efficient enough to prevent polygamy from obtaining any undue advantage in legislation, in the administration of justice, and in the execution of the law?

Is the greatest good of the greatest number to be promoted by first placing polygamy under the ban of the law and public opinion, and then offering opportunity to polygamists, in fact or in principle, to evade the law and defy public opinion? Would it be kind to polygamists themselves to first tell them that their religious teachings and practices are too destructive of the foundations of modern society and public morals to be sanctioned and then tempt them to violate their obligations as citizens in favor of their preferences as religionists? The Catholic, the Protestant, the Israelite, the agnostic, keeps his theological principles and practices apart from his secular character. He votes, he legislates, he renders verdicts, he discharges the functions of office free from theological control or direction.

The sincere and faithful Mormon knows nor recognizes no such separation between religious and secular affairs. To him the hierarchy at Salt Lake City unites in itself the several characters and qualities of prophet, priest, and king. Its revelations are divine, its ministrations sacred, its commands imperative. To prophets and priests of every kind and name the American Commonwealth extends an equal hospitality; it tolerates no sovereigns but the people themselves, speaking and acting through the laws they ordain and the agencies they constitute.

Legal functions are secular functions, and whenever the Mormon Church withdraws from the secular field and confines itself, as do all other religious orders, organizations, and bodies, to prophetic utterances and priestly ministrations, so that the civic sovereignty may exert itself unchallenged within its own sphere, the Mormons will cease to be "a peculiar people" and to be subjected to peculiar laws. That time not having arrived and the people of Idaho, both upon national and local grounds, being unwilling to have two independent, separate, and inconsistent systems of civic government operating within the same limits upon the same matters and subjects, confidently submit the provision they have made for maintaining the vigor and integrity of American principles among them to the considerate judgment of Congress. If they can not have statehood without subjecting themselves to the stagnating and corrupting secular activities of an exterior theocratic government, they will remain under the provisional protection of Federal laws, expressly aimed at the baleful rule and effects of such a theocracy as the Mormon Church under its present constitution.

I will close this branch of the subject by saying to you, gentlemen of Congress and of the country, that the issue is fairly joined here. If you are in earnest in your desire to crush this corrupt institution, which has been a disgrace and a stain upon our national honor for half a century, the opportunity is offered. The head of the church in Idaho comes here in person to tell you so. The results of this clause in our legislative enactment convince me of it. On the one hand is a commercial and political organization, held together by crime; on the other are your own kindred, as brave and loyal people as ever founded a State.

Will you sustain this treasonable and lascivious institution or will you hold up the hands of the brave pioneers who have gone to Idaho, who on this proposition have abandoned all party ties and unite in saying, "We earnestly desire statehood, but we desire it only for loyal American citizens?" Give us statehood under our constitution and the Mormon question will soon be an issue of the past. The responsibility is no longer with us. We have done our full duty as American citizens.

Trusting that I have shown, at least, that, firmly holding to the views in regard to the Mormons which I have so imperfectly given expression to, our people could not consistently with the duty they owe to their country change their position or laws in regard to this organization, and thanking you for your courtesy and patience I will conclude my remarks with a résumé of the reasons why statehood should be granted us.

CONCLUSION.

The whole field has now been traversed and surveyed. It has been seen how, even before the dawn of the Federal Constitution, the Congress of the Confederation, feeble in power, but strong in great individualities, invited the enterprising spirits of the seaboard to move upon and build up the unoccupied spaces of the West, pledging themselves that their temporary deprivation of American rights should be minimized and shortened to the uttermost degree. It has been seen how the Congress of the Union, beginning within five years of the giving of the pledge, has repeatedly and consistently redeemed the promise of its precedent Congress. It has been seen how, in cases of doubt, the collective judgment of the national legislature and the voices of its great leaders have always gone in the direction of liberally anticipating the maturity of the promise rather than risk the least injury or injustice to the holders of it by delay in realization.

It has been seen how numerically weak and how poorly endowed with accumulated wealth, when erected into States, were some of the communities that are now so great and strong and rich that they might figure as kingdoms in other worlds or times than ours. It has been seen how the transformation from the inferior to the superior political condition wonderfully stimulates the growth and prosperity of a newly admitted State; for it is quite true that men feel deeply their temporary disfranchisement so long as it lasts. It is to be seen of all how richly the wisdom and courage of the Federal Congress have been rewarded by the marvelous growth of the Union under its Territorial policy.

The rights and equities of Idaho in the matter of present admission to statehood have been made plain to view. The precepts of statesmen and the precedents of state-manship are all on her side. She can neither be denied nor delayed without the exercise of an invidious discrimination altogether indefensible. There are no principles of public policy, no precedents of party action, to excuse or condone her exclusion if it should be effected.

Idaho, in its material embodiment, is large enough, rich enough, and prolific enough to serve as a theater for the activities of a great American community for more centuries than mortal beings are warranted to think or dream about. Partly by her common inheritance in the beneficent forces of nature and partly by a bountiful endowment, all her own, she is able to tender to the custodians of the national welfare every reasonable guaranty and prospect that she will be no laggard in the never-ceasing onward race. Even her soil has been fattened for ages, that the skill and energy of man may fit it to his own further advancement when he shall have become capable for and worthy of the prize.

None can be otherwise than willfully blind to the high rank, character, and promise of Idaho's people, nor the guaranty that their devotion to popular enlightenment affords, who doubts that the Commonwealth of Idaho will always be found armed with a trusty sword and shield for the assertion and defense of American principles and institutions, and always prepared to use those weapons of safety with intelligence and effect. The social condition of this people, their possessions, their connection with other communities, their industries, their finances, and pecuniary ability for the support of the Government, and last, but not least, their eager desire for the political independence which they have earned and are able to maintain, have all been passed in review.

If further argument or entreaty were needed to establish a persuasion in the mind of the National Legislature that Idaho should be admitted to representation therein, the very requirement or necessity for such additional urgency would be proof that the Territory had been singled out for exceptional treatment. To assume such a possibility would be unfair to Congress and to Idaho. The former has never been deaf to the appeals for statehood and the latter has yet had no occasion for doubt in her own case. She is simply waiting upon the public convenience and waiting in confidence as much as in hope. [Applause.]

During the delivery of the foregoing remarks the hammer fell.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GEAR in the chair). The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BAKER. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Idaho may be permitted to continue his remarks and conclude them.

Mr. DORSEY. I will yield whatever time the gentleman may require.

Mr. DUBOIS. I shall not want more than a few minutes longer.

Mr. DORSEY. I yield the gentleman ten minutes.

Mr. DUBOIS resumed and concluded his remarks as above.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Mr. Speaker, I have lived so long under a Territorial form of government, I have been so long subject to the legislative caprices and whims of Congress, I have been so long dominated by a reign almost as bad as reconstruction was at its very worst that I would not on this floor and in this presence, nor would I elsewhere, raise my voice against the admission of any Territory to the Union of States now within the confines of this Republic which produced a constitution republican in form for the approval of Congress. That is not my purpose in taking the floor at this time. Far from it.

But, Mr. Speaker, it is my purpose to say that the people who sent me here have been unfairly and unjustly treated in this regard. It is my purpose to say that the people of the Territory of Arizona, having every qualification for statehood that exists in Wyoming or Idaho, or Montana or Washington, or in any one of the Territories, complain that that Territory is unjustly treated in being kept out of the Union and in being kept under Territorial degradation; and this, too, with a population larger, with a wealth greater than either Wyoming or Idaho, simply because she has seen fit and proper to send a Democrat to represent her in the Congress of the United States.

It is, I repeat, unfair treatment, and, Mr. Speaker, I but voice the Republican sentiment of my Territory in that assertion. It is unmanly treatment to force my people and the people of New Mexico, which has a population larger than the Territories of Wyoming and Idaho combined—I say it is unmanly and unfair that these should be denied statehood while those are accorded admittance. Wyoming and Idaho are received into the Union, but I am, by your partisan action, forced to go back to my people and tell them that, although they possess all the qualifications necessary for statehood, yet they made a serious mistake in sending a man here to represent them who happened to be a Democrat, for I am free to confess that I can not see any other reason for such treatment of my people at the hands of the dominant party of this House.

But, Mr. Speaker, I will go further. I had assurances from Republican members of the committee that my Territory would be reported favorably with the others. But from some unknown source, for some reason yet unexplained (and I will wait patiently for an explanation if any member of the Committee on Territories of this House wants to make one), for some reason unexplained and yet unknown to me, from some voice reaching the committee unheard by me, my Territory, with a population as large as the others, has been kept in the Committee on the Territories, and, I believe is now, by some equally strange and unexplained reason, referred to a subcommittee for further action. There was no reason for such reference. The full committee had already been placed in full possession of the facts. There was no such delaying reference made in the case of Wyoming or Idaho. Yet my case, or, more strictly speaking, the case of my people, has been relegated to a subcommittee and it is kept there, Mr. Speaker, as far as I can see, without reason, except such as may be explained in the hope of partisan advantage; and I am to go home to my people, who sent me here for the purpose, if possible, of securing statehood for them—I am to be sent back to them and have the taunt, the unjust taunt, thrown in my face that "You did not use the exertion and the energy which was used by the other Delegates on the floor of the House of Representatives; for if you had you would have received the same kind treatment, the same gracious consideration from Congress that the others received." In response to this I ask this House, has the Committee on the Territories met once since I arose from a sick-bed in January last, without my asking to be heard on Arizona's claims to recognition? Was it not accorded me after a report on both of the other Territories, and did not I lay convincing facts before the committee, which failed to convince any save the minority?

Mr. Speaker, this morning it struck me that there was peculiar suggestiveness in the fact that the divine favor was not asked at the beginning of the proceedings of the House. It seemed to me that an injustice was contemplated, and God's favor was not asked. [Laughter and applause.] Why was it? Was it a coincidence—

Mr. STRUBLE. That is a Democratic coincidence, is it not?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. No; Democrats had nothing to do with it. They never fail to invoke divine blessings on legislative acts, and sincerely desiring, as I did, the prosperity and happiness of my people I was much in hope that the Speaker of the House himself would invoke the divine aid for Arizona. [Laughter and applause.]

It reminded me, gentlemen—and I believe I agree with the child who, with its parents, was going to take a permanent western trip (perhaps you have heard it). The child, after offering its invocation to the blessed throne and concluding the prayer, pathetically said, "Good-by, God; we are going to Arizona in the morning." [Laughter and applause.] And I think that is just about what the Republican committee has done its best to say to me: "Good-by, SMITH; you are going to Arizona to stay, simply because you are a Democrat." [Renewed laughter.]

Gentlemen, this treatment is not fair. If you knew the promptings of this people, if you knew their desire, if you knew their burdens, if you had, with me, for ten long years borne what you could of their burdens and suffered with them as they have suffered, you would not permit a mere question of population to settle their right to statehood. It should not be a question of party domination in House or Senate, but a question upon which men should rise to a high constitutional standpoint, far above political parties, and act on the higher plane of American statesmanship and American manhood. It is the right of freemen, it is the right of republican government, a right which belongs to a people who pay taxes (and my people bear their burdens of the government equally with any other portion of the country), for which I here contend. Why, then, is Arizona left out? Does any one know? Why are my people to be branded with disgraceful Territorial servitude and New Mexico to be likewise branded, while blessed Wyoming and Idaho are to be admitted? Action on these great problems should not be one-sided or partisan.

Mr. Speaker, I do not desire it to be understood that I am making complaint because of Idaho's admission, for if I had a hundred votes I would cast each and every one of them for the admission of both Wyoming and Idaho under proper constitutions, and I would not let politics affect my action. It matters not to me whether their people be Protestant or Catholic, Jew or Gentile, Greek or Scythian; if they have the qualifications for statehood they are entitled under the Constitution to State government. My people have the qualifications, and I shall demonstrate it in a very few moments by comparison with Idaho, which you will admit to-morrow as a State. And in this comparison you will please remember that Idaho far exceeds Wyoming in population as well as resources. You have already voted favorably on Wyoming.

Now, let us look fairly at the facts. Will any one of the Republican members of the Committee on Territories (and I will wait for any one) answer the question, and give me an explanation, any one, from the chairman down to the last man put on it, why New Mexico, with double the population (I believe more than double) either of the Territories of Idaho or Wyoming, one already passed the House and the other to pass to-morrow—why New Mexico, with a population of more than double, with wealth double, with settlements and homes anchored in the soil three times what either of them have, is denied statehood, while they are granted it? Arizona, producing more than Wyoming in every single line that I have been able to find from looking at every report, is retarded in her aspirations and Wyoming is encouraged in hers? Is it because poor Mr. JOSEPH got started wrong in his early life and became a Democrat? [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side.]

Gentlemen, is this the way the Fiftieth Congress acted with Washington and the two Dakotas? Did not Democrats come to the rescue? Can I expect Republicans outside of the committee to help me get a report out of the Committee on Territories? Would not fourteen or fifteen gentlemen on that side help me, as they were helped in the dividing of Dakota, and bringing in the two Republican States of North and South Dakota, and admitting Washington, a well known Republican State, and Montana, which, as every man of information knew, was doubtful? Yet we are kept back. No reason is assigned. My friend from New York [Mr. BAKER], with his smiling countenance and rotund form, did say that after Wyoming was disposed of Arizona would receive due consideration, and he thought she was entitled to it.

Mr. BUCKALEW. In due time, he said.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Yes, he said that in due time it would receive consideration; and I hope he will adhere to it, but I fear that he will let four years—the usual statute of limitations—run if he does not change his peculiar way of giving due consideration in due time to a Democratic Territory.

Now, gentlemen, let us look sensibly and reasonably at this matter. To be understood, I repeat again and again, that I am heart and soul for Idaho and Wyoming being admitted into the Union with proper constitutions. Now, I want to ask gentlemen opposed to the admission of Arizona and New Mexico to tell me why we are not equally entitled to admission with Wyoming and Idaho.

Mr. STRUBLE. I wish to say right here that the gentleman knows very well that this is not the time to answer such a question as that.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Yes, it is. This is the very time.

Mr. STRUBLE. He knows very well that it will take at least one hour to make an exhibit of the reasons why New Mexico ought not to be admitted into this Union.

Mr. SHIVELY. It will take more time than that to tell why that Territory has been so treated.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Give him an hour.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. It would take a month.

Mr. STRUBLE. And I say here that the gentleman is not doing himself or his Territory very great service in reflecting upon the action of the Republican party because an answer is not made to a question of that kind now.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. You could have answered it in the time you have been on the floor if it could have been answered at all. Why do you postpone the answer? Your side has plenty of time to answer it in.

Mr. STRUBLE. But not properly now.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Then let us have an answer at the proper time.

Mr. Speaker, the facts as they exist in relation to these Territories have not been thoroughly understood.

Mr. PERKINS. I ask the gentleman from Arizona why the Democratic committee of the last House did not report a bill for the admission of Arizona.

Mr. SPRINGER. It did report one.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. It did report one, if you please. It was not partisan. It was patriotic. It was not blinded by prejudice, nor was it deaf to the voice of justice. That Democratic Congress not only admitted three known Republican Territories, but went further and reported a bill in the form of an enabling act for Wyoming, Idaho, New Mexico, and Arizona.

Mr. PERKINS. I asked one of the members, and he did not so inform me.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. It did so report, whether you were so informed or not.

Mr. PERKINS. Why did it not bring it up for consideration?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Because it could not.

Mr. PERKINS. Why could you not, when you had the majority?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Because we had unfortunate rules that we could not "do business" under against the will of the minority. [Laughter.]

Mr. KELLEY. That is an honest confession.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. But we can now do so, your way, only. [Laughter.]

Mr. BAKER. If my friend will allow me, was there any disposition on the part of the Democratic side of the House to admit Arizona during the last Congress; and was not there a disposition to force in New Mexico before that Territory had fairly asked consideration for herself?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. In answer to the first inquiry, I say yes, there was such disposition. In answer to the second, I say emphatically no. New Mexico twelve years ago was voted in as a State by the Republican party. If competent then, why incompetent now?

Mr. BAKER. She is coming in.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Then, if she is coming in and if Arizona is to come in, we are on pleasant grounds again; there will be no further trouble between me and my excitable friend from Iowa [Mr. STRUBLE].

Mr. STRUBLE. It is merely a little plain talk. That is all.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Yes, that is what I am, as usual, indulging in. I want now a little plain action. If it was just talk only, I would not care. Action is what I have been praying for and working for, but non-action meets me in this committee. I am not arraigning gentlemen personally. I am not asserting that the Committee on Territories has been indecently and outrageously unfair. I do not say that, because, you know, it might not be parliamentary; and another reason is because I might expect some sort of favor from that committee hereafter, even in the discouraging light of what it has signally failed to do in behalf of those who sent me here.

Mr. DORSEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DORSEY. Is the gentleman from Arizona discussing the question under consideration? [Cries of "Oh!" "Oh!"]

Mr. SHIVELY. The gentleman from Arizona is giving us a very interesting argument.

The SPEAKER. It is very difficult to state what are arguments for or against a bill. [Laughter.]

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I think the Speaker is exactly right, for I have listened to all these arguments about admission and I am from them thoroughly convinced of the correctness of the Speaker's statement. [Laughter.] I thought of raising the same point against the gentleman, but I saw he was not hurting anybody.

Mr. STRUBLE. Well, we know you are in favor of admission.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Yes, all here know I am.

But to return: The population of Arizona in 1880 by the national census was 40,000; the population of Idaho was 32,619. The registered vote of Arizona in 1888 was 16,230; the vote for Delegate in Idaho in 1888 was 16,013. The area in square miles of Arizona is 113,929; the area in Idaho is 86,234. The forest acreage of Arizona is 20,000,000—a thing unknown to this House—20,000,000 acres of land of as fine forest as there is in the world; yet this is called an arid country, with nothing in it, nothing but sand-hills and waste and sage-brush. Yet there stands within it the largest body of untouched timber to-day on this continent; and by the way, our people have not the right to touch it. If they want to build a church to worship the living God they must send to Oregon to get the lumber at $35 per thousand feet, when trees are growing within a hundred miles of them as fine as grace the earth.

Those 20,000,000 acres of forest alone stands a guaranty to Congress of Arizona's power and willingness to take care of herself. Idaho has only 10,000,000 acres.

Take, now, the assessed property of these Territories, which I estimate at about one-third or one-quarter of the actual value. In 1889 Arizona had, by the figures taken from the county tax-lists, $30,000,000; Idaho, $24,000,000. The estimated values are: Arizona, $95,000,000; Idaho, $68,000,000.

The bullion output of 1887 was: Arizona, $10,751,555; Idaho, $9,000,000. I have not the figures for Arizona for 1889; but it is safe and honest for me to say that, in my opinion, Idaho has far outstripped her in the product of the mine in that period if the Idaho returns are correct. That discrepancy may have resulted from some great discovery of rich mines in Idaho. I do not know the exact reason; but I see from the report that Idaho has made the marvelous output of $17,000,000 from her mines during the past year. How these figures were obtained I do not know. Whether they are accurate or not I do not know.

The cattle of Arizona are estimated at 1,150,000, and by the same estimate, which is derived from the tax-lists of the various counties in the Territory, I find that Idaho has less than 1,000,000. Of sheep we have 1,390,000; Idaho, 900,000. The figures in the report of the Department of Agriculture are taken, I presume, from the tax-lists of the various counties, and when you gentlemen understand that these herds of cattle roam over an area of hundreds of miles, that there are sometimes 15,000 or 20,000 in a herd, and that the tax-gatherer has no earthly means of knowing the exact number, but must take what is given him, you will readily understand that the real number is probably greatly understated. In the county where I live we know that the figures do not represent over one-third of the actual number. But, taking the figures as representing one-third, the report of the Department of Agriculture shows cattle in Arizona 698,000; in Idaho, 480,000.

Comparing railroads, we have 1,097 miles in Arizona, with some 150 or 200 miles more under construction, while Idaho has 888 miles by the last report, and no further lines under contract.

Now, gentlemen, it seems to me that the proper thing to have done at the outset with these four Territories, so similar, so much alike, so nearly equal in the resources they claim, was to bring in an "omnibus bill," in which each one could have been treated at the same time with the same justice you now accord Wyoming and Idaho. We all know that this House will get busy after the admission of Idaho and have no time for Arizona. [Laughter.] Do not we all know it? Is there a man here who disputes that very patent fact? When I get my report for the admission of Arizona, as I know I shall get it, from the Committee on Territories, what is going to be the result? I am going to get the bill on the Calendar, and then the House is going to be too busy to consider it.

Mr. BAKER. My friend ought to understand that under the rules of the House bills for the admission of States have precedence. They can be reported and moved along at any time.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I am aware of that, my friend; but these rules to which you refer happen to be so constructed that the majority of the committee as well as the majority of the House can "do business" in aid of the majority. If you will permit me to paraphrase a statement of the Speaker in one of his celebrated rulings, I would say that "action" for the Republican party and "non-action" for the Democratic party "is the function of the House."

Yes, I know that these bills for admission of States have precedence under the rules, but that preference can not be given effect by my motion. I can not make the motion. I can not press the question. If Arizona were properly represented I could, and it would be very delightful for me to do it. Under present conditions I can not even vote when the question comes up. I could not vote when Silcott was leaving the country with all my money. [Laughter.] What am I to do when you are running off with or running over all my rights?

Mr. STRUBLE. Well, you can take your money when it comes.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Oh, I can do that with as much expert grace as any man you ever saw. [Laughter.]

But earnestly, gentlemen, if I get from the Committee on Territories a report in favor of the admission of Arizona, as I hope against hope I shall, all I ask is that this House will take up the bill and pass it and admit her under my enabling act to the Union. I am in favor of the admission of Idaho, and, as I have already said, I have made these suggestions for no other purpose than to call the attention of this House and of my people at home to the fact that whatever could be done toward the admission of Arizona I have attempted in my poor way to do. I do not want to go home and I do not intend to go home and have it truthfully said to me or of me that I stood here a laggard in the race for statehood. [Applause.]

I have done my best, and every man on the committee knows it, and I can only now express my earnest hope that when the Committee on Territories shall report a bill for the admission of Arizona as a State of this Union she will receive the same proper, prompt, and adequate action that has characterized your conduct in the case of Wyoming. I hope for that. That is what ought to be done.

Mr. Speaker, it is an outrage to keep out of this Union a State containing 100,000 of as well educated people as are to be found within the borders of this broad land, a people with less illiteracy and with as much patriotic devotion to the country and as much ability to take care of themselves as can be found in any equal number of people in any other part of the Union. Yet those people are kept out of the Union, are kept in disgraceful servitude, while this Congress legislates about their affairs without consulting them. Bills are introduced and considered here affecting the interests of the people of Arizona that have never been asked for by them, bills which, if passed, will ruin or greatly damage them.

Such bills, I say, are introduced and pressed here, and I am not consulted about them nor even so much as notified as to who introduced them or when it was done. But I ought to say that this has not occurred, so far as I know, in the Committee on Territories, and my remarks on this point do not apply to the members of that committee, for I have always received the most graceful attention at their hands when I have been before them, but am sorry to say that my importunate eloquence had no effect further than to secure their graceful attention. I know in this matter they did not do what I asked of them, but why they did not I forbear an attempt to explain.

Now, I repeat that I took the floor on this occasion for no other purpose than to call the attention of the House and the attention of the country, and the attention of my people at home to the fact that I have been doing and that I am doing all I can do to secure the admission of our Territory as a State; that I am pleading for that in and out of season; that I am working day and night to secure for Arizona the justice which her sister Territories, with equal or with less claims, are receiving from this Congress. That is all I ask. I know that we can rise here, or ought to rise, above any question of party in these matters, and I think we shall do so.

All that I claim for the people of Arizona is the constitutional right to vote on the taxes which they have to bear, the constitutional right to local self-government. If these other Territories are entitled to statehood Arizona is likewise; and the mistake of this Congress, the mistake of the last Congress, and the mistake of every Congress since twelve years ago, when New Mexico was voted into the Union by both Houses, has been that they did not treat the Territories as they deserved to be treated; that they did not facilitate and encourage their admission as States of this Union. You have not advanced them as they should have been advanced; you have not helped to encourage in their hour of need those struggling people. Now they have grown in strength. They feel and know that they can bear on their own shoulders their own burdens. We ask of Congress simply to give as law the enabling act which I have introduced.

Let us bear our own burdens; let us run for ourselves the race of life; throw off the handicap; give us a fair chance, and we will show you that the State of Arizona will yet rise to be a great, almost unbounded land, of the pleasantest homes, of the most patriotic people, that the sun in all its course ever smiled upon.

Our demands are not those of a hostile people. Four-fifths of our adult population were born and have resided amid the same influences and civilization that surround you. They represent the rugged strength and dauntless courage and inflexible patriotism of all the States. They are as brave as they are strong, and when the nation yet may need defenders it is certain that the contingent from Arizona can be relied upon "for everything that man can do in the way of toil or dare in the way of danger."

Mr. Speaker, these men for whom I speak are your kindred by the ties of a common country and by the closer ties of blood. In behalf of these and for the recognition of their right to the liberties enjoyed by you, I appeal to your sense of justice in the same spirit in which our fathers prayed redress of English wrongs, and, using the language of their petition, I beg of you to "listen to the voice of justice and clemency."

This appeal is prompted by no personal ambition, is actuated by no hope of personal aggrandizement, but it is simply the reflection of the sentiments of those who commissioned me to speak for them here.

True, the Committee on Territories has been informed by several self-constituted ambassadors from Arizona that the people of that Territory did not desire statehood. Prominent among these was the present governor, whose term of office is lengthened or shortened by the action the committee may take on the enabling act which I have introduced. Statehood for Arizona means his descent from the high office which he now holds.

In answer to his assertions, I submit, first, that the press of the Territory, regardless of politics, favor my enabling act. Second, the representatives of the people convened in General Assembly at its last session passed an act providing for a constitutional convention. By the terms of the act the governor was directed to make the call by proclamation for the election of delegates to such convention. This bill passed both houses and received the sanction of the then governor. It was thus the law of the land which all were bound to respect.

Just at this time Governor Wolfley's appointment was confirmed by the United States Senate. He came on from Washington and began to review the acts of the Legislature. He immediately deemed this particular act unwise and violated public conception of his duty by refusing to see that the laws were "faithfully executed," and outraged the people by refusing to issue the proclamation required of him by law. Yet he comes before members of the committee and asserts that Arizona does not want statehood. He did not represent the people in such action any more than he represents their choice as governor.

I think, under such circumstances, the majority of the Committee on Territories might have given my statement of the desire and wishes of my constituents fully as much weight as was accorded to his. I am sure the committee did do so. I think any volunteer statements by unaccredited representatives had no more effect than to furnish an excuse for the wrong done Arizona in refusing to report this enabling act.

I have no personal controversy with Governor Wolfley. I desire for him a successful administration, and what I have said has been forced on me by his action, and would not even now have been said except to show this House that such statement by the governor was no valid excuse for the non-action of the committee. I am sorry that I met his opposition to this enabling act. I wish he could have seen fit to assure the committee that Arizona desired to have an enabling act passed and give the people an inexpensive vote on the question. At the polls they could say whether or not they desired statehood. It was not for him, but for them, to settle.

It is not for me, nor for you, but for them, to determine. Why not, then, pass the measure for which I am contending and take the people's word as expressed in their ballot? If they do not want statehood they will not have it. They know their own condition. They will see that their wishes are carried out. And as for me, I am happy to assert that their action on this great question will receive my hearty commendation, no matter what their verdict may be. I am contending for their right to act, not suggesting what their course should be. And in this contention I represent no party or clique, no political, religious, or other combine, but the whole people of Arizona, regardless of distinctions or differences, political or otherwise.

My people have made no political question of this matter. They are above it. They love their land of sunshine and silver more than they love party politics. They love their country more than they love candidates. I commend them in this regard as examples worthy the emulation of Congress.

It has been urged that Arizona's debt is large, and therefore she should not be admitted to the Union of States. The debt will remain until paid, whether we be Territory or State. Kept down by a condition of dependence, the debt will grow faster than our resources. Given statehood, a rapid increase of population and wealth will follow, our wonderful resources will be speedily developed, and the debt will soon and easily be paid. What is now a grievous burden might then become a light and easy load.

The existence of such a debt is to my mind the strongest possible argument against a Territorial form of government. The existence of such a debt is in a measure due to reckless legislation, but ill advised legislation is not by any means the only reason for it. We have never received one cent of aid from the National Government in any public building. We have built many at great cost from our own means. Court-houses, school-houses, asylums, jails, hospitals, and colleges are necessary adjuncts of modern civilization. We have assumed a large debt in order to maintain charity, preserve order, educate the young, protect the helpless, and aid the infirm, and this very fact is here offered as an argument against our ability to sustain proper government. Is it not rather an assurance that we are eminently able and willing to do it?

The population of Arizona has been urged as insufficient. I admit that we are much below the present ratio of representation in Congress; but so is Idaho and so was Wyoming. A waiver of the objection in the case of these two ought equitably to apply in our case. But that we have a far greater population than many States had at the date of their admission the following table, taken from the report in the Wyoming case, will clearly show. The table, I think, was compiled by the industry of my friend from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY]. It is as follows:

State.	Population when admitted.	State.	Population when admitted.
Ohio.....	45,000	Missouri.....	66,000
Indiana.....	63,000	Oregon.....	45,000
Mississippi.....	35,000	Kansas.....	100,000
Illinois.....	35,000	Nebraska.....	100,000
Alabama.....	40,000	Colorado.....	100,000

The population noted in each instance was based upon an estimate or an imperfect census. It shows an average population of but little above 60,000 for each State. Nearly every State doubled its population in five years after admission.

From the same source I also obtain the following table, showing the votes cast at Presidential elections at different periods in the history of the several States mentioned:

States.	Years after admission.	Votes cast.	Members of Congress.
Tennessee.....	28	20,725	9
Indiana.....	8	15,725	3
Illinois.....	10	8,344	1
Do.....	14	19,576	3
Missouri.....	15	5,192	2
Do.....	19	19,332	2
Mississippi.....	15	5,067	2
Do.....	19	19,067	2
Arkansas.....	4	3,638	1
Do.....	12	11,209	1
Do.....	16	16,888	2
Do.....	19	19,357	2
Michigan.....	23	11,360	1
Louisiana.....	3	18,914	4
Florida.....	7	4,963	1
Do.....	15	7,193	1
Texas.....	3	14,345	1
Do.....	7	15,177	2
Do.....	7	18,647	2
Iowa.....	3	24,303	2
Wisconsin.....	2	39,166	3
Oregon.....	2	12,410	1
Do.....	14	14,649	1
Nebraska.....	2	15,168	1
Do.....	6	26,141	1

Wisconsin Territory at election preceding admission cast 20,318 votes, admitted with two Representatives, and she cast, first Congressional election, 24,600.

Iowa admitted with two Representatives, who were elected with total vote of 20,064.

Kansas cast at second Congressional election after admission 15,272.

Nebraska cast first Congressional election subsequent to admission 14,710.

Colorado cast at election previous to admission 17,100.

California at her first State election, after a most bitter political fight, when the selection of governor, judiciary, and other State officers, including United States Senators, was dependent upon the result, cast only 12,875 votes.

In the great debate over the admission of Oregon and Kansas it was not claimed that more than 10,121 votes had ever been cast in the former, and 13,289 votes in the latter, Territory. The votes rejected as well as those counted were included in these totals.

At almost every Presidential election up to and including that of 1872 there were from three to five States that did not have as many male voters as there were in Wyoming in 1888.

Now let us proceed to a comparison of the actually assessed valuation of property of several States shortly after admission. I am indebted to Mr. CAREY, of Wyoming, for the following facts:

State.	Assessed wealth.	State.	Assessed wealth.
Wisconsin.....	$31,200,000	Minnesota.....	$32,087,730
Arkansas.....	23,400,000	California.....	13,296,000
Florida.....	13,800,000	Kansas.....	22,506,000
Iowa.....	13,200,000	Wyoming.....	31,509,000
Oregon.....	11,400,000

Arizona has actually on her assessment roll $30,000,000, which is less than one-third of her actual wealth. It is safe, then, in view of our scattered population and large herds of cattle and sheep that can not be definitely listed, our vast wealth in untaxed mines, that we now have more than double the property that any of the foregoing States possessed at the time of their admission to the Union.

Now, Mr. Speaker, as I said in my argument before the Committee on Territories when an enabling act for Arizona was under discussion, "I can see no reason in the world, from the showing made, why any one of these four Territories should be refused admission to the Union as a State. I think New Mexico is largely ahead of the others in developed wealth, and certainly largely ahead of any in population. But why any distinction should be made between Idaho, Wyoming, and Arizona is inexplicable to me. Why should one be taken and another left? There is no earthly reason why all should not be taken in together, and for the life of me I can not see why we should not provide a bill for an enabling act, passing a law allowing them all to come in together. There is no use in keeping them standing out in this way. It is wearying to them and to Congress."

Arizona is superior to any of your new-made States in natural resources and only requires fair treatment in order to illustrate her boundless possibilities. On her silver-ribbed mountains and verdant valleys, in the hushed stillness of her primeval forests, "God's hand has written the charter" of her ultimate imperial supremacy.

I appeal to the Committee on Territories and to Congress to give an enabling act to these people. Relieve her from "a system of courts which are inherently wrong and which never can be made suitable" to rapidly developing conditions. Give her people a chance to say whether or not they desire to govern themselves or prefer to be governed by officers selected at the dictates of politicians who never saw the Territory or felt an emotion or impulse in common with her citizens. I am not forecasting their conclusion on the question of statehood, but, knowing them, I can make a reasonably fair guess as to their course.

In portraying the tribulations incident to Territorial vassalage I can do no better, nor can any man do better, than to repeat what was said in the Fiftieth Congress by the present governor of Montana in advocacy of Montana's right to statehood. In his picture of our wrongs he very truthfully showed what Congress has done for the Territories:

"It has regulated the number of our judges, which is grossly inadequate in every instance, resulting in the delay, and in many cases the denial of justice.

"It has arbitrarily fixed the time when our local Legislature shall meet and adjourn, to our great damage and inconvenience.

"It has reserved the right to invalidate any law which our Legislature may pass, thereby destroying that full faith and credit which our legislation ought to command.

"It has bound us hand and foot by a law which restricts these growing and ambitious communities in the expenditure of money for public improvements.

"It has declared what we shall teach in our public schools, and manifested a lack of confidence in us in other instances of legislation too numerous to mention.

"It has attempted to stifle our industries by prohibiting us from selling our mining properties in foreign markets, thus laying upon us an embargo not borne by citizens of the States.

"It has exempted a railroad and the improvements on its right of way for 820 miles in length from taxation, furnishing another evidence of the gross inequality of citizenship in and out of the Territories.

"It has withheld from us our dower of lands which belong to our school fund and refuses to give to us any kind of supervision or control over it until we become a State, and then sets deliberately to work to prolong the time when that event shall happen.

"It has professed to give us a representative in the lower House of Congress, but denies to us a vote, the only element of representation which gives character or influence to a Member.

"It has left us without any kind of representation in the Senate and remits us to the beggarly methods of the lobbyists.

"It has imposed upon us, with an iron hand, the obligations and burdens of citizenship, while it withholds its corresponding benefits by steadily denying to us participation in the framing of Federal legislation and the right of suffrage in national elections.

"It has refused to appropriate the salaries provided by law for the hungry officials whom it has been pleased to send us, and compels them to accept a measly sum in full compensation, notwithstanding an overflowing Treasury.

"It has refused to appropriate sufficient money to extend the public surveys in the Territories, but has doled out annually its dribblets, which have oftentimes been covered back into the Treasury, leaving our boundaries undefined and our titles insecure.

"It has failed to cause to be surveyed, selected, and conveyed to the grantees the lands falling to railroad grants in the Territories, as required by law, whereby millions of acres of land owned by rich corporations escape taxation.

"It has persistently refused to pass laws by which timber or timber lands in the Territories (except Washington) may be leased or purchased, professing, however, to give the right to actual settlers to cut and remove the same for domestic purposes, while it has hedged in this privilege with an odious and impracticable system of rules and regulations which has resulted in harassing our citizens with expensive civil and criminal proceedings based wholly upon the ex parte statements of a crouching and obsequious special agent or spy, who has been taught to believe that his term of office will be measured by the extent of his activity in stirring up strife.

"It has, by the organization of these Territories, invited settlement and occupancy of the frontier upon the promise and obligation that our persons and property should be protected against depredations by hostile Indians. These promises have been honored more in the breach than in the observance. The history of our early settlement is red with the blood of the pioneers who blazed the trails of civilization in these remote lands by the lurid light of their burning homes, which went down in ashes before the merciless savage. Millions of dollars of unpaid claims, mildewed by age, growing out of these atrocities, are piled up in the Departments, while the heroes of those troublous times, overcome with the weight of years and no longer able to conquer their feelings, have gone to join the silent majority, leaving destitute widows and orphans to keep alive before Congress the memory of their trials and tribulations. Verily the cruelty of Congress cuts as keenly as the scalping-knife or the tomahawk."

Is it any wonder, then, Mr. Speaker, that I find difficulty in restraining the expression of indignation at any attempt by anybody for any purpose to prevent the people who sent me here from having a fair chance by their votes to inform Congress whether or not they are tired of this, whether or not they want a change, whether or not they want a voice in the selection of those who are to execute the law, whether or not they want a voice in the enactment of laws under which they are to survive or perish.

This is all I ask for them; it should be speedily accorded. Short of that you outrage justice. I am not ready to believe that you will intentionally do that. I have great confidence in the sense of justice which usually does, and always should, actuate the chosen Representatives of the American people. I invoke it now. I know that the thousand varied duties devolving on us here render it impossible for each to act intelligently on every bill presented for consideration, and you all are forced to rely largely on the findings and reports of committees to which was specially delegated the duty of investigation. This fact of necessity defeats many proper measures and passes some bad ones. But these mistakes are incident to every large legislative body and in the shortcomings of human wisdom can not be avoided.

But, sirs, you can avoid injustice in this case. Forget party politics, look unprejudiced to the rights of men and see that their rights are respected, and a proper enabling act will be passed whereby the people of Arizona can express their will to Congress.

I had intended to express somewhat my views on the constitutions presented here by both Wyoming and Idaho, and to call the attention of the House to what appear to me objectionable and unrepugnant features appearing in each. But the question has been so worthily presented by abler men than I that nothing which I could say would influence or entertain the House. I can not, however, forbear recording my objection to a constitutional provision conferring female suffrage and I equally oppose any purely sectarian or, if you please, church legislation. It is well enough and very proper to prescribe and punish crime, but very dangerous to prescribe and punish opinions or creeds or faiths.

The constitution of Idaho, in my opinion—granting proper sectarian supremacy in the State—can prevent a Presbyterian or a Catholic from voting. All good Presbyterians and all good Catholics and, in fact, all other Christians believe the law of God superior to an unjust law of man and more deserving obedience. The constitution of Idaho says that all persons who belong to any organization, order, society, or association "which teaches or advises that the laws of this State prescribing rules of civil conduct are not the supreme law of the State * * * shall neither vote, serve as jurors, nor hold any civil office." Suppose the law of the State should prescribe bigamy, then every member of every church or society which taught that such law was not supreme would be disfranchised.

I repeat, it is a dangerous constitutional provision and may reach further, under fanaticism, than the builders ever designed. The legislature, not the constitutional convention, should determine the qualification of electors.

With these brief suggestions of change in the proposed constitutions, I am, as I have already repeatedly said, heart and soul in favor of the admission of all these candidates for statehood. In my judgment, obedience to the law, not opinion of the law, should determine the question of guilt.

Now, in conclusion, Mr. Speaker, these people of the Territories should have fair, impartial treatment at the hands of Congress. Their wishes should have respectful consideration. They should be kept no longer under guardianship than is absolutely necessary to their welfare and happiness. In my heart of hearts I beg for my people fair and impartial treatment at the hands of this Congress. I ask nothing more. I thank the House cordially for its considerate attention. [Applause.]

Mr. CHIPMAN. Mr. Speaker, I agree entirely with the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] that it would have been better if all four of the Territories mentioned by him had been put into one bill and submitted to our consideration. I can see no reason—I never have, since I have been in Congress, seen any reason—why either New Mexico or Arizona should not be admitted to the sisterhood of States. As compared with the Territory of Wyoming and with the Territory of Idaho, they have all the elements which entitle them to admission. If there is any objection to New Mexico, it is an objection which applies to it in common, as it would seem, with the Territory of Idaho.

What has been urged against New Mexico is the character of her population. If the extraordinary provision concerning suffrage in the sixth article of the constitution now before us is justified by the facts, it shows that there is an improper population in Idaho, a population in numbers so great as to be a menace to the prosperity of the State, a population which, upon the hypothesis of this clause in the constitution, is hostile to our institutions and unfit to take part in the government. This is the argument which has been urged against New Mexico. It is the only argument which I have ever heard against it, and it now stands, if I am correctly informed, as a barrier against a bill being reported to the House for the admission of that Territory.

But, sir, I would not upon any political ground oppose the admission of any Territory into the Union. My political brethren will bear me witness that in the last Congress I was an advocate for the admission of all the Territories, and that in our party councils I asserted, what I now repeat, that it is impossible to exact any pledge of party fealty from a State prior to its admission—not only impossible, but wrong and unpatriotic in every way in which you can view it. I believe that it is best—best for the country—to get rid of these Territorial governments, and it is infinitely best for the people of a Territory themselves to enjoy the rights and privileges of statehood.

Yet while I feel in this way I can not forget that the Constitution of the United States imposes upon us the duty of guarantying a republican form of government to the States which constitute the members of the Union. "What is a republican form of government?" would open a wide range of discussion. There are republics and there are republics—republics which in our view utterly fall short of the true definition of a commonwealth of that nature. And our own Republic, even in the estimation of many of the best thinkers, does not contain that popular freedom which constitutes the ideal of a truly democratic state.

But I think I may say safely that no government is republican in form which makes oppressive distinctions between the citizens of a State. A government which in its policy, in its constitution and laws, distinguishes oppressively against one class of citizens and in favor of another falls far short of the model which we set before us as the true one of republican institutions.

This is especially true of distinctions which impair in any way a proper enjoyment of the elective franchise. That franchise is the very breath of republican institutions. Manhood suffrage is the very body of liberty.

The American people have adopted this as a faith, and though nowhere expressed in so many words in any of our constitutions, I think I am fully justified in saying that it may be considered as a sort of natural right, because it is the only method which the world has yet discovered by which a full and perfect liberty may be maintained for the people.

The report of the majority on this bill seems to treat manhood suffrage as a mere political right. It undoubtedly is such a right; but it bears the same relation to freedom as the right to pray and to preach bears to the full exercise of the religion in which we believe. And just so far as men are unjustly debarred from exercising it, just so far are they debarred from a full enjoyment of self-government.

I admit, Mr. Speaker, that there ought to be disabilities to vote. It is not wise to permit every one to exercise this great right. I know of no State in the Union, I can conceive of no civilized State, which would allow every one to exercise it. I certainly have no particular objection to the disqualifications prescribed in section 3 of article 6 of this constitution proposed for the State of Idaho. Almost all the States in the Union have disabilities of this kind; but in almost every one of them they are clearly defined, and not only are they clearly defined, but the method of ascertaining them and of applying them as a barrier to the exercise of the elective franchise is explicitly set forth.

This constitution prescribes two classes of disabilities; and in my judgment it prescribes two different ways of ascertaining whether a citizen is subject to them. First, there are those disabilities which arise from conviction in a court of justice; and the ascertainment of such a disability is, by the very nature of the language, referred to the action of a court, making it dependent upon the prior action of a judicial tribunal, as in the case of persons under guardianship and persons convicted of certain offenses.

As to the second class, no method of ascertainment is prescribed en nomine, but the matter is plainly left to the discretion of the Legislature and the election officers. This class embraces idiots, insane persons, persons in prison, every person who is a bigamist or polygamist or is living in patriarchal, spiritual, or plural marriage, and so on. The last clause of the provision supposed to refer to the Mormons embraces persons who are excluded because they belong to an organization which teaches and advises that the laws of the State prescribing rules of civil conduct are not the supreme law.

In this second class of disabilities no reference is made to convictions whatever. There is nothing in the proposed constitution on that subject. Everything is left in this important, in this most precious, matter to the citizen, to the will of the legislator.

The provision in regard to membership of organizations which teach or advise that the laws prescribing rules of civil conduct are not the supreme law of the land is of a very grave nature.

I do not say that it is intended to trench upon religion; I do not say it is meant to interfere between a man and his God; but I do say that it has a broad latitude, a latitude so great that in times of popular passion it may embrace within its fold many and many an organization, spiritual or temporal, which to-day we have no idea can be subject to it. Wrong ideas grow. It is not the prerogative of good alone to thrive.

Why, Mr. Speaker, it is only a few years ago that that great and beneficent order, the Masonic body, was attacked from one end of the country to the other as being hostile to the freedom of the country and as setting itself above courts and above the laws themselves. There is another body, a church, venerable with years, noted for its learning, for the great good it has done in the world, and for buttressing civilization against paganism, against which this very reproach is made, a church which like the Masonic body denies the truth of that reproach and denounces it as a calumny invented by its enemies. And yet I can imagine, and any man on this floor can imagine, in times of high excitement, especially of high religious excitement, excitement the most unreasonable, the most vindictive to which the human mind can be subject—I can imagine that in such times men might become so frenzied by prejudice and fear that even the very convent fires which were the shame of Boston may be relighted and sectarian hate rule men with savage power.

Why, even the Savior of mankind was accused of setting up and teaching a religion which claimed to be superior to the state. The histories of your race and the histories of all religions are crowded with thumb-screws, racks, scaffolds, and the fires in which men have been tortured or destroyed because accused of making this very claim; men who we now see in the clear, calm light of history were done to death unjustly, as they were treated cruelly and barbarously while living. While error is multiform, its essence is the same.

And it is only just to say of this Mormon Church that it denies the imputation that it essays to overturn the law.

Shall it be honored with the cross or martyred at the stake? Shall its adherents, deluded though they are, be robbed of the hearing in the courts we give to every class of criminals? Shall their rights as citizens be determined by less solemn methods than your rights and mine? Shall a mere election board have power to ostracize, to disfranchise a citizen and their finding of the facts be conclusive on the courts? This may be done under this constitution, and—

Mr. STRUBLE. Is it within the recollection of the gentleman that any court in this land has ever held as to either of these societies or to any except the Mormon Church that it was a criminal organization?

Mr. CHIPMAN. No, sir; I do not remember anything of that kind. But I do not see the pertinency of the question.

Mr. STRUBLE. Is not the gentleman aware that one court in Utah and another in Idaho have held to that effect as to the Mormon Church?

Mr. CHIPMAN. Now, what else do you want to ask? Ask your question and then sit down.

Mr. STRUBLE. Are you not aware of such a decision having been rendered by judges of your own party?

Mr. CHIPMAN. Party! What do I care for party? [Applause.] We are discussing the rights of the people. We are discussing a grave question of elemental right; but the gentleman talks of party. It is party when you try to pension soldiers. It is party when you essay to give any laws to the people. It is party when we seek to protect the sanctity of the franchise. [Applause.] I think nothing of party. I care nothing for party in this discussion. I am making no attack on your party. I am making no attack on you, and you will please sit down and let me go on.

Mr. STRUBLE rose.

Mr. CHIPMAN. Take your seat.

But let us go another step, Mr. Speaker. What have these decisions to do with the controversy which is pending here? If the gentleman is no better lawyer than his question implies, if he has no more idea of the force of authority than his question illustrates, I feel very sorry for him indeed. [Laughter.]

What I am contending is not that the courts have not decided it, nor that polygamy is not a crime, but that the constitution you bring here silences the courts, the true refuge of all our rights and the only certain asylum against oppression and corruption. That is my contention.

But the gentleman answers me that somewhere in the country, somewhere else, the very thing has been done which I contend ought to be done under this instrument which you bring here and ask us to vote for. I suppose the answer will be that this clause of the constitution does not execute itself, that it can not execute itself. Although I am not entirely certain how far that is true, I am certain that in one sense it does execute itself. In one sense it prohibits the recourse to the courts.

It does that not only by what it says, but by what it does not say. It provides in what case you shall go the courts, and it makes provision by which a person having a certain belief or doing a certain act shall, without the intervention of a court, be disfranchised. In the case of guardianship, in the case of conviction of crime, other provisions apply. In those cases the courts are invoked; but in the case of insanity, which is a condition of body, and also in the case of Indians and Mongolians and of the Mormons, it expressly strikes at the interposition of the courts. I have looked at the provision of this constitution in regard to the jurisdiction of the supreme court, and in my judgment, unless a law is passed very carefully guarded, the entire decision of the facts will rest or may rest with boards of election officers, and so strip the courts of all real jurisdiction.

I believe the gentlemen say that this will not be done. But how do you know it will not be done? How do you know that the strong tide of passion which ingrafted on this constitution so dangerous a provision will not induce the people to pass laws to carry it out in the most severe and obnoxious manner possible? You say it will not be done. I say liberty, the rights of the citizens, public safety, demand that you shall confer no power, give no opportunity to inflict an oppressive rule upon the citizen.

Mr. BAKER. Will the gentleman yield for a suggestion in the shape of a question?

Mr. CHIPMAN. Yes, sir; with great pleasure.

Mr. BAKER. Has the gentleman overlooked the provision in the constitution which meets the point he makes?

Mr. CHIPMAN. What is it?

Mr. BAKER. That a person claiming a right to vote may purge himself of this disqualification by taking the oath.

Mr. SPRINGER. Where is it?

Mr. MANSUR. It is not in the constitution.

Mr. BAKER. The test oath.

Mr. CHIPMAN. I have not found it.

Mr. MANSUR. You can answer it by saying that it is not in the constitution.

Mr. CHIPMAN. I have not seen such a provision.

I have observed, though, I will state to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER], in the majority report of the committee something which they roll as a sweet morsel under their tongue, and bearing about the same relation and potency as authority to the matter at issue as the question of the gentleman over there a short time ago, but which is cited by the committee as conclusive. In the case of a Mr. Davis against a sheriff, suit was brought in Idaho involving the legality of a test oath disclaiming connection with Mormonism, and the Supreme Court held that the oath was a proper and a constitutional requirement. I have no doubt of it; no one doubts it.

But how do we know that the Legislature of Idaho will prescribe a test oath in this case and so give an opportunity of purgation? You say that they probably will. I say that they ought to. But is there no doubt that they will do so? There is none that it should be done; but where is the authority that compels it? Where is the warrant; the surety? Where is the assurance that they will not leave this entire matter to the kind of men whom I will not undertake to characterize here; the men who may compose election boards; the low politicians; the hucksters of public life; the seekers for the little offices; the hangers-on of great men; the mean implements of base ambitions; the general doers of dirty work throughout the nation?

How do we know, I ask, that it will not be left entirely to these men? In vain is it to say it will not probably be left to them. It may be; and where there is an opportunity for corruption, where in the mad delirium and loose morals of politics there is an opportunity for oppression, you may be as sure that they will appear promptly at the time, when they can do the most good or the most harm that can be done, as that the sun will rise or set.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am not an apologist for Mormonism; but it is very cheap, it is very easy to stand here and rail at it. There is, sir, a demagoguery of virtue just as there is a hypocrisy of religion. The virtue which is performed vicariously is the sweetest in the world to a great many people. I know gentlemen whose virtue consists solely in condemning polygamy and who are sober only by trying to enact laws to keep the poor soldier from getting his beer. [Laughter and applause.]

The world is full of this kind of saints; and to stand here where we have no real potency over the subject, where we are not called upon to act—to stand here and hurl epithets at Mormonism seems to me to be a very mean piece of business. There is no risk, there is no bravery in this kind of talk; there are no votes to be lost by it, and so it is cheap and easy. I condemn Mormonism root and branch. I agree entirely with the framers of this constitution that persons guilty of bigamy and polygamy and of the practices set forth in section 3 of article 6 of the Idaho constitution ought to be disfranchised. But they are human beings, they are American citizens, and I contend for them and in their behalf that they should have the rights of all other citizens. No one of them ought to lose his right to vote unless he is duly convicted.

I contend for them, and not for them alone, but for all citizens, Protestant or Catholic, Jew or Gentile, for the black and the white, for every form of religion, for every form of political belief, that their rights should be judicially ascertained. I know that in the State of Illinois statutes have been passed for the first time in the history of this country making penal certain expressions of opinion. That law may be the outgrowth of a great necessity and be so well guarded that no harm can be done to free speech and legitimate political action, but I tell you gentlemen here to-day that it is a dangerous road to enter upon. It is the road followed by this constitution, and is doubly dangerous because it is in an organic law.

I know the answer will be that by this route you seek to attain certain good. But after all you set a precedent; and all the evil I have ever read of in history comes from evil precedents bent to good uses. It is the exigency of occasions which causes reason to be blind and desperate courses to be pursued. It is from high and holy purposes, often indeed for the preservation of the state itself, that an evil example is set and a rule established which ultimately baptizes the liberties of the people in blood or drowns them in despotism.

Strike Mormonism, if you please; strike it hard; but give it a fair trial. Let the courts condemn it; not irresponsible election officers. Let them condemn the man whose vote you seek to take from him, upon some charge of crime proved by lawful evidence. Let them solemnly by judgment and by record determine that he falls within the law and has committed an offense which takes from him, and ought to take from him, the right of the elective franchise. We can not afford, for the suppression of Mormonism, to introduce into this country a precedent so dangerous. We can not afford to do this clear off in Idaho, even, for that is not so far away but that it may ripen in mischief and be cited in courts and in senates against the liberties of the people. I contend simply for the protection of the law through the judgment of the courts on the conduct of all men. Discrimination made in the very teeth of denials that the accused are subject to them can not fail to be most hurtful and most dangerous. I would blot out Mormonism if I could, but I would not, even to blot out Mormonism, take one step which might impair the freedom of the American people. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. DUBOIS. Will the gentleman allow me a question before he takes his seat?

Mr. CHIPMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. DUBOIS. Do you approve of the Edmunds law?

Mr. CHIPMAN. Oh, my dear sir, we are not discussing the Edmunds law.

Mr. DUBOIS. The Edmunds law disfranchises them without proof.

Mr. CHIPMAN. I would be very glad to hear your views on the Edmunds law.

Mr. DUBOIS. Are you in favor of the Edmunds-Tucker law?

Mr. CHIPMAN. If the Speaker will permit I would like to hear the gentleman's views of the Edmunds law. It has nothing to do with this discussion; but I will not object.

Mr. MANSUR. Under the Edmunds law he is not disfranchised. If a man takes the oath he votes; but you do not permit him to take the oath and vote.

Mr. DUBOIS. We do. I beg your pardon. That case came to the supreme court, and on that issue the man took the oath and voted, and we then convicted him of perjury.

Mr. MANSUR. You misunderstood me. Now, under the constitution you do not permit him to take the oath.

Mr. DUBOIS. I beg your pardon. It is the same law that we have on the statute-books. Now, any man can take the oath and vote. Then we proceed against him for perjury.

Mr. MANSUR. Now, under the statutes you allow him to take the oath and then he votes. Under this constitution you do not grant him that privilege.

Mr. DUBOIS. I beg your pardon. It is identically the same with the statute.

Mr. SPRINGER. The Edmunds-Tucker act allows a man to vote. He must swear that he is not a polygamist or bigamist, and is not guilty of these crimes. Under your bill he must swear, in addition to that, that he does not believe in Mormonism.

Mr. DUBOIS. Why, certainly; but the Edmunds act does not require conviction, which you argue is necessary in every case.

Mr. SPRINGER. I will ask you if you will submit an amendment to allow the Edmunds act to operate in Utah? And if you will we will withdraw our amendment.

Mr. DUBOIS. We will not take that. We propose to extirpate Mormonism, while you propose we shall not.

Mr. SPRINGER. In Utah the Delegate could vote and in Idaho he could not.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I regret that the attractions at Benning's are so great that we are compelled to talk to empty benches rather than to the intelligent members of this House who will be called upon to vote and determine by their votes whether or not the Territory of Idaho shall be admitted as a State. In the time that I consume I shall not enter upon a general discussion of the material resources of Idaho nor of the intelligence and patriotism of her people and their excellent qualifications for the duties and responsibilities of citizenship; nor shall I enter upon a general discussion of the policy that should be respected by Congress concerning the admission of new States into the sisterhood of States. Other members have done that and may do so in the discussion that is to follow. Nor shall I consume any considerable time in answering the criticisms of my friend from Arizona, who is disposed to complain because bills have not been reported by the Committee on Territories providing for the admission of Arizona and New Mexico. I would say to him, as I have said in committee and elsewhere, that I believe each one of these applications for admission should be considered carefully and dispassionately and that each applicant should stand upon its own merits, and, if upon full, fair, and intelligent investigation it was determined that it deserved and was entitled to statehood, it should be admitted. I do not believe now, and I did not believe at the last Congress, in uniting several Territories in one bill and attempting thereby to bring into the sisterhood of States by the strength of one or two Territories another Territory that should not be admitted and that did not possess the qualifications that entitled it to admission. In due time the application of Arizona will be considered; and it is but fair that I should say here, in answer to the criticism of my friend, that he knows, as every member of the Committee on Territories knows, that more than one-half of the gentlemen from Arizona who have appeared before our committee and talked upon the subject of Arizona have argued against its admission.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. If the gentleman will permit me, I will ask him how many Federal officers appeared before the committee with four-year terms before them.

Mr. PERKINS. I am not prepared to say how many of them did, but I am prepared to say that one was the present governor of the Territory of Arizona, who says to the Committee on Territories, as he says to the people of the United States, that, in consequence of the bonded debt of that Territory, in consequence of its involved financial condition, and because of the peculiar conditions that exist there, that Territory ought not to be admitted into the Union at this time.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Will the gentleman allow me there?

Mr. PERKINS. And I can say, sir, that gentlemen who were not office-holders, as I know, but property-holders, leaders of the Territory of Arizona, without any interest except the best interests of that Territory and the best interests of her people, have said to our committee that that Territory ought not to be admitted into the Union as a State.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Will you name him?

Mr. PERKINS. One, for instance, was Mr. Cameron.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Ah, Mr. Cameron!

Mr. PERKINS. The gentleman exclaims "Mr. Cameron!" But that gentleman is a very bright, intelligent citizen of Arizona, who is not an office-holder and who is not concerned in any office in Arizona.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Is he not? I know the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PERKINS] does not want to make a misstatement.

Mr. PERKINS. Of course I do not.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Mr. Cameron holds the most lucrative office in Arizona to-day.

Mr. PERKINS. What is it?

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Clerk of two courts—the district and the Federal court—under an appointment that he will lose the minute the Territory is admitted into the Union as a State, for he could not be elected constable of a precinct. [Laughter.]

Mr. PERKINS. It may do for the gentleman to talk in that way, but, as I said, I do not desire to consume time now in discussing the merits of Arizona. [Laughter on the Democratic side.]

Oh, we will do that, gentlemen, all in good time. We will meet you at the proper time, and you will probably have all the opportunity you desire of discussing these questions to your satisfaction and to the satisfaction of my friend from Arizona. I am only suggesting now that sufficient for the day is the evil thereof. When the bill for the admission of Arizona or the bill for the admission of New Mexico comes here it will be discussed, and discussed, I hope, fairly and dispassionately. I have said what I have said in answer to the criticisms and the fault-finders of my friend from Arizona [Mr. SMITH], because he knows, as I know, that there is a division of opinion among the American citizens of Arizona as to the propriety of its admission to statehood at this time, and he knows that our committee has been addressed by respectable gentlemen from that Territory who say that it ought not to be now admitted. It is no answer to those statements made to our committee for the gentleman [Mr. SMITH] to say that these gentlemen are Federal office-holders and that their tenure of office is involved. That is the only answer I have heard, but it is not a sufficient answer, and it will not be found a sufficient answer by this House.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. Will not the gentleman permit me, for my own justification, to interrupt him again for a moment?

Mr. PERKINS. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. I know that the gentleman from Kansas has acted upon statements made by others; but I would say to my friend, for whom I entertain the very highest personal and official regard, that he knows that none of those gentlemen happened to represent Arizona. Every one of them came here of his own accord and for his own purposes. Some of the gentlemen to whom he alludes have confessed to me that they were mistaken in this matter; not Mr. Brewster Cameron, nor the governor of the Territory. One remark further, and then I will not again interrupt the gentleman. The Legislative Assembly passed an act calling for a legal constitutional convention. That was duly passed by a Legislature in which the council was Republican and the house Democratic, and I do not know that there was a dissenting vote. This same governor, who afterwards came before your committee and made his irresponsible statement, is the very man who violated the law and his sworn duty in failing to call a constitutional convention, as required by law.

Mr. PERKINS. I can not permit the gentleman to occupy my time in order to make a speech or that he may indulge in accusations against office-holders in that Territory who have no opportunity to defend themselves here. If he does that he must do it in his own time.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. The accusation is not made from a political standpoint. The Republican papers of the Territory unanimously denounced his action.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I have been simply stating facts in answer to the gentleman from Arizona, and, as I have said, I will not attempt to enter in this connection upon any discussion of the merits or the demerits of the Territory of Arizona as a candidate for admission as a State of this Union.

Mr. SMITH, of Arizona. There is no division among the people of Arizona upon that point.

Mr. PERKINS. I desire, however, to call the attention of the House to the points of difference between the majority and the minority members of the Committee on Territories concerning the propriety of admitting Idaho into the sisterhood of States. They make an issue as distinct as it can possibly be made by the English language. No objection is made by the minority members of that committee to the admission of Idaho because it lacks intelligence, because it lacks wealth, because it lacks patriotism, because it has not the material resources which would entitle it to be admitted into the sisterhood of States.

No such objection is made, no such suggestion is made in the minority report. The only objection made is that, by the provisions of the constitution which was framed by the people of Idaho, polygamy and bigamy, or rather the men who believe in polygamous and bigamous practices, are disfranchised. The only reason the minority have offered for objecting to the admission of Idaho is that men who are guilty of these crimes, men who believe in these practices, men who believe in teaching these monstrous doctrines, are disfranchised by the constitution under which the Territory is asking admission.

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman does not mean to say that.

Mr. PERKINS. I will read from the minority report.

Mr. SPRINGER. You mean that we object to men being disfranchised until they are convicted of these things.

Mr. PERKINS. I will read from your report to show that the only point the minority make in opposition to the admission of Idaho is the one I have suggested. I read:

The minority find themselves unable to agree with the majority in relation to one of the provisions of the proposed constitution for Idaho.

The particular provision which is the subject of this disagreement—

And that is the only point of disagreement between the majority and the minority members, as stated by the minority themselves—is the one relating to the right of suffrage, the right to hold office, and the right to serve on juries, to which reference will hereinafter be more specifically made.

The precise point of difference between the majority and the minority is this: That the majority assent to and approve of a provision which deprives a citizen of the right of suffrage, disqualifies him from holding office, and prevents him from serving on juries, for criminal conduct imputed to him when he has not been convicted of such conduct—

Mr. SPRINGER. That is it.

Mr. PERKINS—

while the minority insist that no citizen, being otherwise qualified should be deprived of these rights and privileges on account of alleged crime, unless he has been convicted of such crime by some court of competent jurisdiction, and where the penalty for such crime, or a part thereof, is such disqualification.

That is a clear statement of the difference between the majority and the minority of the committee. This House is called upon to determine by its vote whether Idaho should be admitted into the Union with a constitution which disfranchises persons who practice polygamy or whether before persons are disfranchised they shall be arraigned in court and convicted as common felons. That is the only distinction. The majority members of the committee have said, as Congress has heretofore said, that men who are guilty of these practices, these crimes against society, whether they have been convicted or not, shall not be permitted to exercise the right to vote.

It is the man who is guilty of these crimes who is disfranchised, and only he; it is the man who believes in these practices that is disfranchised, and only he. Men who believe in a church which teaches the monstrous doctrine that the church is superior to the Government of the United States and that supreme allegiance is due to the church, not to the Government, that when the edict of the church commands a man to do that which by the law of the land he is forbidden to do, he must obey the church and ignore the statutes of his Government—men who believe in this way are disfranchised by the provisions of this bill, whether they have been convicted or not, while our friends on the other side, who represent and speak for these polygamous practices, say that men should not be disfranchised until they have been arraigned and convicted in court. That is the difference and the only difference.

My friend from Missouri [Mr. MANSUR], whom I recognize as an able lawyer, labored most earnestly, and while listening to him I sympathized with him in his effort—knowing his excellent qualities as a man, knowing his qualifications as a lawyer, knowing his worth as a citizen, I really sympathized with him in the labored effort he made here to find some excuse for making a minority report in this case. He would have this House believe, if he could, that this bill is a new departure in American legislation; that legislation of this character, which has been upheld by the courts, would be a new departure in judicial proceedings.

Why, sir, is there a State in this Union—a single one—that does not prescribe the qualifications of citizenship and the qualifications of electors? In the State of Missouri, from which my friend comes, a man, in order to be a voter, must have been a resident of the State for at least twelve months; he must be a citizen of the United States; he must have been a resident of the county and precinct in which he offers to vote for at least thirty days prior to the election. When he tenders his ballot to the judges of the election, claiming the right to vote, an inquiry is at once entered upon, an investigation is at once begun, to ascertain whether that man, under the constitution and laws of Missouri, is a qualified voter or not.

If it is found that he is not a citizen of the United States he can not vote. If it is found that he has not been a resident of Missouri for twelve months prior to the election, he can not vote. If it is found that he has not been a resident of the county and precinct for thirty days prior to the election, he can not vote. These and other qualifications are imposed; and every one of these qualifications is inquired into by the judges of the election when the man tenders his ballot on election day and asks to be permitted to exercise the privileges of an elector.

So with this constitution of Idaho. The judges of the election sit there prepared to perform the duties imposed upon them under the law with the solemnity of an oath resting upon them. A man tenders to those judges his ballot, asking that he may be permitted as a citizen of Idaho to exercise the privileges of an elector. He is asked the question: "Are you a bigamist? Are you a polygamist? Do you believe in the doctrines of the Church of Latter-Day Saints? Do you believe that it is right to teach to the people of Idaho that their allegiance is to the church rather than to the Government of the United States? Do you believe that the people of this Territory should be taught that, if the church issues an edict commanding them to do that which is forbidden by the laws of the Government of the United States, it is their duty to obey the church and to trample upon the statutes of the Congress of the country?" These questions are put to the man who offers to vote. If he answers them in the negative, if he answers that he is not a polygamist, that he does not belong to a polygamist church, that he does not believe in the doctrines of that church, he is permitted to vote as other citizens are; there is nothing in this constitution to disqualify him.

The practice which would prevail in Idaho under this constitution is the practice which prevails in Missouri to-day, which prevails in Illinois, and every State of the Union, under the laws and constitutions of those States. This is not a new departure; it is such legislation as we have known as American citizens from the day when we cut loose from dependence on Great Britain and organized this Government of ours.

I could run over the constitutions of the several States showing how in some States men are disfranchised for one reason and in some for another. For instance, as suggested by my friend from Idaho, a man is disfranchised in Texas because he is poor, because he is a pauper. Yet my friend from Texas, who upholds a constitution which disfranchises a man because he is poor, comes here and argues against a constitution which disfranchises a man who is guilty of the monstrous crime of bigamy or polygamy. If he can explain his position satisfactorily to his constituents and to his State, it is his privilege to undertake to do so. But this shows the inconsistency of our friends on the other side; it shows the strait to which they are driven in order that they may find some foundation upon which to base a minority report in this case.

As I have said, Mr. Speaker, this is not new legislation. Already to-day the polygamists and bigamists of Utah and of Idaho are disfranchised. These men are disfranchised to-day by the laws of the United States in all the Territories of the Union. This constitution of Idaho simply continues the disfranchisement which now exists. Under the Edmunds law, which has been upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States, which met the sanction of an overwhelming vote upon the floor of this House in the Forty-seventh Congress—under the provisions of that law these men in Idaho, for whom our friends on the other side speak to-day, are disfranchised, are disqualified from voting.

Mr. SPRINGER. That act did not apply to Idaho. It applied to Utah only.

Mr. PERKINS. No; it was a general statute.

Mr. SPRINGER. I am speaking of the Tucker-Edmunds law.

Mr. PERKINS. The Edmunds law passed in the Forty-seventh Congress is a general statute, applying to all the Territories of the Union; and it disfranchises every Mormon, every man who believes in the polygamous practices of that church, whether he resides in Idaho or Utah or any other Territory.

Mr. OATES. I wish to inquire of the gentleman what would have been the difference in effect if this constitution, instead of the provision which it contains, had adopted the language of the test-oath of the Edmunds-Tucker law?

Mr. PERKINS. That law requires the man to prove that he is not guilty of these practices, does not believe in the doctrine of this church; and so it would be under this constitution. If Idaho should be admitted into the Union under this constitution and a man should tender his ballot to the election judges, claiming the privilege of an elector, the inquiries would be what I suggested a moment ago. If those inquiries should be answered in the negative, if the man could prove that he is not a bigamist, not a polygamist, that he does not believe in the doctrines of this Church of the Latter-Day Saints—

Mr. OATES. Does not the provision of this constitution go a great deal further than the test-oath of the Tucker-Edmunds act?

Mr. PERKINS. The provisions of this constitution and the provisions of the Edmunds act are much the same. It is barely possible the provisions of this constitution go a little further than those of the Edmunds act.

Mr. OATES. That is the point to which I wish to call your attention. I think I voted for the Edmunds act.

Mr. PERKINS. Yes, I think you did; and I will call upon some other friends upon the floor to reconcile their votes on that act with their opposition here to day to this constitution, because this constitution, against which gentlemen argue, is only a re-enactment, with perhaps a little enlargement, of the Edmunds act. It enlarges it only to the extent of including those who believe in the teaching and practices of the Mormon Church that the Mormon doctrines are superior to the laws of the land.

Mr. OATES. If it went no further than the Edmunds act I might be inclined to favor it, but it is my judgment this constitution goes a great deal further. The Edmunds act does not require them to swear they do not belong to the Mormon Church, but this constitution disfranchises them if they do belong to that church.

Mr. PERKINS. I have the act and will read it if necessary.

Mr. OATES. Many members of the Mormon Church disclaim polygamy and do not believe in it.

Mr. PERKINS. And they may disclaim it under the provisions of this constitution.

Mr. OATES. This excludes them if they belong to the church; that act, if they belong to it and uphold polygamy. This goes much further and disfranchises them if they belong to the Mormon Church.

Mr. PERKINS. If I had more time in this debate I would read with you every provision. My friend from Missouri [Mr. MANSUR], my friend from Alabama [Mr. OATES], as well as my friend the distinguished lawyer from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUCKALEW], know under the Edmunds act those men are disfranchised without being convicted of crime. It is not necessary under that act they should be convicted. Disfranchisement is carried by that act as it is by this constitution which the people of Idaho have formulated and brought to us for consideration and indorsement. Gentlemen who uphold the Edmunds act put themselves in a rather inconsistent position when they oppose a constitution which carries the same disqualification to this people.

It is now 5 o'clock; I do not know what is the disposition of the House, whether to continue or adjourn till the morning, when I can resume my remarks.

MEMBERS' PAY.

Mr. PAYSON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the opinion delivered by Judge Davis, of the Court of Claims, in the case of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CRAIN] involving the right of members to their November pay. The motion to reconsider the report of the select committee is a question of unfinished business to be brought up hereafter. It is a matter of interest to everybody. Therefore I ask it be printed in the RECORD.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

It is as follows:

Court of Claims. No. 16716. William H. Crain vs. The United States,

Davis, J., delivered the opinion of the court.

A member of the House of Representatives seeks in this action to recover salary for the month of November last, which has not been paid him because the money intended for that purpose was embezzled by a subordinate of the Sergeant-at-Arms. The incident which leads to the proceeding in this court has given rise to debate in the House of Representatives and has attracted the attention of the country, not only because of the personal financial loss suffered by the people's Representatives, but also because of the interesting historical and legal questions which have been developed in the endeavor to fix the responsibility for that loss.

Briefly the history of the transaction is this: According to statute and custom, the Sergeant-at-Arms and the Clerk of the Fifth Congress continued in the exercise of their duties after the 4th of March last, when that Congress ceased to exist. Members of the House of Representatives receive their salaries upon certificates, signed by the Speaker when the House is in session, by the Clerk during vacation, and it has been a long-continued and consistent custom for the members early in vacation to attach receipts to a number of blank certificates, which are deposited with the Sergeant-at-Arms.

These certificates are printed in blank upon a slip of paper in the following form:

No. —

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C.,

I certify that there is due to the Hon. ————— dollars as a member of the House of Representatives for the Fifty-first Congress.

Below the certificate are printed the words "Received payment;" below these two words the Member signs his name, and afterwards the date and amount are filled in, and across the end of the paper, upon its face, outside its margin, and at right angles to the lines thereof, is inserted the word "salary," preceded by the name of the appropriate month. This crossing of the certificate is done at the suggestion of the Treasurer's office and for the convenience of that office.

The Sergeant-at-Arms, towards the end of each month during vacation procures from the Clerk of the House his signature upon the appropriate blank certificate, to which the member has before attached his receipt; he then presents the certificate at the Treasury, receives the amount named therein, deposits it in his safe at the Capitol, credits the account of the member with the month's salary, and pays it over or retains it as he may be instructed by the member.

Following this custom, plaintiff (who had been a member of the Fifth Congress), before leaving Washington last March, signed in blank nine such receipts, one for each month during the vacation, and received his salary in due course except that for the Congressional month beginning the 4th of November and ending the 4th of December last.

Upon the 27th, 29th, and 30th of November (the 28th being Thanksgiving Day) one Silcott, who was then cashier in the office of the Sergeant-at-Arms, took to the Treasury many members' salary receipts accompanied by certificates filled out for the month of November, and was there given the money necessary to pay the receipted certificates. A large part of this money Silcott appropriated to his own use, and he is now a fugitive from justice. As a result of this crime, plaintiff and other members of the House have not received the salary which is their due.

It must be noted that this action relates only to the salary of a member of the House of Representatives for the month of November, 1889. We emphasize this, as it appears that some members had made private deposits with the Sergeant-at-Arms, treating him somewhat as a banker, and some members had not drawn salary for several months, but had allowed it to accumulate in that officer's hands. Any rights arising from these transactions are not now in issue.

The defaulting cashier, while paid by the Government, was the subordinate of the Sergeant-at-Arms; he was appointed by that officer, was responsible to him, was subject to his orders, and gave bond to him in the sum of $50,000 for the faithful performance of his duties as cashier. It is admitted that in drawing the money from the Treasury the cashier acted for the Sergeant-at-Arms and represented him in fact and in law. There is no complication in this regard, and the responsibility, whatever it may be, is to be ascertained from the relations of the Sergeant-at-Arms, the cashier's principal, to the House of Representatives, or to the Members and Delegates individually, or to the Government of the United States.

On one side it is contended that in collecting the money at the Treasury the Sergeant-at-Arms acted as a public agent, and that, therefore, the loss occasioned by the default of his subordinate should fall upon the Government. The defendants urge that the Sergeant-at-Arms, so far as the subject-matter of this action is concerned, was the private agent of the members, authorized by them individually, for convenience, to collect their salaries at the Treasury. This is the main point in the case, the point of most general interest and importance, and its discussion has involved an investigation of the fiscal system of the United States, a review of the practice which has prevailed since the foundation of the Government, both in the House of Representatives and in the Treasury Department, in relation to the payment of these salaries, and an analysis of the statutes claimed to have a bearing upon the issue.

A subsidiary argument is advanced by plaintiff in which it is contended that, as his November salary was only due December 4, payment by the Treasury to the Sergeant-at-Arms upon November 30 or at any time prior thereto was unauthorized and illegal; and also it is urged that the Clerk can by statute certify to salary account during vacation only; the certificate therefore for the November salary, which was in this case signed by the Clerk, was, it is alleged, void and of no effect, as the salary was not due until after the 2d of December, when the House organized and elected a Speaker, who thereupon, and until the summer recess, alone could certify the members' salary accounts.

This position is controverted, and the arguments thereon will be considered by us after we have examined the first issue presented.

When the Sergeant-at-Arms presented to the Treasurer plaintiff's receipt for November salary, with the Clerk's certificate, and received the cash therefor, was he acting as a public agent or as plaintiff's personal agent?

There is no statute which in express terms makes the Sergeant-at-Arms a disbursing officer of the Government, nor is such a statute necessary. A Government servant may have the powers, duties, and responsibilities of a public agent without express antecedent statutory authority. As a rule, agency to bind the Government is created by statute, but there are many cases decided by this court and the Supreme Court where allegations of contract have been sustained, and the Government has been held bound by the acts of an officer performed within the general scope of his duties, but without specific statutory authority for the particular act or class of acts declared upon.

In cases of this nature which have been decided in this court or by the Supreme Court upon appeal, there has appeared a user by the Government or a benefit to it. The agent had not specific antecedent authority for his course; but not exceeding the general scope and intent of the authority given him, he took for the Government property of a citizen without disputing the individual ownership; then, as the Government had enjoyed the benefit and advantage of the act of the agent, compensation was allowed the citizen.

This proposition would probably not be controverted, while its application to the present case might be denied. Nor do we assert that our statement is more than illustrative of the principle, which we deem established, that a specific antecedent statutory authority is not necessary to invest a Government officer with power to bind the United States to compensation for loss to an individual benefitting the Government, occasioned by the officer in the rightful performance of his duties.

Executive officers are, properly, most careful to act within specific delegated powers given them, by statute or regulation, antecedent to action, and we have occasion constantly to see and commend the jealous regard these officers exhibit for the literal commands of statutes, and their great care in the protection of the revenue. The line of argument which this habit of thought engenders, while technical, is undoubtedly to be encouraged in all executive officers charged with the disbursement of public funds, and is perhaps largely due to their close construction of statutory grants of power that the fiscal system has been so successfully managed since its establishment in 1789.

The judiciary is, however, compelled to make a more philosophical examination of statutory provisions, and must interpret the law, which includes statutes, but is not made up of statutes, in accordance with recognized rules not within the proper jurisdiction of an executive officer to apply.

The Supreme Court has made this apparent in many cases, among them that of the United States against McDaniel (7 Peters, 1). In that case it appeared that defendant had been a salaried clerk in the Navy Department, and for some fifteen years had acted as a disbursing officer under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy. For this service he had been paid additional compensation. The Government denied the right to extra compensation, insisting that there was no law authorizing his appointment as a disbursing officer, and that usage, without law or against law, can never lay the foundation of a legal claim.

To this the court answered, in substance, that it is often necessary for a head of Department to exercise his discretion; he is limited in the exercise of his powers by the law, but it does not follow that he must show a statutory provision for everything he does. Whilst the great outlines of the movements of governmental machinery may be marked out and limitations imposed upon the exercise of power, there are numberless things which must be done that can neither be anticipated nor defined, and which are essential to the proper action of the Government. "Hence of necessity [say the court] usages have been established in every department of the Government which have become a common law, and regulate the rights and duties of those who act within their respective limits; and no change of such usage can have a retrospective effect, but must be limited to the future. Usage can not alter the law, but it is evidence of the construction given to it and must be considered binding on past transactions."

and the court held that, while there was no law authorizing the appointment of defendant as a disbursing officer, the duties were necessary, they were ordered by the Secretary, the charge for compensation was reasonable, and during fifteen years has been sanctioned by the Treasury, and has not been objected to by the committees of Congress, who annually inspected the Department books, and the judgment given below in plaintiff's favor was affirmed, the court saying, "It would be a novel principle to refuse payment to the subordinates of a Department because a chief, under whose direction they had faithfully served the public, had mistaken his own powers and had given an erroneous construction of the law." (See also United States vs. Fillebrown, 7 Peters, 42.)

In Wells vs. Nichols (104 U. S., 441) it was decided that while no act of Congress expressly authorized the Secretary of the Interior or other officer of the Land Department to appoint timber agents, the appropriation by Congress of money to pay them was a recognition of the validity of the appointment.

We may, therefore, assume that antecedent express statutory authority is not always necessary to invest a Government officer with right to compensation for services rendered or with power to bind the United States for his acts; of course there must be prior authority or there must be subsequent acts which amount to ratification of what has been done, and we at this point simply find that the authority is not of necessity antecedent to the agent's act, nor is it necessarily conferred by the express terms of a statute.

So much weight is attached in this case to the custom which has prevailed in the payment of the salaries of members of the House of Representatives, and that custom is so necessary to an understanding of the statutes which we shall hereafter cite, that some examination of the history of disbursements of this nature becomes important.

Prior to the adoption of the Constitution the finances of the Government were managed by Congress through committees and commissioners, who directed a force of comptrollers and auditors, a treasurer, and the necessary clerks and accountants, all of whom held office immediately under the Congress. Demands upon the Treasury at that time were examined by the Legislature, either directly through a submission to the Congress or indirectly through the appropriate committee. After approval in one or the other form, the accounts were passed as public accounts and paid by the Treasurer. The whole fiscal administration, whatever its details of management, was in the hands of the Legislature.

By an act approved September 2, 1793, the Treasury Department was established, and thus the fiscal administration under the new Government was transferred from the Legislature to the executive branch (1 Stat. L., 65). Twenty days later (section 6, act September 22, 1793, 1 Stat. L., 71) it was enacted that the compensation of officers of the House of Representatives should be certified by the Speaker and passed as public accounts, and paid out of the public Treasury. This rule was several times re-enacted and now appears in the Revised Statutes. The date of this act is important, in view of the subsequent practice under it, and it can not fail to be noted that it was the work of the same Congress which established the Treasury Department, and that it was approved only twenty days after the new fiscal administration had been authorized. In this act provision was made for the compensation of officers of the House, and in section 5 there was allowed "to the Sergeant-at-Arms, during the sessions and while employed in the business of the House, $4 per day."

During this, the First, Congress warrants for members' salaries were drawn at the Treasury, in favor of the Speaker, and this practice was followed until the Twenty-sixth Congress. In the Twenty-sixth Congress some warrants were drawn in favor of the Speaker, others in favor either of the Treasurer or of certain individual members or of certain assignees of members.

After the Twenty-sixth Congress, to and including the Thirty-second Congress, all warrants were drawn either in favor of the Speaker or upon his order, when in favor of others. As it was impracticable for the Speaker in person to supervise the payment of members' salaries, he early called to his aid the Sergeant-at-Arms, who performed the clerical and administrative labor incident to this duty.

During the Twenty-fifth Congress the Committee of Accounts of the House of Representatives was instructed, among other things, to inquire in relation to the subordinate officers of the House, with a view to a definition of their respective duties.

At that time the Sergeant-at-Arms was not recognized in the rules as a disbursing officer, and the duties of that nature imposed upon him he discharged only as an agent of the Speaker. The committee made a report dated March 31, 1838 (Twenty-fifth Congress, second session, H. R. Doc. 750), in which they stated, in substance, that early in the history of the House an unofficial arrangement had been made by the Speaker and the Secretary of the Treasury by which the money appropriated for the pay of members was advanced to the Speaker, who paid the members, taking their individual receipts, which, with the Speaker's accounts for the whole transaction, were at the termination of the session, transmitted to the Treasury Department, there to be passed upon by the accounting officers.

This, the committee said, "was deemed a compliance with the spirit of the law." Adverting to the "voluntary and gratuitous" work of the Speaker in this regard and of the Sergeant-at-Arms in assisting him, they stated that the practice contributed to public convenience and the dispatch of public business; it had so long prevailed that there was scarcely a member who did not suppose it a part of the official duty of these officers "not only to settle and audit the accounts of the members, but actually obtain the money and place it in their hands." The committee commended the practice and recommended its continuance, suggesting only that it receive legislative sanction, as a measure of such "high responsibility and importance" "should not rest alone upon custom or antiquity" for its sanction or authority. They then reported certain resolutions, which were adopted by the House (April 4, 1838), but which never took the form of a statute.

These resolutions were three in number. The first required the Speaker at the commencement of Congress to designate to the Secretary of the Treasury some suitable depository wherein he should place the money for the compensation of members, "subject to be drawn out by the check of the Speaker, indorsed by the member of the House entitled to mileage and per diem pay." The second, as more important, we quote literally:

"Resolved, That it shall be the duty of the Sergeant-at-Arms to keep the accounts for pay and mileage of the members, to prepare checks for members, and, if required to do so, to draw the money on said checks for the members; the same being previously signed by the Speaker and indorsed by the member in whose favor the same may be drawn, and pay over the same to the member entitled thereto."

The third resolution directed the Sergeant-at-Arms to give bond "to the United States" conditioned "faithfully to account for the money coming into his hands for the pay of the members of the House," and for his increased duties and liabilities he was allowed extra compensation, to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

These resolutions approved a practice already existing and recommended its continuance as contributing to the public convenience and to the dispatch of the public business, and while the committee thought legislative sanction advisable they apparently were of the opinion that a rule of the House constituted sufficient sanction and an act of Congress was unnecessary.

While the Sergeant-at-Arms was thus directed to keep the accounts of members, to prepare checks for them, and, if required to do so, to draw the money on the checks, the Treasury Department continued to advance moneys to the Speaker until the close of the Thirty-second Congress. From the first session of the Thirty-third Congress, beginning December 5, 1833, to the present time warrants to pay the compensation and mileage of the members have been drawn in favor of the Treasurer of the United States, the moneys advanced have been charged against him on the Treasury books, and the accounts have been settled in the name of the Treasurer.

The Treasurer has regularly advanced to the Sergeant-at-Arms the compensation of members of the House in return for certificates signed, during the session by the Speaker and during vacation by the Clerk, when accompanied by the members' receipts, and, by order of the Secretary of the Treasury, made in 1870, the Treasurer's accounts have since that time been balanced afterwards by an "accountable" warrant issued in the Treasurer's favor for the gross sum so advanced, instead of by warrants issued from time to time, as was done prior to June, 1870.

It is interesting to note in this connection that, March 12, 1853, President Pierce issued an order in accordance with the act of January 31, 1823 (3 Stat. L., 723), now section 3648 of the Revised Statutes, directing advances to be made to certain officers called in the act "disbursing officers" of the Government, and at the head of a long list appear, first, "the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States," second, "the Clerk of said House." As the Clerk controls the contingent fund out of which are paid all expenses of the House except the salary and mileage of members, it is evident that the advance of public moneys to the Speaker, contemplated by this order, was to enable him to pay to the Representatives and Delegates their compensation, although the Speaker's authority in this regard was never conferred by express statute.

Since 1843 the Sergeant-at-Arms has given bond, approved by the Speaker, to the United States for the faithful disbursement of money in his hands, and these bonds have regularly and without objection or comment been received and filed in the Treasury Department. The only public money which comes into the hands of this officer is that intended for the salary and mileage of members; all other money, including that which pays the Sergeant-at-Arms his own salary and the salaries of his subordinates, is under the control of the Clerk of the House.

The duties of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives of the Fiftyth Congress were prescribed by the fourth rule, and besides those inherent in the office, such as maintaining order and serving process, we find him directed to "keep the accounts for the pay and mileage of Members and Delegates, and pay them as provided by law." This rule differs from the resolution of 1838 (supra) in that the rule directs the Sergeant-at-Arms absolutely to pay the Members and Delegates, whereas the resolution ordered him to pay only when "required to do so." This change in phraseology took place in 1880; the rule has since existed in this form and is still in force.

The rule further requires "the Sergeant-at-Arms to give a bond for the faithful disbursement of all moneys intrusted to him by virtue of his office and the proper discharge of the duties thereof." It has been shown that the bond given by the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Fiftyth Congress is not drawn in this form, but is conditioned only that he "shall well and faithfully account for all money coming into his hands for the pay of members of the House of Representatives of the Fiftyth Congress." As the bond is to the United States and no Government money comes into the Sergeant-at-Arms's control except that intended to pay the salary and mileage of Members and Delegates, and as the word "pay" may perhaps be held to include mileage as well as salary (although as to this we express no opinion), the difference in phraseology between the bond and the rule may not perhaps be important so far as the Fiftyth Congress was concerned. It will, however, be immediately noticed that the bond is no protection to the Fifty-first Congress.

Still the main fact important to this issue remains that by the rule and by the bond it appears that the Sergeant-at-Arms was intended and understood by the House to control the funds necessary to pay Members' and Delegates' salary and mileage, and his responsibility for honest administration of moneys coming into his hands for that purpose is pledged, not to the House of Representatives, not to the members individually, but to the United States. This bond, like those preceding it, was received and filed at the Treasury without comment or criticism.

Finally we find that the Sergeant-at-Arms is allowed, as salaried subordinates, a cashier, a teller, a book-keeper, and a messenger; that he has a large and expensive safe; that his office is fitted in a manner similar to the arrangement of an establishment where moneys are received and paid out.

The custom, then, is consistent and long continued. The Congress which created the fiscal system retained the executive control of the members' compensation, first leaving it in the Speaker's hands, who, as the House grew in numbers, called to his aid the Sergeant-at-Arms, who, later, was ordered by the House to act as its disbursing officer for this one purpose.

The argument thus far shows that while no express statute conferred upon the Sergeant-at-Arms the duty of a disbursing agent, he is an officer chosen by the House under their constitutional right; that so far as in their power the House has assigned to him the duties of a disbursing officer in regard to one subject, and that for many years he has performed these duties.

The House of Representatives evidently believed that a rule was sufficient legislative sanction for this course. In this we do not agree. But it is further urged on behalf of plaintiff that even if the rule have not the force contended for and if there be not sufficient statutory authority to authorize the course hitherto pursued in this regard, plaintiff may invoke the doctrine Communis error facit jus; and he cites in support of this contention two cases where it was allowed to override express statutory provision. (Clay vs. Sudgrave, 1 Salk., 32; Maier vs. The State, 1 Porter, 265.)

We do not think there is necessity in this case to examine the doctrine or to decide whether it here applies.

Having defined the custom, we turn now to the statutes. They provide that one of the officers of the House shall be a Sergeant-at-Arms; and while the appropriation acts each year recognize the existence of the office, nowhere do we find its duties definitely marked out by statute. The necessary and proper inference is that the duties were to be those prescribed by the House if consistent with the Constitution and with law.

It is true that where a statute creates an office previously known to the common law, without defining its powers and duties, it must be assumed that the powers and duties were those legally performed by the officer prior to the statutory recognition (Kirksey vs. Bates, 7 Porter, 529; Kennedy vs. Brunst, 26 Wis., 414); but this doctrine might well be held not to warrant the inference that these acts recognized as legal the discharge by the Sergeant-at-Arms of the duties of a disbursing officer, duties usually expressly prescribed by a statute even when required by the rules; but there are other provisions in the acts which admit of no sensible interpretation unless the Sergeant-at-Arms be in fact a disbursing officer.

There are provisions for a cashier with a salary of $3,000, a book-keeper with a salary of $1,900, and a paying teller with a salary of $2,000. Unless the Sergeant-at-Arms is to disburse the salaries of members (and no other public moneys come into his hands) no duties exist for these officers to perform and their salaries are a useless charge upon the public Treasury. To assume that Congress intended this would be unreasonable, and the natural inference is that these officers were to perform duties of the nature indicated by their titles—that is, duties of a financial nature in relation to the only public funds in the Sergeant-at-Arms' hands, those intended to pay members. Neither a paying teller nor a book-keeper could be of service to an officer required only to maintain order and to serve the process of the House.

The provision for a cashier has particular significance, for it has a definition affixed to it by the Supreme Court (Merchants' Bank vs. State Bank, 10 Wall., 604):

"The cashier is the executive officer through whom the whole financial operations of the bank are conducted. He receives and pays out its moneys, collects and pays its debts, and receives and transfers its commercial securities. Tellers and other subordinate officers may be appointed, but they are under his direction, and are, as it were, the arms by which designated portions of his various functions are discharged."

When Congress assigned to the Sergeant-at-Arms a "cashier" it intended to give to the former the aid of a financial officer, one who would receive and pay out money coming into his superior's hands; this money was that, and that only, destined to pay Members of the House and Delegates. No other reasonable construction can be given to these provisions of the law. As we have already stated, money has been provided by statute and applied to the fitting up of the office of Sergeant-at-Arms in the manner usual in financial establishments. Money has been appropriated by statute to provide for him a large safe, books of account, and other paraphernalia of an office where money is handled. Here again Congress recognized the financial duties of the officer.

Further legislative sanction for the custom is found in other statutes. Section

40 of the Revised Statutes requires the Secretary of the Senate and the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House to deduct from the monthly payment of Senators and Members the salary for each day's absence except in case of sickness.

The Secretary of the Senate is by express terms of statute made a disbursing agent, and the linking of these two officers in the same section of the law with direction to perform the same duty indicates the legislative understanding that their responsibilities in regard to compensation of members of the Senate or of the House were similar. What reason could there be for directing the Sergeant-at-Arms to make this deduction unless he was recognized as having the funds under his control out of which these payments were to be made.

Section 45 speaks again of a disbursing officer of the House who is to pay mileage and accounts; it does not name him, but when that statute was passed the Sergeant-at-Arms had for many years been acting as a disbursing officer in charge of these accounts.

In January, 1890, the Treasurer of the United States addressed a letter to the Select Committee on Rules of the House of Representatives calling attention to the practice which had prevailed in regard to the payment of members' salaries and recommending that "one of the officers of the House of Representatives be designated as a disbursing officer, giving such bond as may be required, in the same manner as the Secretary of the Senate is now charged with the disbursement and mileage of Senators."

The matter was very fully explained to the House and legislation was suggested as necessary to effect the desired end. No statute was passed on the subject, however, but the discussion was followed by the rule which we have already cited, and which contained a most important modification in this: that it specially charged the Sergeant-at-Arms with the duty of paying the salaries, and that not when "required to do so" by the members, as before, but charged him to "pay them as provided by law;" so, since 1890, the Sergeant-at-Arms pays the salaries under express direction of the rule, whereas, prior to this change, he had paid only when required to do so by the members.

June 16, 1882 (first session, Forty-seventh Congress), a bill was passed in the House of Representatives, by unanimous consent, which made the Sergeant-at-Arms a disbursing officer for the compensation and mileage of Representatives and Delegates; but this bill did not become a law; it was referred to the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, and we do not find that they took any action upon it. An explanation of this is, perhaps, to be found in the fact that June 22, 1882, six days after the last-mentioned bill passed the House, the following act of Congress was approved by the President:

"Whenever any appropriation made for the payment of the salaries of Senators, Members, and Delegates in Congress, or the officers and employees of both or either of the Houses thereof, or for the expenses of the same, or any committee thereof, can not be lawfully disbursed by or through the officers specially charged with such disbursements, such disbursements may be made for the purpose named in said appropriation by the Treasurer of the United States, who shall take proper vouchers therefor, and charge such disbursements against such appropriations, and the accounts therefor shall be audited and passed or rejected, as the law may require, in the same manner that similar accounts are or may be required by law to be audited and passed or rejected."

In this statute it is assumed that there existed in the House of Representatives some "officer specially charged" with the disbursement of moneys paid by the Government for the salaries of Members and Delegates. It is the statutory recognition of the existence of an officer in the House charged with duties in relation to members' pay.

The phraseology of the statute immediately attracts attention, for it does not speak of disbursing officers. The Clerk of the House and the Secretary of the Senate are both disbursing officers; and if the statute had intended simply to refer to them, what more natural than to use this familiar title to which is attached a fixed legal significance? The statute relates not only to the funds controlled by the Secretary of the Senate and to those controlled by the Clerk of the House, but also to those intended for the compensation of the Representatives and Delegates in the House of Representatives, which, under the House rule, were in the charge of the Sergeant-at-Arms.

At the time this statute was under consideration there was pending a bill which had passed the House intended in express terms to make the Sergeant-at-Arms a disbursing officer for these funds, and a debate upon the subject had just taken place in the House which, coupled with the debates of 1883 and of 1880, had shown that there existed some doubt as to the powers of the Sergeant-at-Arms in this regard. The pending bill specifically making the Sergeant-at-Arms a disbursing officer did not become a law, while the other bill was passed and approved. It speaks not of disbursing officers of the Senate and House, but of "officers specially charged" with certain disbursements, and the Sergeant-at-Arms was by the rules of the House, and with full understanding of the position by Congress at that time, as before, "specially charged" with the disbursement of Members' and Delegates' salaries and mileage.

There is no reason to suppose that this statute of 1882 was passed under any misunderstanding of the law or facts, Congress was familiar with the custom which for many years had prevailed in the House of Representatives and which was the subject of debate; they knew the House rules and the law. It is much more reasonable to infer that, recognizing the existing facts, they deem the course theretofore pursued to have been in accordance with law, and that the statute of June, 1882, cured any doubt, than to assume that a mistake was made in a matter so immediately within the personal knowledge and direct observation of members of Congress.

Even if it be assumed that the Congress had shut their eyes to what was occurring in their midst and had failed to examine the law or to correctly construe it, still it does not necessarily follow that the statute is without effect. In Postmaster-General vs. Early (12 Wheaton, 136) the court was required to construe an act giving certain jurisdiction to the district and State courts. This jurisdiction was to be exercised concurrent with the circuit courts, and there was no grant in this act of power to the circuit courts, Congress erroneously supposing that these courts already possessed this jurisdiction.

Nevertheless the Supreme Court held that the grant to the district and State courts of a jurisdiction which was to be exercised "concurrent with" the circuit courts conferred jurisdiction upon those courts. The words "concurrent with," said the Supreme Court, speaking by Chief Justice Marshall, "perhaps manifest the opinion of the Legislature that the jurisdiction was in the circuit courts, but ought, we think, to be construed to give it, if it did not previously exist." It is true that the language of the section indicates the opinion that jurisdiction existed in the circuit courts rather than an intention to give it, and a mistaken opinion of the Legislature concerning the law does not make law, but this mistake is manifested in words competent to make the law in the future. We know of no principle which can deny them this effect. The Legislature may pass a declaratory act which though inoperative in the past may act in the future. This law expresses the sense of the Legislature on the existing law as plainly as a declaratory act, and expresses its terms capable of conferring the jurisdiction.

Courts endeavor to uphold statutes, and, if possible, to give them effect. This statute of 1882 refers to some officer not named, but recognized as in existence and as having power to disburse the money appropriated for members' salaries; that officer did in fact then exist in the person of the Sergeant-at-Arms. Whether he, at the outset, was legally authorized to perform the duties in fact imposed upon him becomes now unimportant, as the statute of 1882, interpreted by the rule of 1890 and the situation when the statute was passed, contains a legislative declaration of the power assumed by Congress then to exist in this officer, a declaration sufficient to operate upon him in the future, and to constitute him thenceforward in law what he had long been in fact (if not in law), a public agent, charged with the duty of paying to Members and Delegates their salaries.

It was argued in the very excellent brief filed by the defense, and it was pressed in the discussion, that the Treasurer of the United States is the disbursing agent charged with the financial duty performed by the Sergeant-at-Arms. There is no statute which in terms makes the Treasurer a disbursing officer of the House of Representatives, but the defendants rely upon his general power. The practice would seem to negative this contention, although it is not without considerable force, and has given rise to much discussion. It may have been understood in the Treasury that the course pursued did not technically involve an advance of money to the Sergeant-at-Arms, perhaps because the accounts have been kept in the name of the Treasurer.

On the other hand, the Sergeant-at-Arms, upon presenting members' receipts and the Speaker's and Clerk's certificates, in fact has been regularly paid in advance the salaries due Members and Delegates, a practice which is forbidden by law unless the Sergeant be a public officer with right to disburse Government funds. The position is also negated by the statute of 1882 (supra), which, in specifying a time when the Treasurer shall pay, may well be held to forbid him from paying at other times. The course of the Treasury in this matter is subject for argument, but we do find that Department receiving the Sergeant-at-Arms's bond, and advancing him money, in fact, through the Treasurer, whose accounts were not balanced until after the entire transaction for each month was closed, and the money was in the hands of the Sergeant-at-Arms.

If the Sergeant-at-Arms was a private agent, then the Treasurer violated section 305 (Revised Statutes), which directs him to disburse upon warrants drawn by the Secretary, countersigned by the Comptroller, and recorded by the Register; instead of this, trusting to subsequent ratification of his acts, he disbursed upon the certificates of the Speaker or Clerk and the receipts of the members prior to the issue of any warrant, and this practice was ordered by the Secretary and sanctioned by the Comptroller. Further, section 2648 forbids an advance of public money; yet these moneys were regularly advanced.

The arrangement with the Treasury was made many years ago. It has since been followed consistently; it was specifically recognized and ratified in 1870, when the Secretary directed the warrant in settlement of the Treasurer's accounts for this money to issue for a sum in gross after the whole amount had been paid. The course is certainly irregular, but it has the support of convenience and long-continued custom, and aids in the dispatch of public business; it has been assented to by the Legislature and the Executive since the foundation of the Government, and was the continuation of the system which had existed prior to the act of 1789.

The Treasury Department has been most carefully administered since its organization, and the only criticisms made upon its officers are based upon allegations of an overstrained care in the protection of the interests of the Government against those of an individual creditor, criticisms which those officers can well afford to incur when courts are open to rectify any errors of theirs which may lead to injustice to a citizen. It can not be supposed that these officers have for many years violated the specific provisions of familiar statutes, statutes which it is part of their daily duty to apply. Is it not more reasonable to assume that they find authority for their course in the law as interpreted by rules and custom?

In any event the fact that the Sergeant-at-Arms, or the Treasurer, or the Comptroller, or the Secretary of the Treasury followed a practice not in harmony with the statutes or regulations which govern disbursing officers can not operate to the injury of an individual, whether a member of the House of Representatives or a private citizen. What rights (if any there be) the Government may have against the Sergeant-at-Arms or the fiscal agents of the Executive is not for us to examine into or to decide upon, but it is apparent that if they in the administration of their duties failed to comply with the statute or regulation in the manner of performance, while not exceeding their powers in the thing done, no responsibility falls upon a third person ignorant of the illegal manner in which a legal act was done. If the Sergeant-at-Arms was a public agent, authorized by law to pay these salaries, a failure on his part, or on the part of the Treasury officers, to comply with the forms prescribed by law for drawing from the Treasury the money necessary for this purpose, can not affect the innocent Member or Delegate.

In the view we take of this case it seems unnecessary to more than advert arguendo to the second main point advanced by plaintiff.

It is undoubtedly a general rule, as argued upon his behalf, that where an agent is empowered to collect a debt at a given time payment made to that agent prior to that time is at the peril of the one who pays, or, as Lord Ellenborough tersely stated it, "Every person who pays money beforehand pays it at his own risk." (Parnter vs. Galtskill, 13 East, 432.) It is no less true that, as plaintiff's salary was not due until December 4, the Speaker's certificate should have been demanded at the Treasury, as the Clerk, who in fact did sign, was powerless to certify to such an account after December 2, when the Fifty-first Congress convened and elected a Speaker.

On the other hand, it is contended with force that plaintiff was familiar with the custom of advance payments, which had so long prevailed, and that if by his receipt attached to a blank certificate he did make the Sergeant-at-Arms his private agent, he is charged with notice of the manner in which such power had been customarily exercised, and must be presumed to have foreseen that the money as heretofore would be paid at the Treasury to the Sergeant-at-Arms prior to the date when in law due; and as the agent had in fact received the money in accordance with notorious custom, then his principal can not disavow his act and fall back upon him who paid.

The rule of the House did not attempt to create in the Sergeant-at-Arms personal agency; this no rule could do unless passed by the consent of every Member and Delegate. No personal relations, therefore, were created by the rule as between this plaintiff and the incumbent of the office. The personal agency, then, if there were one, arose from the transaction, not from the official position of the Sergeant-at-Arms, and that transaction consisted in the signing of a receipt in blank, understood to cover a month's salary, the particular month not being specified, and its deposit with the Sergeant-at-Arms. There remained, as a legal statutory prerequisite to payment of this salary, a certificate made by the proper officer; without such a certificate no payment could be legally made.

The certificate in this case was not signed by the proper officer, but was on its face illegal, because signed by the Clerk when it covered salary due not in vacation, but due after the House had convened and organized, when only the Speaker could sign. Yet, in view of this irregular certificate, to say nothing of the general law of agency as to payments before date, the Government advanced the Sergeant-at-Arms the money.

We can not assume that trained and trusted officers would have made this advance to the private agent of an individual; and the fact that payment was made in this way, and has for so many years been made in this way, without dissent or criticism, is another argument, drawn from long executive construction, tending to confirm the result we reach that the Sergeant-at-Arms acted as a public officer.

Since the organization of the Government, the House of Representatives has retained control of the payment of the salaries of Members and Delegates. The Congress which established the Treasury Department intended to reserve to the House the power previously exercised by it, and this power was exercised always thereafter by officers of the House; first, by the Speaker directly; then by the Speaker acting through the Sergeant-at-Arms as his subordinate; then by the Sergeant-at-Arms acting under direction of the House as expressed in the rules.

No change has been made in the practice except in its details of administration: it was public, uniform, long continued, expressly sanctioned by the House, and was not objected to by the Treasury, which recognized it and acted in harmony with it. Usage can be appealed to for the interpretation of statutes, and we find the only reasonable construction of the statutes relating to this subject is the one which harmonizes with the usage. We all agree that judgment shall be entered in plaintiff's favor in the sum of $366.

HUDSON RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. BAKER. I ask by unanimous consent that leave be granted to print remarks on the Hudson River Bridge bill passed this morning.

Mr. SPRINGER. And on the Idaho bill.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. I object.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I believe I have thirty minutes' time remaining and am entirely willing to consult the temper of the House as to whether I shall proceed this evening or allow the debate to go over until to-morrow.

Mr. BUCKALEW. If the gentleman will yield to me I will make a motion to adjourn.

Mr. DORSEY. I hope the gentleman from Kansas will exercise his own pleasure.

Mr. PERKINS. I would prefer not to go on to-night.

Mr. DORSEY. Then I hope the gentleman from Pennsylvania will not press the motion to adjourn now, as there are several matters that gentlemen want to present for unanimous consent.

Mr. BUCKALEW. I will not press the motion.

NATIONAL ARMORY, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Mr. ROCKWELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to discharge the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 445) for the erection of a shop at the National Armory, Springfield, Mass., and put the same upon its passage.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, subject to objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause to be erected at the National Armory, Springfield, Mass., a fire-proof building for machine-shop, finishing shops, etc., including steam-engine, boilers, shop fixtures, heating, lighting, grading, etc. The plans, specifications, and full estimates for said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed for said building complete the sum of $211,639.54.

SEC. 2. That for the purpose of this act the sum of $211,639.54 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the same to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendment:

Strike out the second section of the bill.

Mr. ROCKWELL. This is the appropriating clause of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Let me ask, Mr. Speaker, if the order we are operating under to-day is not an exclusive order, that the time of the House shall be occupied in doing a certain thing.

The SPEAKER. That is the order, but of course the House can dispense with it by unanimous consent. This is a request for unanimous consent. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROCKWELL. The clause proposed to be stricken out by the amendment is the appropriation clause.

The amendment was adopted.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ROCKWELL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

NATIONAL CEMETERY AT STAUNTON, VA.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to discharge the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union from the further consideration of the bill (S. 1612) to construct a road from the city of Staunton to the national cemetery in the county of Augusta, in the State of Virginia, and put the same upon its passage.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read subject to objection.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the sum of $11,000 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of constructing a macadamized road from the city of Staunton, in the State of Virginia, to the national cemetery, in the county of Augusta, in said State, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, or so much of the above-named sum as may be necessary for said purpose.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of War is hereby directed to advertise and let the contract for the construction of said road to the lowest bidder, taking bond with good security from the contractor for the completion of said road.

There being no objection, the bill was considered and ordered to a third reading; and being read the third time, was passed.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the bill (H. R. 924) covering the same subject-matter will be laid upon the table.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

CLAIMS OF SCHUYLKILL COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA.

Mr. REILLY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to discharge the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 5601) to authorize the proper accounting officers of the Treasury to audit and pay the claim of the county of Schuylkill, in the State of Pennsylvania, for money advanced by it under allotments made by soldiers from said county during the late rebellion, by virtue of section 12 of the act of Congress entitled "An act to authorize the employment of volunteers to aid in enforcing the laws and protecting public property," approved July 22, 1861, and put it upon its passage.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, subject to objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Whereas the county of Schuylkill, in the State of Pennsylvania, during the late rebellion advanced money upon allotments made by soldiers from the said county then in the service of the United States to the families of said soldiers and to others, under and by virtue of section 12 of the act of Congress entitled "An act to authorize the employment of volunteers to aid in enforcing the laws and protecting public property," approved July 22, 1861, and the orders and regulations of the Secretary of War made in pursuance of said section of said act of Congress: and

Whereas the said county claims that the whole sum so advanced by it has not heretofore been refunded to it by the United States: Therefore,

Be it enacted, etc., That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury be, and are hereby, authorized and directed to audit the claim of the said county of Schuylkill, and when audited to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the said county such portion of the sum advanced upon allotments as aforesaid by the said county which the accounting officers aforesaid may thereby ascertain has not heretofore been refunded to said county by the United States: Provided, That no sum shall be so refunded when it shall appear to said accounting officers that the soldier making such particular allotment or allotments shall have been also paid by the United States, unless it shall also appear that such double payment was not through any negligence in reference thereto on the part of the officers of said county charged with the duty of making such advances.

Mr. REILLY. I ask unanimous consent to consider this bill now. This morning a similar request was objected to by the gentleman from Texas, who has withdrawn his objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed that the gentleman from Texas, who is not now present, has withdrawn his objection.

Is there further objection?

There being no objection the bill was considered, and ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. REILLY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ADDITIONAL LAND DISTRICTS IN WYOMING.

Mr. CAREY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to discharge the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union from further consideration of the bill (H. R. 7498) to establish three new land districts in the Territory of Wyoming.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all the public lands in the Territory of Wyoming bounded and described as follows, beginning at a point on the eastern boundary of the said Territory where the tenth standard parallel north intersects the same; thence running west along said tenth standard parallel north to the southeast corner of township 41 north, range 75 west; thence north on the line between ranges 74 and 75 west to the northern boundary line of the said Territory; thence east along said northern boundary line to the northeast corner of the said Territory; thence south along the said eastern boundary line of the said Territory to the place of beginning, shall constitute a new land district, and the land office of the said district shall be located at such place in said district as the President may direct.

SEC. 2. That all the public lands of the Territory of Wyoming bounded and described as follows, beginning at a point on the northern boundary of the said Territory where the twelfth guide meridian will, when extended, intersect with the same; thence south along said guide meridian to the eleventh standard parallel north; thence east along said parallel to the eleventh auxiliary meridian; thence south along said meridian, when extended, to the seventh standard parallel north; thence west along said seventh standard parallel to the southwest corner of township 29 north, range 104 west, of the sixth principal meridian; thence north along said line between ranges 104 and 105 west to the ninth standard parallel north, when extended; thence along said parallel, when extended, to the western boundary of the said Territory; thence north along said western boundary to the northern boundary of the said Territory; thence east along said northern boundary to the place of beginning, shall constitute a new land district, and the land office of the said district shall be located at such place in the said district as the President may direct.

SEC. 3. That all the public land in the Territory of Wyoming bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point on the eastern boundary of the said Territory where the tenth standard parallel north intersects the same; thence running west along the said tenth standard parallel north to the eleventh auxiliary meridian; thence south along said meridian when extended to the seventh standard parallel north; thence east along the said seventh standard parallel to the southeast corner of township 29 north, range 71 west; thence north on the line between ranges 70 and 71 west to the southeast corner of township 31 north, range 71 west; thence east along the line between townships 30 and 31 north to the eastern boundary-line of the said Territory to the place of beginning, shall constitute a new land district, and the land office of the said district shall be located at such place in said district as the President may direct.

SEC. 4. That the President be, and is hereby, authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, or during the recess thereof and until the next session after such appointment, a register and receiver for each of said districts, who shall be required to reside in the town in their respective districts as may be designated for the location of the land office, and they shall be subject to the same laws and be entitled to the same compensation as is or may be provided by law in relation to the existing land offices and officers in said Territory.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BLOUNT. I would like to know if this is recommended by the committee unanimously or if there is a division of opinion in regard to it?

Mr. CAREY. The Committee on Public Lands recommend the bill unanimously; the Commissioner of the General Land Office has also approved the bill, which is for the convenience of the people of that Territory.

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DORSEY moved to reconsider to vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

INCREASED PAY TO LETTER-CARRIERS.

Mr. QUINN, by unanimous consent, obtained leave to print in the RECORD the following memorial of the National Association of Letter-Carriers, with resolutions urging an increase of salary:

[Chicago Branch of the National Association of Letter-Carriers. T. L. Hartigan, president; J. F. Walsh, secretary; J. J. Redmond, treasurer; Joseph Field, corresponding secretary; J. J. Gallivan, financial secretary; vice-presidents: R. H. Sampson, T. Cairns, L. Berg, H. Putz, J. Campion, A. McLeod, T. W. Wittler, R. H. Andrews, A. Lamme, C. J. Bormann, E. Hale, H. F. Gates, J. Anderson.]

To Hon. JOHN QUINN:

At a meeting of the Chicago Branch of the National Association of Letter-Carriers, held in this city March 8, 1890, the following reasons why letter-carriers should receive an increase of salary were unanimously ordered printed:

First. Because the present pay of the carriers is not sufficient compensation for the services rendered.

Second. Because the carrier service of to-day requires intelligence, zeal, and fidelity for its faithful performance.

Third. Because of the responsibilities of the position and its exacting nature.

Fourth. When a carrier is first appointed he serves as a substitute, on an average for about one year, during which time his pay amounts to less than $15 per month, nearly all of which is paid by the regular carriers who, on account of sickness or other causes, are compelled to absent themselves. After appointment as a regular carrier, the salary is $600 for the first year, $800 for the second, and $1,000 for the third, which is the maximum pay possible at present. The carrier, after having faithfully served the Government four years, has received a sum not exceeding $1.75 per day.

Fifth. Because the carriers are required to purchase their own uniforms and this, with the great cost of living in large cities, makes it practically impossible for a carrier with a family to meet his current expenses.

Sixth. Because no allowance is made by the Government for loss of time, occasioned by sickness, which in nearly all cases is contracted in the line of duty and from which very few carriers escape during the year.

We believe these reasons are sufficient to show that the present compensation of carriers is not commensurate with the services rendered.

In submitting them we respectfully ask you to give them a careful consideration, and to give your assistance in the passage of House bill No. 3363, now in the hands of the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

A true copy from the minutes of said meeting.

J. F. WALSH, Secretary.

RESOLUTIONS.

At a meeting of the San Francisco post-office clerks, held March 24, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas it has come to the knowledge of the San Francisco post-office clerks that an organized effort is being made by postal clerks throughout the Union to better the condition of the service and of the employees of the postal department: Therefore,

Resolved, That we hereby express our sentiments and our wishes concerning Congressional legislation having that end in view.

We desire the passage of House bill 6449, which provides that eight hours' labor shall constitute a day's work.

We most earnestly desire the passage of House bill 6448, which provides for a period of rest or vacation for post-office clerks, of fifteen days annually; for the reason that it is the custom and practice with commercial houses and with Governments the world over, who recognize the fact that their employees do better work and more of it when endowed with the renewed vitality which such a recreation gives.

The principle involved has been recognized by Congress in granting to carriers such a vacation, and we ask the extension of that privilege to ourselves, on the ground that our work is unhealthy and confining, and that a periodical rest is a necessity to men who work every Sunday in the year, and who know that holidays are being celebrated only through reading the newspapers.

The last Congress recognized, and the President approved, of the principle for which postal clerks have fought so long and so well, that of classification; but the application of the principle is unsatisfactory.

A lump sum was appropriated to pay salaries, and as it was insufficient the pay of clerks was ruthlessly cut down or increased by a ridiculously small sum.

In the business world a faithful employee is considered to become more efficient and his services more valuable in proportion to his additional years of service.

It seems to us that the application of that idea would be a solution of the vexed question of what should be the test of a clerk's worth.

We indorse the proposed amendment in the classification bill, which provides that probationary clerks shall be paid at the rate of $6.00 per annum, and for the first year thereafter they shall be paid $7.00, and that for each succeeding year they shall be paid an additional $1.00 until they are in receipt of $1,300 per annum; and that 20 per cent. of the clerks in each office shall be paid $1,300 per annum, and that 10 per cent. shall receive $1,400 per annum. Also, that the words "money-order and registry clerks" shall be inserted after the words "stamp clerks" in House bill 12490.

The general public, and even many of our Senators and Representatives, have only a faint conception of the duties and of the trials and hardships of a post-office clerk.

Many overworked people complain that their hours of labor are such that they can not cultivate social ties, nor the physical and mental qualities with which they have been endowed by nature. Happily, this is something of which postal clerks can not complain. They have no social ties; they live and breathe only for the post-office.

Throughout the livelong weary day and into the silent watches of the night the postal clerk labors at any and at all hours, sacrificing his sight in dimly lighted rooms, sacrificing his health breathing the polluted atmosphere of overcrowded and overheated rooms, exhausting his nervous energy by the efforts necessary to keep pace with the never-ceasing rush and worry, till at last as the years go by he is, because of impaired eyesight and shattered health, unable to earn a living for himself or for those who depend on him.

Is it not just that men who make these sacrifices, who resist temptations which are well nigh irresistible, to whose care is committed the social, political, and commercial correspondence and literature, which is the great artery conveying the rich blood of knowledge and civilization, throughout the world, that these men should receive a compensation which will enable them to live and to save sufficient to provide against want, when the day comes that the failing memory no longer retains its impressions and the nerveless hand refuses to respond to the command of the clouded brain?

Resolved, That these resolutions be ordered printed, and that a copy be sent to the Postmaster-General, and to his assistants, to each Senator and Representative in Congress, to the National Convention of Post-Office Clerks, to each association of post-office clerks throughout the Union, and to each of the San Francisco daily papers.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. I made objection to printing remarks on a measure, because it had not been discussed in the House. I now withdraw the objection.

The SPEAKER. Unanimous consent is asked for leave to print remarks upon the Hudson River bridge bill, passed to-day, and also upon the pending bill for the admission of Idaho. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. DORSEY. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. Pending that, the Chair will lay before the House the following personal requests of members.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. SPINOLA, until Monday next.

To Mr. SNIDER, for two days, on account of important business.

To Mr. DUNNELL, indefinitely, on account of death in his family.

SUFFERERS IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

Mr. MOORE, of New Hampshire, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled joint resolution (H. Res. 136) for the relief of sufferers in the Mississippi Valley; when the Speaker signed the same.

CHANGE OF COMMITTEE SERVICE.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BURROWS] desires to be excused from further service on the Committee on Manufactures. Without objection this request will be granted.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair also desires to announce the following appointments on committees, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

On the Committee on the District of Columbia, Mr. MUDD.

On the Committee on Manufactures, Mr. BUCHANAN, of New Jersey, chairman, and Mr. SMITH, of West Virginia.

The motion of Mr. DORSEY was then agreed to; and accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 17 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until 11 o'clock a. m. to-morrow.

EXECUTIVE AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

PUBLIC BUILDING AT WINONA, MINN.

Letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, calling attention to the necessity for an additional appropriation to complete the public building at Winona, Minn., as authorized by law—to the Committee on Appropriations.

MEMORIALS AND RESOLUTIONS OF STATE LEGISLATURES.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, the following memorials and resolutions were introduced and referred as follows:

By Mr. CAREY: Memorial of the Eleventh Legislative Assembly of Wyoming Territory, praying that a funding bill be passed for the relief of the Union Pacific Railroad Company—to the Committee on the Pacific Railroads.

RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, the following resolutions were introduced and referred as follows:

By Mr. FUNSTON:

Resolved, That Tuesday and Wednesday, April 15 and 16, after sixty minutes of the morning hour have expired, be fixed for the consideration, in committee and in the House, of such bills as may be indicated by the Committee on Agriculture of the bills reported by that committee; not to interfere with revenue or general appropriation bills or prior orders or reports privileged under Rule XI;

to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. GEST:

Whereas Washington, Montana, North Dakota, and South Dakota are now States of the Union and entitled to full recognition as such; and
Whereas there are no stars to represent them on the flag that hangs above the Speaker:

Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to procure and put in place, without delay, a flag with forty-two stars, that every State in the Union may have a star in the flag that hangs in the nation's House, and that the same be paid for out of the contingent fund of the House; to the Committee on Accounts.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk and disposed of as follows:

Mr. LACEY, from the Committee on Elections, to which was referred the contested-election case of Edmund Waddell, jr., vs. George D. Wise, from the Third Congressional district of the State of Virginia, submitted a report, accompanied by the following resolutions:

Resolved, That George D. Wise was not elected as a member of the Fifty-first Congress from the Third district of Virginia, and is not entitled to a seat therein.
Resolved, That Edmund Waddell, jr., was elected as a member of Congress from the Third district of Virginia, and is entitled to a seat therein.

Mr. DOLLIVER, from the Committee on War Claims, reported with amendment the bill of the House (H. R. 4174) for the relief of D. W. Bontwell—to the Committee of the Whole House.

He also, from the same committee, reported favorably the following bills of the House; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

A bill (H. R. 7784) for the relief of Agnes and Maria De Leon; and
A bill (H. R. 2182) for the relief of the Madison Female Institute, located at Richmond, Ky.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky, from the Committee on War Claims, reported favorably the following bills of the House; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

A bill (H. R. 4366) for the relief of A. B. Carter;
A bill (H. R. 2630) for the relief of Alexander Moffitt;
A bill (H. R. 3182) for the relief of the heirs of Dr. Nathan Fletcher; and

A bill (H. R. 3191) to refer the claim against the United States of the Florence Masonic Lodge, of Florence, Ala., to the Court of Claims.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky, also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported with amendment the following bills of the House; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

A bill (H. R. 4446) for the relief of William Large; and
A bill (H. R. 3723) for the relief of Stephen Duncan Marshall and George M. Miller, executors of the will of Levi R. Marshall, deceased.

Mr. MAISH, from the Committee on War Claims, reported favorably the following bills of the House; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

A bill (H. R. 3552) for the relief of O. P. Phillips;
A bill (H. R. 4419) for the relief of the heirs of Asa O. Gallup;
A bill (H. R. 7748) for the relief of the legal representatives of Henry W. Archer, deceased; and

A bill (H. R. 7934) for the relief of Henry W. Freedley, late captain, Third Infantry, and assistant quartermaster United States Army.

Mr. CULBERTSON, of Pennsylvania, from the Committee on War Claims, reported favorably the following bills of the Senate; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

A bill (S. 230) for the relief of the heirs of Charles B. Smith, deceased;

A bill (S. 2622) for the relief of John S. Neet, jr.;
A bill (S. 2412) for the relief of Joseph W. Carmack; and
A bill (S. 231) for the relief of Robert H. Montgomery;

Mr. CULBERTSON, of Pennsylvania, also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported favorably the bill of the House (H. R. 876) directing the Secretary of the Treasury to examine and settle the accounts of certain States and the city of Baltimore, growing out of moneys expended by said States and the city of Baltimore for military purposes during the war of 1812—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. RAY, from the Committee on Claims, reported favorably the following bills of the House; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

A bill (H. R. 7949) for the relief of the heirs of John Howard Payne; and

A bill (H. R. 4155) for the relief of P. B. Sinnott, late Indian agent at Grande Ronde agency, State of Oregon.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE, from the Committee on Commerce, reported with amendment the bill of the Senate (S. 1739) providing for a steam-vessel for the use of the civil government of Alaska—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SWENEY, from the Committee on Commerce, reported with amendment the bill of the House (H. R. 7622) to authorize the construction of a ponton bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Davenport, Iowa—to the House Calendar.

Mr. PEEL, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5713) to pay Bluford West for saline salt-work in Cherokee Nation, reported as a substitute therefor, a bill (H. R. 8947) providing for compensation to the estate of Bluford West, deceased, for property taken by the Cherokee Nation; which was read twice, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. MCCORD, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 4647) to authorize the sale of timber on certain lands reserved for the use of the Menomonee tribe of Indians, in the State of Wisconsin, reported as a substitute therefor, a bill (H. R. 8948) to authorize the sale of timber on certain lands reserved for the use of the Menomonee tribe of Indians in the State of Wisconsin; which was read twice, and referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. CARLTON, from the Committee on Claims, reported favorably the bill of the House (H. R. 6994) for the relief of Albert Blaisdell—to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. ROBERTSON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported with amendment the bill of the House (H. R. 637) to provide for the construction of a macadamized road to the national cemetery near Wilmington, N. C., and for other purposes—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. LANSING, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, reported with amendment the bill of the House (H. R. 2717) to confirm to the heirs of Mrs. Courtney Ann Claiborne the title to a certain tract of land in the State of Louisiana—to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FARQUHAR, from the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, reported with amendment the bill of the House (H. R. 4663) to place the American merchant marine engaged in the foreign trade upon an equality with that of other nations—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. FITHIAN and Mr. WHEELER, of Alabama, in behalf of the minority of said Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, submitted their views in writing thereon; which were ordered to be printed.

Mr. BOUTELLE, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported with amendment the joint resolution of the Senate (S. R. 46) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to remove the naval magazine from Ellis Island, in New York Harbor, and to purchase a site and erect a naval magazine at some other point, and for other purposes—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills and joint resolutions of the following titles were introduced, severally read twice, and referred as follows:

By Mr. ROGERS: A bill (H. R. 8938) to define and regulate the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MORROW: A bill (H. R. 8939) to provide for an American register for the steamer Australia, owned by a corporation of the State of California—to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. FINLEY: A bill (H. R. 8940) to construct a macadamized road from the town of Somerset, Pulaski County, Kentucky, to the national cemetery at Logan's Cross-Roads—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BLAND: A bill (H. R. 8941) relating to the fractional silver coins of the United States and their legal-tender character, and to repeal the act of June 9, 1889, making such coins a legal tender for only $10—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. CRAIN: A bill (H. R. 8942) for the improvement of Aransas Pass, Texas—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. POST: A bill (H. R. 8943) to provide for the establishment of a port of delivery at Peoria, Ill.—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. HATCH (by request): A bill (H. R. 8944) to pension licensed pilots who have lost a leg or an arm, or received other permanent disability, while in the discharge of their duties—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. PICKLER: A bill (H. R. 8945) granting right of way to the Omaha and South Dakota Railway Company through the Crow-Creek Indian reservation—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. WASHINGTON: A bill (H. R. 8946) to refund the direct tax, and for other purposes—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CUTCHEON: A bill (H. R. 8949) to reorganize certain staff corps of the Army and to reduce the expense thereof—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SAYERS: A bill (H. R. 8950) to authorize the Haines' Brackett, Fort Clark and Rio Grande Railroad Company to construct and operate a railway through the Fort Clark military reservation in Texas, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CONNELL: A bill (H. R. 8951) to amend an act entitled "An act for the relief of settlers on railroad lands," approved June 22, 1874—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8952) providing for the construction of a military store-house and offices for army purposes at the Omaha military depot, Nebraska, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8953) for the erection of a public building at Lincoln, in the State of Nebraska—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as indicated below:

By Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 8954) to adjust the accounts of Maj. Green Clay Goodloe, paymaster of the United States Marine Corps—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8955) for the relief of James Miller, of Bourbon County, Kentucky—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8956) to pension Mrs. Millie Ritchey, widow of Greenberry Ritchey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CONNELL: A bill (H. R. 8957) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to Robert W. Farnas the sum of $400, for trees furnished and planted on the public square owned by the Government of the United States at Lincoln, Nebr.—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8958) granting a pension to Mrs. E. M. Fisher—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8959) granting a pension to Amos D. Hewell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8960) restoring Robert L. May to the Navy retired-list—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8961) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Joseph McGraw—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8962) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to Frank Rother $225 due him for services as route agent—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8963) granting a pension to William A. Whitaker—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DORSEY: A bill (H. R. 8964) for the relief of Daniel Donovan—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. O'DONNELL: A bill (H. R. 8965) granting a pension to Mattie E. Anson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8966) increasing the pension of Charles F. Sumner—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. OSBORNE: A bill (H. R. 8967) for the relief of Mathias Kindt, late private of Company H, One hundred and seventy-eighth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. REILLY: A bill (H. R. 8968) granting a pension to Susan Stout, widow of William R. Stout, late of Company D, Seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Cavalry Volunteers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STOCKBRIDGE: A bill (H. R. 8969) granting a pension to Edward Johannes—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. TOWNSEND, of Colorado: A bill (H. R. 8970) for the relief of James Brown—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. TRACEY: A bill (H. R. 8971) granting a pension to Victoria Douglass—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8972) to pension Mary A. Ring—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WILLIAMS, of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 8973) granting a pension to Daniel M. Banks—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, the following changes of reference were made:

A bill (H. R. 313) to prohibit the formation of interstate trusts and trade conspiracies—Committee on Manufactures discharged, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

A bill (H. R. 7275) to increase the pension of James H. Wright—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 4791) granting a pension to Mrs. Lydia Avery Pierce—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 5215) granting an increase of pension to Joseph D. Tate—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 7272) granting a pension to Mary S. Carr—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 7274) granting a pension to Loretta Strutton—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 7271) granting a pension to Bridget Turley—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 7273) granting a pension to Julius M. Bates—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 7270) granting a pension to Louis A. Bright—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 4792) granting a pension to Mrs. Abigail Richards—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 5537) for the relief of James A. Rice—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. ANDREW: Remonstrance of William H. Sayword and 21 others, against increasing the duty on lime—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BLAND: Petition of Richard W. Isbell, for pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CANDLER, of Massachusetts: Protest of the New England Shoe and Leather Association, against a duty on hides—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CASWELL: Petition of D. B. Lovejoy and 190 others, citizens of Evansville, Wis., praying for the erection of a public building in that city—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. COVERT: Petition of James S. Wright and others, citizens of Queens County, New York, for an increase of duty on farm products—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Amelia A. Chichester and others, for the suppression of the liquor traffic in military and naval stations—to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. DALZELL: Petition of certain merchants of Pittsburgh and Allegheny, Pa., relative to proposed duties on linens, etc.—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of Encampment No. 6, Union Veteran League, in favor of passage of bill amending homestead laws—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. DINGLEY: Resolutions of American Sabbath Union, favoring an amendment of the Constitution of the United States changing the day of inauguration of the President—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DORSEY: Resolution of Board of Trade of Omaha, relative to world's fair—to the Select Committee on the World's Fair.

By Mr. ENLOE: Petition of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of Memphis, Tenn., in favor of the amendment of the laws so that only American citizens shall be employed on Government works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. FRANK: Memorial for improvement of Missouri River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. GEISSENHAINER: Petition of citizens of Elizabeth, N. J., to secure to citizens of the United States the right to labor on United States works in preference to aliens—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. HENDERSON, of North Carolina: Petition of the Holly Springs Monthly Meeting of Friends of Randolph County, North Carolina, against large expenditures for the Navy and coast defenses—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. HOOKER: Memorial and resolution favoring the subtreasury plan—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KELLEY: Petition of George Graham Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Seneca, Kans., asking for the passage of a service-pension bill, and representing that the bondholders have hitherto banded together to make party platforms and to control legislation affecting the financial policy of the Government, and asking for an increase of the circulating greenbacks by the hundred millions to correspond with the increase of our population and business—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of 470 farmers of Butler County, Kansas, against the passage of a bill said to have been recommended by the Committee on Banking and Currency, providing for the issuing of $2,300,000 of bonds to perpetuate the present banking system, which they consider, if made a law, will work great evil to the country—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. KETCHAM: Remonstrance of the Stanford Society of Friends (68), against the enlargement of the Navy—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, memorial of John H. Evers, Christian Körner, and 109 others, prominent business men of New York, to the Fifty-first Congress, to authorize the Secretary of War to contract with Charles Stoughton and associates for the entire work of building the Harlem Canal—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. LACEY: Petition of A. Donyard and others, citizens of Ottumwa, Iowa, against the passage of legislation restricting immigration—to the Select Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of Board of Trade of Burlington, Iowa, indorsing the Torrey bankrupt bill—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LANE: Petition of citizens of Illinois, favoring Cullom bill—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. LAWS: Petition from Farmers' Alliance of Nebraska, urging passage of House bill 5353, being the Butterworth bill—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. MORRILL: Petition of E. N. Hutchins and 46 others, citizens of Jefferson County, Kansas, asking that Mexican ore be admitted free—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of the County Farmers' Alliance of Kansas, in representative convention, through B. H. Clover, president, and S. M. Dalton, secretary, upon the same subject—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. OSBORNE: Resolutions of San Francisco Post-Office Clerks' Association, favoring the passage of House bill 6447—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. PERKINS: Petition of C. S. Wicks and 50 others, ex-Union soldiers of the late war, and residents of Fredonia, Kans., asking for the passage of the service-pension bill recommended by the last two national encampments of the Grand Army of the Republic—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. REILLY: Petition of Susan Stout, Pottsville, Pa., to accompany House bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SHERMAN: Petition of Ware Clark and others, citizens of Lewis County, New York, asking for increased duty on certain farm products—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. STOCKBRIDGE: Petition of Bricklayers' Union No. 1, of Baltimore, Md., for the employment of none but American mechanics on Government works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. STRUBLE: Resolutions from ex-soldiers and citizens of Smithland, Woodbury County, Iowa, requesting the passage of the service-pension bill and army nurse bill, etc.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WALKER, of Massachusetts: Petition of Maria S. Whiting, praying for pension as mother of John Whiting, deceased, late of the United States Navy—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Martha A. Hale, for pension as widow of Herbert L. Hale—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WATSON: Petition of about 200 citizens of Warren County, favoring passage of service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, April 3, 1890.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I think it is important that there should be a quorum present, and as it is evident there is not one here now I ask for a call of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The roll will be called.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Cullom,	McMillan,	Sherman,
Allison,	Davis,	Manderson,	Stewart,
Barbour,	Dawes,	Mitchell,	Stockbridge,
Bate,	Edmunds,	Morrill,	Teller,
Berry,	Evaris,	Paddock,	Turpie,
Blackburn,	Farwell,	Pasco,	Vance,
Blair,	Faulkner,	Payne,	Voorhees,
Blodgett,	Harris,	Pettigrew,	Walthall,
Casey,	Hawley,	Platt,	Wilson, of Iowa,
Chandler,	Hoar,	Plumb,	Wolcott.
Cockrell,	Jones, of Arkansas,	Pugh,
Coquitt,	Kenna,	Reagan,

Mr. BLACKBURN. I desire to state that my colleague [Mr. BECK] is detained from the Senate by reason of sickness.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Forty-six Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The Journal will stand approved as read, if there be no objection.

ADJOURNMENT FOR GOOD FRIDAY.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I rise to make a privileged motion, that, to-morrow being Good Friday, when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet on Saturday.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion made by the Senator from Vermont.

The motion was agreed to.

COMMITTEE SERVICE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. As authorized by the Senate, the Chair appoints the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW] as a member of the Committee on Public Lands in place of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BLAIR], who has been excused from service on that committee.

NATIONAL ZOOLOGICAL PARK.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2284) for the organization, improvement, and maintenance of the National Zoological Park.

The amendments of the House of Representatives were in section 1, line 1, after the first word "that" to strike out the words "there be, and hereby is, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated," and to insert "the one half of the following sums named, respectively, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and the other half out of the revenues of the District of Columbia," and in line 11, after the word "Institution," to strike out the words "the following sums of money" and to insert "and to be drawn on their requisition and disbursed by the disbursing officer for said Institution;" so as to read:

That the one half of the following sums named, respectively, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and the other half out of the revenues of the District of Columbia, for the organization, improvement, and maintenance of the National Zoological Park, to be expended under the direction of the Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, and to be drawn on their requisition and disbursed by the disbursing officer for said Institution.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask for present action upon the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Vermont asks for present consideration of the bill. The Chair hears no objection, and the question is on concurring in the amendments of the House of Representatives.

Mr. MORRILL. I desire to say a single word in relation to the matter. It is very desirable that there should be an opportunity given to put up the structures and fences that are necessary to be placed upon the park for the keeping of the animals they have already obtained, and such as may be hereafter obtained. It should be done at an early moment; and while the first amendment of the House is one which I think ought not to have been made, because the park is a national park or it is nothing; it as much concerns the States of California and Maine or Texas and New York as it does the city of Washington, and therefore the whole expense should be borne by the nation—

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the Senator is going to ask for a conference in preference to concurring in the House amendments.

Mr. MORRILL. No, I do not propose to ask for a conference, because I understand it would be some time before it would be reached, and it is doubtful at the present time whether or not a delay might not be very inconvenient in getting the park into working order.

Mr. HARRIS. If the Senator from Vermont will allow me, I desire to make a suggestion to him.

Mr. EDMUNDS. We can not hear the debate, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. HARRIS. Agreeing, as I do, with the opinion expressed by the Senator from Vermont, I beg to suggest to him that a conference upon the House amendments will not necessarily involve more than a day or two, and I would prefer that he should move to insist upon a non-concurrence and ask for a conference upon the disagreeing votes. I shall quite agree with him after such a conference in doing whatever may be necessary to accomplish this object, but I think we ought at least to make the effort by a conference with the other House upon the disagreeing votes before we agree to the amendments proposed by the House of Representatives.

Mr. SHERMAN. I feel it a matter of justice to the people of this District to protest against this effort to throw upon them a mere governmental matter. This Zoological Garden is no more a part of the District of Columbia or to be provided for by the money of the people of the District of Columbia than the Coast Survey or any other scientific object fostered by the Government of the United States.

I think there is a disposition in Congress now to throw upon the people of this District, who are heavily taxed at best, a great many objects of expenditure which belong to the Government of the United States; for instance, such as the great tunnel that was put through here, and which has been for the time abandoned. It is a cruel thing to compel the people of this District to pay for that. They have no part or lot in it. So it is with this matter; and I fear that if we shall agree now to this proposition to throw the half of this expenditure upon the people of this District it will be a precedent the effect of which it will be difficult to avoid. It is better, I think, to let it be understood that this Zoological Garden belongs to the people of the United States. The District government has nothing to do with it, and the people of this District have no other interest in it than as citizens of the United States. If we once set the precedent of making the District government bear one-half the expenditures for this rather expensive toy at best, it will probably be continued year after year. I think, therefore, it is better to disagree to the amendments and request a conference.

Mr. MORRILL. I yield to the general expression of Senators, and will ask that the amendments be disagreed to and a conference requested.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Vermont moves that the Senate disagree to the amendments made by the House of Representatives and request a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

Mr. CULLOM. I desire to say a few words which I should like to have said a few moments ago, but I did not desire to come in conflict with the Senator from Vermont. It seems to me that, if the Government is going to have a Zoological Park, to be of any account it ought to be cared for entirely by the Government of the United States, and we should not divide responsibilities with the District of Columbia or any one else. It was for that reason that I inquired whether the Senator was going to ask for a conference or simply move to agree to the amendments of the other House. It seems to me that we ought to insist upon our original proposition.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I agree with the Senator from Illinois that this park ought to be purely under national control and purely a charge upon the nation, for it is of more benefit to the people of the United States altogether who come here, and for the uses of general instruction, than it is to those inhabitants who happen to live within the boundary of this District, just as this Capitol and the other public buildings are. But I should not have needed to say that.

However, I do wish to say in reference to what the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] has said concerning the cruelty, as he thinks, to the tax-payers of this District in paying for the expenditure upon that tunnel which turned out to be unfortunate, that I do not agree with him, and I do not wish what he has said to go as if everybody agreed to his proposition. The government of the District, as we all know, has for many years been under the regulation of Congress, just as the government of a State is under the regulation and authority of its Legislature. If the Legislature of a State, through some mistake or misapprehension, passes a law which imposes a tax or a burden upon some part of the people of the State and not upon them all, a local matter, and it turns out to be unfortunate, I have never heard of a case in which it was thought by anybody that those local people had any claim in morals or in any way upon the State to be reimbursed for the mistake, because mistakes will happen in every government. When this District was under the charge of men elected by people here things never went more wildly and injuriously to the tax-payers of the District than they did then. Therefore I can not see any ground upon which the tax-payers of this District have any moral right to complain that they have borne a part of the expense of a tunnel that turned out to be fraudulently built and of very doubtful expediency if it had been a success.

I only wanted to say that in view of what my friend from Ohio had stated.

Mr. PLUMB. Mr. President, I want to say a word or two in response to what the Senator from Ohio said. I do not undertake to decide now for myself what ought to be done about the expenditure made necessary by the creation of this Zoological Park, but I want to say that I do not think it is inconsistent with the public use of it that part of the expense should be paid for by the District of Columbia. The United States is dealing to-day very handsomely and very generously by the people of this District. Upon the theory that the Government owned one-half of the property or some other theory which satisfied the consciences of those who voted for it, Congress some years ago agreed to saddle one-half the burden of carrying on the government of this District upon the people of the United States, and I was somewhat amazed when I found members of this body justifying themselves in that apportionment of expense upon the theory that the Government owned half of the property in the District, when nearly all that property which it does own consisted of the streets, of which the Government is the owner, it is true, but without any use; that is to say, it is a trustee without use.

In the State in which I live the counties severally own one-half the title to all the streets of all the towns within their respective limits; and yet in that State, filled with inventive people, I never heard any one suggest that because the county was the trustee for all the public in respect of the streets it should pay any part of the taxes on account thereof. The city of Topeka, the capital of that State, does not exact or claim anything from the State in respect of payment of public money because the capital happens to be located there. On the contrary, they are glad it is there, and only wish there was more of it.

Now, the General Government not only pays one-half the expenses of this District, including the cost of the improvement of streets, which in other cities is levied upon the abutting property, but it takes care of every reservation, of all these squares which are so many parks for the benefit of these people. They are an especial tax upon the people of the United States, of which no portion is paid by the people of the District, except as they pay it ratably as the remainder of the people of the United States do. In other words, the Government pays half the taxes and then it takes care, out of its own Treasury, of all the parks of the city, every one of them. It polices the White House grounds; it polices all these different parks and employs an Army officer to look after them and beautify them and adorn them, and to see that they are put in the best possible shape for the delectation and use of the inhabitants of the District as well as everybody else.

It seems to me this Zoological Park might be carried on in the same way. I do not understand that because the Government pays for these parks thereby the people of the District of Columbia are not to use them or that because the District pays for them the people of the United States are not to use them. I think I understand that they want the people of the United States to come here; and yet it would seem that if the District of Columbia should pay for part of this park they would want to exclude the people of the United States from coming here, and put up an advertisement of that kind at their front door and their back door, and say they do not want people to come here, and thus manifest their sincerity in this desire to be excluded from the burdens of maintaining this park.

While it is proper to be just to the people of the District, it is equally proper that we should be just to the great body of the people of the United States. This is a favored District. It is favored in the matter of taxation. There is no city in the United States where the taxes are so small as they are here. I am glad of it. I do not care about that; I do not begrudge them any prosperity; but I undertake to say that it is one of those benefits which largely grow out of the fact that Congress has dealt with them with a generosity which certainly is without a parallel anywhere else in this country.

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. DAWES] asks me what makes real estate here so valuable. It is because this is the Capital. It is because the Government has assumed one-half the burden of maintaining the local government, and thereby makes it an attractive place for people to come; and on other grounds besides its being the Capital the burden of taxation ought to be comparatively small.

I did not start out to say, and I do not say now, as a matter of final conclusion, that this Zoological Park ought not to be the specific property of the Government, to be provided for and maintained out of the national Treasury, but I do want to file a caveat against the idea that we are to go on here upon the theory that these things are to be done out of the Treasury of the United States without making a corresponding burden on the people of this District. It has been proposed in the other body in regard to the enlargement of this park that some portion of the burden should be assessed upon the adjoining proprietors. That is a practice which prevails under the constitutions of various States in regard to public improvements, as well, I think, as in regard to railroads, and it is founded in justice. It would not be unfair, at all events, to say in reference to this park that inasmuch as the adjoining property and all the property of the District is benefited it ought to pay some portion of the burden. I am not saying now that it ought, but I say it would not be unfair to do it. I think when we come to this question it is just as well to take into account all these things and the people out of whom these taxes must come outside of this District, as well as to enlarge all the while upon the duty of the Government to beautify the District and all that sort of thing, and having a large amount of property here of its own which is equally available for all the people of the District, and which adds to the value of the property of the District.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, as it seems to be considered in order to discuss the general merits of this proposition, I have a few words to say.

I concur with the Senator from Kansas in holding that it may possibly be quite equitable that some moderate practical expense of this park should be laid upon the adjoining proprietor, who will be greatly benefited by it, as a fair pecuniary transaction. As far as the body of the District is concerned, I do not think it right to charge them one dollar of it. In the first place, no city of 200,000 population in the United States would dream of establishing such a park, so expensive a thing as a zoological collection. It is not done by Congress for the benefit of these people. It is done for general scientific purposes, to adorn the national Capital, and as an object-lesson, a place of instruction for the whole people of the United States. I do not think that it would be equitable to put a dollar of that expense upon the people of the District, though there should be some moderate assessment upon those adjoining pieces of property which are unquestionably to be greatly benefited by it.

Mr. BLAIR. In connection with this important discussion upon the expenditure proposed in favor of our wild beasts and reptiles and bad birds and all manner of creeping things, I desire to read a memorial which I have just received which bears upon the interests of the children of this country:

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 23, 1890.

At the close of the evening service of the Metropolitan W. Z. Church, D street southwest, between Second and Third, Rev. R. H. G. Dyson, pastor, the following was submitted and unanimously adopted by a standing vote of the entire assembly:

"Whereas we, the communicants and congregational members of the Metropolitan W. Z. Church, believe that the failure to pass the Blair educational bill in the Senate of the United States on last Thursday, March 21, 1890, is a great public calamity, especially to the poorer classes of white and a very large majority of colored youths in the Southern States, and we further believe that the great race problem can be solved only by the educating and improving the condition of all classes of citizens of the United States: Therefore,

"Be it resolved, That we respectfully petition the Congress of the United States to reopen the case and present a new or modified bill that will give our people all the benefits that the defeated bill would have secured, and that we as a unit ask the Senate and House of Representatives to pass the same."

R. H. G. DYSON, Pastor.

J. D. BALTIMORE,

Financial Secretary.

Mr. GIBSON. Mr. President, this Zoological Park established by Congress was not established for the benefit of the people of this District, but for the benefit of the scientific men of this country who would desire to preserve the types of the different wild animals that inhabited this continent. So far from being beneficial to the property-holders adjacent to it, I should think it would be a disadvantage. Surely if I owned property adjoining a zoological park I would be disposed to sell it at a much less price than if it was not located near such a park filled with wild animals.

I can not, therefore, see any propriety whatever in charging any of the benefits of this park either to the adjacent land-holders or the people of the District of Columbia. This is the seat of the National Government, the Capital of a great nation, and for one I feel like making it worthy of a nation of a hundred million or two hundred million people. Among other things, I think it proper that Congress should establish a zoological park to preserve the types of the animals that originally inhabited this continent and that are fast fading away.

I am opposed to the House amendments, but, if it is impossible to pass the bill without concurring in them, under that restraint I shall vote for the bill as it comes from the other House.

I will add that the Senator from Kentucky himself, who is seated in front of me [Mr. BLACKBURN], may remember that near the village in which we were both born there was a park preserved by one of the original settlers of that State, in which the buffalo, the elk, the bear, and the deer were preserved in large numbers, and it became a great object of interest and a curiosity not only to the people in that vicinity, but to people from the Eastern States, many of whom came there to see that large park filled with these animals.

I am sure if this park were established here it would be an object of interest, not to the people of the District of Columbia who are engaged in their business here, nor to the members of Congress who pass but a few years of their lives here, but to the scientific men of the whole country who might be disposed to investigate the laws that relate to these wild animals and all other animals in connection with the discovery of the truth in every direction.

Mr. STEWART. With regard to this particular appropriation, it seems to me that it is proper for the United States to bear all of the expense for the reasons assigned by the Senator from Louisiana, which appear to me to be controlling. But I should like to make a suggestion. I do not think that the policy of charging the Government with half of the expense of the streets in the District by general taxation is working well. It occasions at every session of Congress a fierce conflict as to where the money shall be used, and those who are most successful in pressing their claims get their streets improved and the others do not.

The system of improving streets out of a general fund has generally, in most of the Western cities at least, been a bad one. I do not know how it is here. They tried it on the Pacific coast for many years and it led to controversy as to where the money should be appropriated, and there was dissatisfaction. They finally passed a law in California applying to all cities a general act requiring the property abutting on the street to pay for the improvement, and a street would be improved whenever a majority of the property-owners on the line of the proposed improvement asked for it. That has occasioned a great deal of improvement in San Francisco and other California cities which would not have been made if the money had been paid from a general appropriation.

If that were done here it would relieve the Government and relieve the large tax-payers and improve property considerably, and then the General Government could well afford to expend more money in beautifying the parks and in what relates more to general matters.

I know it will be said that a large portion of the city having been improved from the general fund, to make the change would be unjust and the rest should have the same advantage; but now is a good time to make the changes because the taxes have been principally levied on the property inside the boundaries of the city. I say that it occurs to me that now would be a good time to make the change inasmuch as nearly all the streets inside of the boundary are already improved, and the plan in most of the cities is that where the streets are once improved the necessary repairs shall come out of the general fund. Many new divisions are now being laid out outside of the city, and if the property-owners who expect to make money out of them were allowed to improve the streets whenever they feel disposed to do so at their own expense, it would be a great relief to the District generally and to the Government.

The money expended by the Government should be applied to more general purposes in keeping the streets in repair, but the new work that is to be done might be done by the property-owners. Whenever a majority of the property-owners on any street for any particular distance desire to have work done, let them do it, and the city would then grow fast enough; but if things go on in this way there will be a contest as to the improvement of this and that street out of the general fund, and that will become more and more intense as the city extends outside of the boundary.

There is no objection to having the District all improved if the people are willing to put their own money in it; but there is objection to taxing the Government or the portion of the city that is built up for extending streets into the country. If people are willing to do it for the benefit of the District and to increase the assessable value of property and aid everybody by the expenditure of the money, it seems to me that such a policy would be best. It has been tried in the Western cities and has been found to work well, and I suggest that it be tried here.

As to the present appropriation, it seems to me this park for the purpose of preserving animals ought to be a national park, and I think that is a thing for which the Government should pay the whole expense.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I am very sure, Mr. President, that this Zoological Park has no more sincere advocate or friend than I am, but I will not vote for any bill that proposes to impose upon the people of the District of Columbia any portion of the expense incident to its purchase or its maintenance. I do not intend, either, to offer the plea of poverty on behalf of the people of this District in support of this provision. There is not within the limits of this land a heavier taxed community than the people who reside in this District to-day. It is not going beyond the record nor overstating the facts to say that the bulk of the indebtedness which rests upon this city and this District to-day was put there by reason of the negligence of Congress, it having absolute legislative control over the District.

The Government of the United States supports and maintains the Yellowstone Park at its own expense. It would be just as rational and just as fair to levy a 50 per cent. tax upon the District of Columbia property for the maintenance of the National Park in the Yellowstone as for this park here. It would be just as fair to levy upon the property-holders in the District of Columbia a percentage of the tax that is needed to support the Botanical Garden right near the Capitol, or the public building in which we are sitting, or any of the public property that this Government owns within the limits of this District.

With all deference to the action that the other House may take or may have taken, protesting and declaring my earnest and honest support of the measure that looks to the establishment and maintenance of a park here in this District, not only for entertainment and enjoyment, but for the education of the people of this country, I protest that I will not vote for any bill that is so unfair in its exactions as to require one-half of the money which is needed either to purchase or to maintain it to be collected from the property-holders of this District.

Why, Mr. President, we are told by those whose sources of information are the most reliable that the herds of buffaloes which once roamed the prairies and the plains of this country in uncounted numbers, which many of us within the last ten years have spent weeks in the pleasure time of hunting and destroying, have shrunk until to-day there are less than one hundred buffalo within the limits of the United States outside of the Yellowstone Park and the private parks of private citizens. There are less than one hundred, according to the information that we get from those whose business it is to inform themselves and know. The moose has disappeared practically from our country. Now and then a stray specimen is found in the woodlands of Maine; but from the Northwest the moose has disappeared almost entirely.

This proposition is to establish here at the Capital city a zoological park where these rapidly disappearing specimens of the animals indigenous to this country may be preserved for all time to come, if it be possible; and I am amazed that any gentleman should reach the conclusion that in order to carry out and perfect this national purpose the tax-ridden people of the District of Columbia, who have no voice in either House of Congress, who by the express terms of the Constitution are the victims of any arbitrary power that Congress sees fit to inflict, should be made to contribute a portion of that expense.

Mr. DAWES. Mr. President, I agree with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] that the Zoological Park should be maintained by the Government of the United States. I want, however, to enter my protest against the idea that this is an awfully tax-ridden city.

Mr. President, when the proposition to make the Zoological Park first appeared in the Committee on Appropriations it was suggested that the District commissioners could see to it that those whose real estate was to border it would donate or contribute something out of the lands which they were to sell to the Government for the purposes of this park. Instead of that, every one of them not only refused to contribute a square foot of land, but put up the price of the land that they were to sell to the Government of the United States 100 per cent. more than it was before.

It is contemplated to embrace this park in a larger park, which I hope will be done, but those who reap the most benefit pecuniarily from it and all who do reap it are the tax-payers of this District, and all of the advance in their property serves to lessen the per cent. of their taxation.

The Government of the United States has assumed $33,000,000, expended in grading and paving the streets and avenues of this city, and is paying now the bonds issued by the District for that purpose. The expenditure of these $33,000,000 has enhanced the value of every square foot of taxable property in this city four hundred fold; and yet the Senator from Kentucky talks about a tax-ridden District which can not be compelled to pay upon its enhanced value something towards the money taken out of the Treasury of the United States. They are only taxed $1.50 on the hundred dollars for all their real estate; and every dollar that we expend in these parks here, and which we ought to expend for them, is enhancing the value of the property. The limitation which is fixed by law on taxation here is a rate less than in any other city that I know of in this country.

Mr. President, I believe in beautifying this city; I believe in making everything pertaining to it in some way correspond to the grandeur and greatness of the Government; but those who have pocketed money day by day out of this expenditure, those who are reaping these rich rewards benefiting the real estate of this city and this District, are the last men who ought to come here and complain of the taxes which the citizens of this District pay, the part which they contribute to the necessary expenditures of the District. Nobody asks, nobody ought to ask them to pay for such improvements as these parks, but they ought not to content themselves with merely paying one-half of the current expenses of this District, but they ought to thank God that the lines have fallen to them in such pleasant places.

Mr. MORRILL. I hope that the vote may be now taken.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Vermont that the Senate non-concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MORRILL. I move that the Senate insist on its non-concurrence and ask for a committee of conference.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. MORRILL, Mr. SPOONER, and Mr. VEST were appointed.

BRAZOS TERMINAL RAILWAY COMPANY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1873) authorizing the Brazos Terminal Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Brazos River in the State of Texas; which was, on page 2, line 30, to strike out after the word "States" down to and including the word "freight," in line 31.

Mr. COKE. This being a Senate bill which has come from the other House with a very small verbal amendment, I ask that it may have consideration at this time and that the amendment be concurred in.

Mr. INGALLS. Let the amendment be read.

Mr. VEST. What bill is that?

Mr. INGALLS. Let us hear the bill read as it will be when amended.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read as proposed to be amended.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, line 30, after the word "States," strike out down to and including the word "freight," in line 31; so as to read:

SEC. 3. That the bridge authorized to be constructed under this act shall be a lawful structure, and shall be recognized and known as a post-route, upon which also no higher charge shall be made for the transmission over the same of the mails, troops, and the munitions of war of the United States, passing over said bridge, than the rate per mile for their transmission over the railroads leading to said bridge; and equal privileges in the use of said bridge shall be granted to all telegraph companies; and the United States shall have the right of way across said bridge and its approaches for postal-telegraph purposes.

Mr. INGALLS. Is that the part that was stricken out?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That is the way the section reads as amended.

Mr. INGALLS. Now, let us hear the part that is stricken out.

Mr. VEST. Has that bill as amended been before the Committee on Commerce?

Mr. COKE. It has not. It is a Senate bill which went to the House and is returned with an amendment.

Mr. VEST. I suggest that it had better go to that committee so that we may examine the amendment.

Mr. COKE. Very well. It will take some little time, but if the Senator so desires I am willing that the bill with the amendment shall be referred.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill with the amendment will be referred to the Committee on Commerce.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 344) to grant the right of way to the Pittsburgh, Columbus and Fort Smith Railway Company through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The following bills received yesterday from the House of Representatives were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Commerce:

A bill (H. R. 380) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the Cairo and Tennessee River Railroad Company to construct bridges across the Tennessee and Cumberland Rivers," approved January 8, 1889;

A bill (H. R. 5729) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Oconee River, in the State of Georgia; and

A bill (H. R. 7985) to amend an act entitled "An act to aid vessels wrecked or disabled in the waters contiguous to the United States and the Dominion of Canada," approved June 19, 1878.

The bill (H. R. 8391) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, and for other purposes was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The bill (H. R. 7164) to amend and continue in force "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at Forest City, S. Dak., by the Forest City and Watertown Railway Company," approved August 6, 1888, was read twice by its title.

Mr. MOODY. I understand that that is precisely similar in its provisions to a bill which has been reported from the Committee on Commerce and is now on the Calendar. I should like to ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the measure, as it is important that it should become a law as speedily as possible.

Mr. INGALLS. What is the bill?

Mr. MOODY. It is a bill to amend and continue in force "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at Forest City, in South Dakota, by the Forest City and Watertown Railway Company." A similar bill has been favorably reported by the Committee on Commerce of the Senate, and this is a House bill.

Mr. INGALLS. I rise to morning business.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That being in the nature of an objection, the bill will be referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The bill, I think, ought to be referred, for I see it repeals a section about a draw.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Commerce.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. McPHERSON, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 445) for the erection of a shop at the National Armory, Springfield, Mass.;

A bill (H. R. 3886) to authorize the construction of a bridge and approaches at New York City across the Hudson River, to regulate commerce in and over such bridge between the States of New York and New Jersey, and to establish such bridge a military and post road;

A bill (H. R. 5601) to authorize the proper accounting officers of the Treasury to audit and pay the claim of the county of Schuylkill, in the State of Pennsylvania, for money advanced by it under allotments made by soldiers from said county during the late rebellion, by virtue of section 12 of the act of Congress entitled "An act to authorize the employment of volunteers to aid in enforcing the laws and protecting public property," approved July 22, 1861; and

A bill (H. R. 7498) to establish three new land districts in the Territory of Wyoming.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1612) to construct a road from the city of Staunton to the national cemetery in the county of Augusta, in the State of Virginia.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled joint resolution (H. Res. 136) for the relief of sufferers in the Mississippi Valley; and it was thereupon signed by the Vice-President.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. STEWART presented fourteen petitions signed by 654 members of the Farmers' Alliance and citizens of Nebraska, praying for the free coinage of silver; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. VANCE. I present a memorial of the New Garden Quarterly Meeting of Friends, in Guilford County, North Carolina, respectfully and earnestly remonstrating against the increase of expenditure for naval purposes and for increasing the Army of the United States, treating such action as a menace against the peace of the country. I move that the memorial be referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. VANCE. I also present petitions of members of the bar of Halifax, Beaufort, Edgecombe, Wilson, Northampton, and Martin Counties, in the State of North Carolina, praying for the passage of a bill for the relief of the Supreme Court of the United States, in consequence of the excess of business which has accumulated upon it. I move that these petitions be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. VANCE presented a petition of 42 citizens of Granville County, North Carolina, praying for the free coinage of silver; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. BLODGETT. I present six petitions, all emanating from subordinate unions of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, located in Jersey City, Newark, Mont Clair, New Brunswick, and Elizabeth, in the State of New Jersey, praying for the enactment of laws to secure to citizens of the United States preference over aliens in performing labor on Government works. I move that the petitions be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BLAIR presented a petition of a convention of the Loyal Templars of Temperance, assembled in Lansing, Mich., favoring woman suffrage; which was referred to the Select Committee on Woman Suffrage.

He also presented a petition of the Methodist Wesley Zion Church, of Washington, D. C., Rev. R. H. G. Dyson, pastor, praying for the passage of the educational bill; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. VOORHEES presented the petition of Martin Landis, late a private in Company I, Seventh West Virginia Cavalry Volunteers, praying for a correction of his military record; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented petitions of subordinate unions of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of Indianapolis, Evansville, and Whiting, in the State of Indiana, praying for an amendment of the laws so that only citizens of the United States may be employed on public works; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented memorials adopted by Monthly Meetings of Friends of Henry, Rush, Lake, Randolph, Wayne, and Bartholomew Counties, in the State of Indiana, remonstrating against the expenditure of any more money for the Navy or Army; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. VEST presented a petition of Subordinate Lodge No. 6, of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union, of Nevada, Mo., praying for legislation giving preference to native-born citizens in work on public improvements; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a memorial of 83 retail grocers of the city of St. Louis, Mo., representing that the Conger bill taxing compound lard is an evasion of the police powers reserved to the States; that it will increase the army of revenue officials; that the revenue raised will go into an already overflowing Treasury, and remonstrating against placing a tax on compound lard; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. COCKRELL presented a petition of Subordinate Union No. 6, of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Nevada, Mo., praying for an amendment of the laws so that only citizens of the United States may be employed on public works; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. PASCO presented memorials adopted by the Board of Trade of Ocala, Fla., remonstrating against the terms of the bill known as the McKinley bill, now pending, so far as they relate to an increase of duty on leaf-tobacco suitable for cigar-wrappers, as destructive to the industry of manufacturing Havana cigars; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. CALL presented petitions of the Fernandina (Fla.) Board of Trade and the Pensacola (Fla.) Chamber of Commerce, praying for the passage of the bill transferring the revenue marine to the naval establishment; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE presented a petition of merchants and manufacturers of Battle Creek, Mich., praying for the passage of a national bankrupt law; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. INGALLS presented a petition of 20 citizens of Labette County, Kansas, praying for the free coinage of silver; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a petition of 40 citizens of Atlanta, Ohio, praying for the free coinage of silver; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. GORMAN presented a petition of L. Kuszmaul, president, and F. V. Zoeller, secretary, of Subordinate Union No. 1, Baltimore, Md., of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, praying that aliens may not be employed on public works; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented joint resolutions of the General Assembly of Maryland; which were read and ordered to lie on the table, as follows:

Joint resolutions requesting and directing the Senators of the State of Maryland in the Congress of the United States to use their best efforts to secure the passage of a bill (No. 694) of the House of Representatives of the United States, passed by said House of Representatives March 17, 1890, having for its object the transfer of the revenue-marine service from the Treasury Department to the Navy Department of the United States.

Resolved by the senate and house of delegates of Maryland, That the Senators of this State in the Congress of the United States be, and they are hereby, requested and directed to use all proper means in their power to secure the passage by said Senate of House bill No. 694 of the House of Representatives of the United States, passed by said House of Representatives on the 17th day of March, 1890, having for its object the transfer of the revenue-marine service from the Treasury Department of the United States to the Navy Department.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be immediately transmitted by his excellency the governor to each of our Senators in the Congress of the United States.

R. F. BRATTAN,
President of the Senate.
JOHN HUBNER,
Speaker of the House of Delegates.

Mr. EDMUNDS presented the petition of U. A. Woodbury and others, of Chittenden County, Vermont, praying that a pension be granted to Mary A. Lands, the daughter of a soldier; which, with accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, presented a memorial of the Monthly Meeting of Friends (306 members) of Le Grand, Marshall County, Iowa, remonstrating against appropriations for the construction of a navy; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. MITCHELL presented the petition of Peter Grant Stewart, of Gervais, Oregon, praying compensation for property owned by him and taken and used by the United States for a military reservation near the mouth of the Columbia River, in Pacific County, now the State of Washington; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. PLUMB presented a petition adopted by a mass meeting of old soldiers and seamen, held at Junction City, Geary County, Kansas, praying for the passage of service-pension legislation; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of farmers of Reading, Lyon County, Kansas, praying for the passage of certain financial and other legislation; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HOAR presented a memorial of the Baptist Ministers' Conference of Boston and vicinity, in the State of Massachusetts, and a memorial of the executive committee of the American Baptist Missionary Union, remonstrating against the proposed enumeration of the Chinese in this country; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of citizens of Massachusetts, praying for an increased appropriation for the work of the Civil Service Commission; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MORRILL presented a petition of citizens of Delta, Colo., praying for the free coinage of silver; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. STEWART, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1951) for the relief of John Fuller, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. STEWART. I am also instructed by the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 80) to authorize the promotion of certain assistant surgeons of the Army after twenty years' service, to report it back to the Senate adversely. The necessity for the passage of the bill having passed, the committee recommend that it be indefinitely postponed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That order will be made.

Mr. McMILLAN, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the bill (S. 2601) to change the route of the Rock Creek Railway Company and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3231) for the relief of the legal representatives of George K. Otis, asked to be discharged from its further consideration and that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations; which was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1506) granting relief to Samuel D. Harper, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PASCO, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 471) for the relief of the Norfolk County Ferry Committee, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1666) for the relief of the legal representatives of John H. Jones and Thomas D. Harris, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. BATE, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1761) for the relief of Hector F. Phelps, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. HAWLEY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 753) authorizing and directing the sale of certain property belonging to the United States, situate in Pittsburgh, Pa., reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. 41) authorizing the use and improvement of Castle Island, in Boston Harbor, reported adversely thereon; and the resolution was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. Res. 14) authorizing the use and improvement of Castle Island, in Boston Harbor, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I do not know whether the Senate would take up that resolution and pass it now. I should like to do it. It is very important that the public work in that park should go on, and if there be no objection I should like to have it considered at the present time.

Mr. HAWLEY. I shall be very glad to have it done.

Mr. VEST. Let us get through with the morning business.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection being made, the joint resolution goes on the Calendar.

Mr. DAVIS, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1852) for the relief of Sidney J. Hare, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2794) for the relief of Royal E. Dake, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1696) for the relief of Asher W. Foster, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2086) to correct the military record of John Hunsmann, late of Company G, Eleventh Regiment Kentucky Cavalry, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. VEST, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7993) to amend section 4 of "An act to authorize the county of Laurens, in the State of Georgia, to construct a bridge across the Oconee River at or near Dublin, in said county and State," approved June 18, 1888, reported it without amendment.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. PUGH introduced a bill (S. 3378) to grant to the Mobile, Jackson and Kansas City Railroad Company the use of 4 acres of land belonging to the United States Government, for terminal purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. VOORHEES introduced a bill (S. 3379) for the relief of Daniel Donovan; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3380) for the relief of James Entwistle; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3381) to amend the military record of William M. Porter, alias William S. Mackay; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3382) to increase the pension of Mrs. Antonia B. Lynch; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3383) to appropriate the sum of $60,000 to aid in the proper decoration of the soldiers' and sailors' monument now being constructed at Indianapolis, Ind., under the authority of said State; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Library.

Mr. MITCHELL introduced a bill (S. 3384) for the relief of Peter Grant Stewart, of Oregon; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. SHERMAN introduced a bill (S. 3385) for the relief of James A. Stewart; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 3386) for the relief of Aquila C. Fetting; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. EDMUNDS introduced a bill (S. 3387) to provide for an additional associate justice of the supreme court of the Territory of New Mexico; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. INGALLS introduced a bill (S. 3388) granting a pension to George Wolf; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. COCKRELL introduced a bill (S. 3389) for the relief of M. M. Lynch; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. PETTIGREW introduced a bill (S. 3390) to define the routes of steam-railroads in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. PLUMB introduced a bill (S. 3394) for the relief of Robert McGee; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Select Committee on Indian Depredations.

Mr. FAULKNER introduced a bill (S. 3395) to restore the pension of Jane M. McCrabb; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BLAIR introduced a bill (S. 3391) to regulate the compensation of per diem employees of the United States Government; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. BLAIR. This bill has been pending in one or two Congresses, and it provides that the lowest sum paid to per diem employees shall be $2 a day. A vast number of laboring people are interested in this bill, and I am informed that in two States a general law has been enacted. I move that the bill be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. WASHBURN introduced a bill (S. 3392) to amend an act making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, approved March 2, 1889; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and the Post-Roads.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, introduced a bill (S. 3393) to provide for the sale of the arsenal grounds and for the establishment of a new military post at Little Rock, Ark.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. INGALLS introduced a bill (S. 3396) granting a pension to James M. Monroe; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. INGALLS introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 70) providing for the distribution of certain publications of the Government to depositories of public documents; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. DOLPH, from the Committee on Coast Defenses, reported three amendments intended to be proposed to the fortification appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

LAND DISTRICTS IN WYOMING.

Mr. PADDOCK. I ask that House bill 7498, which came from the House of Representatives this morning, be laid before the Senate.

The bill (H. R. 7498) to establish three new land districts in the Territory of Wyoming was read twice by its title.

Mr. PADDOCK. A bill exactly similar to this has been reported from the Committee on Public Lands, being Senate bill 2804, Order of Business 490. I ask that the House bill may take the place of the Senate bill, and I ask for the present consideration of the House bill.

Mr. PLUMB. I object to that.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made and the bill will lie over.

Mr. PLUMB. I do not see any reason why that bill any more than any other should have such a preference and be taken out of order. The bill can take its place on the Calendar, and it will probably be reached on Saturday or any time the Calendar is in order. It is not fair to the Senate to take up measures in that way.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. PLUMB. I have no objection to its going on the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar in the place of the Senate bill without a reference, if there be no objection. The Chair hears none.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 445) for the erection of a shop at the National Armory, Springfield, Mass., was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The bill (H. R. 3886) to authorize the construction of a bridge and approaches at New York City across the Hudson River, to regulate commerce in and over such bridge between the States of New York and New Jersey, and to establish such bridge a military and post road was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

The bill (H. R. 5601) to authorize the proper accounting officers of the Treasury to audit and pay the claim of the county of Schuylkill, in the State of Pennsylvania, for money advanced by it under allotments made by soldiers from said county during the late rebellion, by virtue of section 12 of the act of Congress entitled "An act to authorize the employment of volunteers to aid in enforcing the laws and protecting public property," approved July 22, 1861, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PRESERVATION OF ORDER.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair desires to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that there is so much conversation on the floor of the Senate that it is with great difficulty that the reporters can hear Senators when they address the Chair. At times it is quite impossible for them to take down the remarks made by Senators. Senators will facilitate the proper transaction of business if when they desire to engage in conversation they will retire to the cloak-rooms.

PORT OF FERNANDINA, FLA.

Mr. PASCO. I ask unanimous consent that Order of Business 634 be taken up now. It is a short bill, rendered necessary by the extension of the commerce of Fernandina, and it is unanimously reported from the Committee on Commerce. I shall be absent from the city for a few days and I should very much like to have the bill passed now. It is but five lines long.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Florida [Mr. Pasco] asks unanimous consent to consider a bill the title of which will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (S. 2897) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend the statutes in relation to immediate transportation of dutiable goods, and for other purposes," approved June 10, A. D. 1880.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let it be read for information.

Mr. HOAR. Let the bill be read in full, subject to objection.

The bill was read; and, by unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration. It declares that the privileges of the first section of the act approved June 10, 1880, entitled "An act to amend the statutes in relation to immediate transportation of dutiable goods, and for other purposes" shall be extended to the port of Fernandina, Fla.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Is there a report?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is no report accompanying the bill.

Mr. FRYE. We are not in the habit of making reports in these cases. This is rendered necessary by the discovery of phosphate in the vicinity.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to reserve the right to object and to ask the chairman of the committee, as there is no written report, to explain the bill.

Mr. FRYE. We only propose to make Fernandina a port of delivery.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ABSENCE OF THE VICE-PRESIDENT.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair desires to inform the Senate that he expects to be absent several days during next week. The announcement is now made so that the Senate may take such action as may seem proper in view of the resolution passed March 12 with reference to the appointment of a President pro tempore of the Senate.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. McPHERSON, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills: A bill (S. 428) to amend article 103 of the Rules and Articles of War; and

A bill (S. 3025) to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to gather full and authentic information as to the present condition and preservation of the fur-seal interests of the Government in the region of Alaska, as compared with its condition in 1870; also, full information as to the impending extinction of the sea-otter industry, and kindred lines of inquiry, etc.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 430) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to cause to be examined certain vouchers filed, or to be filed, by the State of Missouri, or her agent or agents, for sums claimed to be due from the Government of the United States on account of payments made by said State since April 22, 1832, to the officers and enlisted men of her militia forces for military services rendered to the United States in the suppression of the rebellion, as evidenced by the proper pay-rolls heretofore filed with, examined, and accepted by the Government of the United States, and to report to Congress, with an amendment in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolutions; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 4553) to authorize the Secretary of War to deliver to the State of Colorado the flags carried by Colorado regiments;

A bill (H. R. 8201) to amend the Articles of War relative to the punishment on conviction by courts-martial;

A bill (H. R. 8394) to amend chapter 67, volume 23, of the Statutes at Large of the United States;

Joint resolution (H. Res. 68) authorizing Capt. George S. Anderson, Sixth Cavalry, to accept from the President of the French Republic a diploma conferring the decoration of Chevalier of the National Order of the Legion of Honor;

Joint resolution (H. Res. 93) authorizing the heirs of Rear-Admiral Charles H. Baldwin to receive a snuff-box from the Czar of Russia;

Joint resolution (H. Res. 120) authorizing Henry Vignaud to accept from the President of the French Republic a diploma of commander of the Legion of Honor; and Joint resolution (H. Res. 121) authorizing Lieut. Aaron Ward, United States Navy, and Capt. H. C. Cochran, United States Marine Corps, to accept from the President of the French Republic diplomas of the Legion of Honor.

ECKINGTON AND SOLDIERS' HOME RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. HOAR. I move to take up the motion to reconsider the vote on the bill referred to yesterday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRIS in the chair). The Senator from Massachusetts moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendment of the House of Representatives was agreed to on the bill (S. 157) to amend the charter of the Eckington and Soldiers' Home Railway Company.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That motion is not debatable I know, but I ask to be allowed to say that I hope the question of reconsideration will be taken because it is right to take the sense of the Senate about it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Massachusetts to take up the motion to reconsider.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I move to postpone the consideration of this motion until the first Monday in December next. That will test the sense of the Senate just as well as it can be done in any other way, and when I can be heard I will state why I make the motion just as briefly as I possibly can.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will please pause a moment. When Senators cease conversation and resume their seats the business of the Senate will proceed.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, when this bill, it being a Senate bill, passed the Senate originally my attention was not called to it, and probably on account of my own fault of absence from illness or whatever, and it apparently passed the Senate in the ordinary course of routine business, and saying that implies no reflection upon anybody whatever. It provided that this company—

Is hereby authorized to extend its tracks and run its cars thereon through and along the following-named streets: Beginning at the intersection of New York avenue and Fifth street, northwest, south along Fifth street, northwest, to G street, northwest, and thence west along G street, northwest, to the east line of Fifteenth street, northwest—

Which is the Treasury corner—

and also beginning at the present terminus of its Cemetery Branch on the east side of Lincoln avenue, and thence northerly along Lincoln avenue to a point opposite the entrance to Glenwood Cemetery, and also beginning at the intersection of New York avenue and North Capitol street; thence north along said street to the south boundaries of grounds of the Soldiers' Home: Provided, That if electric wires or cables are used to propel its cars over said streets from New York avenue and Fifth to Fifteenth street northwest the same shall be placed under ground—

Which was very right and proper if the line is to go there at all—

And provided further, That the said company shall not be permitted to stop its cars at its western terminus, or at any point within the city limits, for a longer time than is necessary to take on and let off its passengers. Said company shall charge not exceeding five cents fare for one continuous ride from any point on its line to the terminus of its main line or any of its branches—

That I need not allude to, because it is a mere matter of detail about the management of trains, and I want to save the time of the Senate all I can—

And said company is authorized to use overhead wires on its North Capitol street branch.

Sec. 2. That so much of the original charter of the Eckington and Soldiers' Home Railway Company, granted by act approved June 19, 1888, as authorized the construction of a branch on First street, west, from New York avenue to the south boundary of the Soldiers' Home be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

That is to say, it is moved by this act from First street to North Capitol street, and then it provided for an increase of capital stock to which there is no objection, and then it provided for limitations of time within which these extensions should be made, namely, on G street to commence within three months and operate within a year; and on the North Capitol street line going about 2 or 3 miles, I suppose, from the Capitol, but starting where it does, probably a mile and three-quarters, or whatever it may be, to the Soldiers' Home. They were to have one year to complete the North Capitol street line after the street should have been opened and graded; that is to say, at the public expense, so as to give them a preliminary and fixed route to monopolize, to have the advantage of using that street, practically, of course, to the exclusion of everybody else whenever the settlements in that direction should justify the public purse in putting the street in a condition for habitation.

Mr. President, the bill went to the other House in that way, and the House of Representatives sent it back with this amendment, that it is to be considered as an amendment of the act of June 19, 1888, granting the charter and subject to the limitations and conditions mentioned in that act.

When the matter was up before I was not familiar with the history of the transaction except in one respect, and so the amendment that I offered did not, as I now think on examining the whole subject and getting all the papers, come anywhere near doing what Congress ought to do for the protection of the public interests, and that is the reason why I have moved to postpone this motion to reconsider, which is in effect of course postponing the subject until December in the hope that meanwhile on some appropriation bill or otherwise Congress will provide for some commission to examine the whole street-railway subject as to places and plants and overhead or underground wires, etc., so that at the next session we may act on all these subjects, for there are ten or fifteen different projects going everywhere to be considered, knowing what we are doing justly for the benefit of the Capital and the people of the District. That is the reason of my motion.

Now, it is to be said that the original charter of this company gave it very large privileges and did not require the company to comply by building any roads. It only got, as they say on the canals in New York, a lockage, a preliminary grant to hold out until it should be convenient to exercise it for a great extent of territory. It may be wise or unwise to have railways there when the time comes. But since the matter was up before I have sent to the commissioners and Engineers' Office and have got a map of the District of Columbia which shows all the existing railways, those incorporated and not constructed and the proposed extensions of this particular railway; that is, the G street line and that going up North Capitol street instead of First street inside of the city for two or three blocks—about three blocks, I suppose—and then striking on north. The rights the company now has by grant, not to be exercised until the condition of public affairs in the way of the growth of the city to the northward shall make it necessary for the public interests to open streets and grade them and put them in condition so that the company can lay down its tracks without any expense, are represented by the red dotted lines which begin at Boundary street and First street, east, I think, or very near there, just east of North Capitol street, and extend up around the east side of the Soldiers' Home, and finally lose themselves at what is called the Riggs road, which is almost the boundary of the District.

Then another route that it already has, to take effect whenever it is convenient and not expensive to lay down the tracks, goes straight on over to what was the National Fair Association ground, a horse-trotting ground, which, I believe, has come to grief, but still it is good ground and somebody will take it up. Then there is another authorized line that goes up First street—now changed to North Capitol street—to the boundary of the Soldiers' Home, up to the east side of the new basin or water reservoir.

All the red lines on the map before me represent a grant that Congress made in the original charter, excepting that one of these is changed by a street, but in effect it is the same thing; they represent an unlimited grant in point of time, giving a monopoly in advance of settlement and street grading, and that need only be exercised and put in operation whenever there are streets laid there and the proper grading, etc., done, so that the tracks can be laid down.

I submit, with great respect to the Senate of the United States, that that was not a wise thing to do, but it has been done. Now comes the company with this bill, having all these prearranged exclusive rights in effect. Congress, of course, would not allow two railways to run through the same street with the same outlets unless they ran on the same tracks. So—for that is the fundamental thing, I suppose, as regards the interest of the company—they want to run a line through G street from Seventh street and New York avenue, where they now start, with their overhead wires, against all the morality of the act of Congress of last year; but they got it through the commissioners in some way just before the time expired that Congress had provided, and after the Senate and the House had both expressed their opinions about overhead wires. They ask the Senate to give them authority to run through G street to the Treasury—that is the short way of stating it—with a double track, but with under-ground wires, which so far as the wires are concerned is perfectly right and necessary, for that is the only way it should be done, in my opinion, and I could show it if I had the time, for we have had a great deal of information since this matter was up before.

G street is a narrow street. I believe it is 42 feet wide between the curbs. That is the most that has been stated. A double track in that street operated by any sort of railway contrivance will make the spaces between the outside of the tracks and the projection of the cars and the curbs such that two carriages can not pass unless they are both in the same longitudinal line. If any carriage is backed up or any cart or wagon or whatever to unload anything, and is not in its true line in movement, there is not space between the car and the curb, as I understand, to get on at all.

When you come to the Interior Department, going west on G street from Fifth, where this thing is to start, there is a jog in G street, because when the Interior Department was built, in order to make it of the size thought proper, it had to make a projection to the north; the street was jogged out at right angles, crossing the block between Seventh and Ninth streets and crossing Eighth street so as to make the street the same width, and then at Ninth street G street jogs back again.

With these two curves and with this double track in this narrow street, it is going to be a great injury to any property that is not used for business purposes, and there is no provision (as there ought to be in everything of this kind) that when any private property, whether it is taken or not, is injuriously affected, to the extent of that injury, offsetting the benefit, compensation ought to be made. That is justice, as was found in the city of New York about their elevated railroads and so on.

There is another thing about this G street matter. For the most of this distance, for all of it in fact, from Fifth street, which is on the west side of Judiciary Square, clear to the Treasury building, there is a line already, one block off, on F street, and if any more east-and-west lines are needed, it would appear to me, and I think to anybody else, that they ought to be at least two blocks off. So instead of being on G street this line ought to be on H street. But when you come to H street there is the H street line which begins out west and goes clear through to Seventeenth street and goes east on H street to Fourteenth street. Then there is the New York avenue line, which runs up New York avenue until it strikes H street at about Fifth, I imagine, or Sixth, perhaps—somewhere there—and goes through H street east, I do not know but to the very boundary of the city, certainly to the Government Printing Office; so that H street is already occupied for all substantial purposes of public convenience, including the New York avenue line, which takes a part of it, and the Metropolitan line, which takes the other part. Then, in order to get this line for the benefit of the stockholders and persons interested, to communicate with the center of affairs at the Treasury corner, we are to have three street-railway lines on three distinct streets, only a block apart, side by side. I do not think myself that that is a wise thing to do. If it can be shown that it is, of course I am for it.

Then it is to be said, Mr. President, that, so far as I know or have heard, there has been no petition, representation, or application on the part of the citizens and property owners of G street asking for any street railway at all. It is what on the continental system might be called an application of this railway for its own interest to have a competing through line to the Treasury Department for the benefit of its stockholders. Well, they have a perfect right to ask it, and if we are wise or unwise enough to give it, the thing is done; but in respect of any public necessity felt by any body of citizens of Washington living on that street or owning property on it or anywhere else in the city of Washington, except the owners of this railway, I have not heard of any petition or application.

That is the way the matter stands. Therefore, Mr. President, with the greatest respect to the Committee on the District Columbia, who, I think, were misled about this business, I have thought that it would be better to postpone the consideration of this matter of a demand for private interests until a further investigation could be had.

Now, I have only to say this in addition, because by and by perhaps I shall speak about the overhead-wire question, for we have a great deal of more valuable information about that. I do not think this company is justly entitled to appeal just now for any favors from Congress. It put its overhead wires from Seventh street along New York avenue to the boundary of the city after Congress had expressed its opinion in definite language that overhead wires were not for the safety of the public and had passed an appropriation bill which provided that after the 15th of September no overhead wires should be put up.

Mr. INGALLS. Will the Senator permit me one moment at that point?

Mr. EDMUNDS. Certainly.

Mr. INGALLS. As it is important for the just consideration of this question, I admit that the appearances are against the corporation under the statement of the Senator from Vermont, but the truth is that the arrangement and contract was made between the commissioners, the parties then authorized to give this consent, and this corporation, a considerable period of time before the expression of Congress in the section of the appropriation bill to which the Senator refers. Therefore, while there may be a technical and apparent violation, yet as a matter of fact, and as I am informed, a contract was made and the materials purchased, and it was thought that it was not in any sense a violation of the order of Congress as expressed in that section of the appropriation bill to allow these vested rights to be carried out.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from Vermont will allow me to supplement the statement of the Senator from Kansas. I venture to say that my acquaintance with the Senator from Vermont will allow me to state one fact—

Mr. EDMUNDS. With great pleasure.

Mr. HOAR. My knowledge of this subject comes from a corporation in Massachusetts which is engaged in the manufacture of all sorts of electrical appliances, the Thomson-Houston company. It is a corporation controlled and managed by men of very high character and of very high scientific attainments, and they have taken great pains in the equipment of this particular road which they had contracted, as the Senator from Kansas says, to have built, to make it a model road as far as the exhibition of electrical appliances goes.

At the time when that bill was passed, of which the Senator from Vermont speaks—the original bill authorizing this Eckington road to be built was before the Senate—the Senator from Vermont rose in his place and made a very earnest and impressive statement indeed to the Senate in regard to the danger from overhead wires, and arrested the progress of the bill at that time, and it was staid. Thereupon, receiving information from these constituents of mine, I moved that a committee of the Senate be requested to investigate the subject, to investigate the correctness of the information on which the Senator from Vermont had made his statement. That committee investigated—the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] can correct me if in any respect I am in error in my recollection—that committee investigated the subject very carefully according to the scientific lights then existing and made a unanimous report to the Senate, unless I err now in my recollection, affirming the entire safety of these arrangements, and thereupon this bill, which had been staid to await the result of that investigation, this Eckington bill, was passed.

So they had every right to understand that with regard to this very matter the Senate had concluded its inquiry, was satisfied with its inquiry, and had passed the bill authorizing the construction of this road. They put up, as is well known, the overhead wires only where the road runs out of the city, where they are not a disfigurement to the travel of inhabited streets on which there are costly dwellings. That is the story about that.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, I am glad that the Senator from Massachusetts has made the statement that he has, for what I wish to do only is to endeavor to promote the interests and safety and comfort of the people of the United States who live in this District and who come to it. I have not any constituents who are interested in the matter, and if I had it would not make any difference to me, as I am sure it does not to my friend from Massachusetts. I do not remember about the passage of the original charter or my having said anything in regard to it, but I dare say the Senator from Massachusetts is right if he has looked it up, because we have so many things to do that I very frequently say something about a bill that a year afterwards I have forgotten about entirely.

I have no recollection of it at all. No doubt what the Senator states is right; but before this road was built and before, as I now remember—and I think the documents are in these papers, but I will not go over them much, because I do not wish to prolong the time of the Senate, which is valuable—before this railroad was built, and, as I believe the documents will show, before the railway had any authority to put an overhead wire above the streets at all (which must depend upon a permit from the District commissioners), the act of Congress was passed which said that after the 15th of September there should be no more overhead wires. That act of Congress was passed on discussion, and not sub silentio, but with everybody's eyes wide open, right or wrong, to the danger or safety of that sort of thing. When that act passed this company had no right under its charter, whatever that was, to put an overhead wire in the streets of this city at all. When the act passed saying that after the 15th of September nothing more of that kind should be done, though, to be sure, leaving it so that the commissioners might, as Congress supposed—in order to make the necessary connection or some little thing of administration in the existing overhead wires—let parties have a little leeway, they proceeded deliberately to grant to this new corporation with a new grant the right to put overhead wires from Seventh street northwest to the Boundary, I think, as I stated the other day—

Mr. HARRIS. Will the Senator from Vermont allow me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COCKRELL in the chair). Will the Senator from Vermont yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. EDMUNDS. With great pleasure.

Mr. HARRIS. If I understood the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS], the chairman of the District Committee, he was quite right in the statement that he made. If the Senator from Vermont will go back to the original charter of this railroad company he will find that it authorized the use of horse, electric, or cable power, without defining as to how either power should be applied. The permission to put up the poles and the overhead wires was obtained from the District commissioners before the passage of the act to which he refers. The contract was made by the company for the construction of the road and the material necessary to construct it, and it was partly constructed before the passage of that act.

Mr. HOAR. May I ask the Senator from Tennessee if it is not also his belief that the postponement of the operation of that act from May to September was inserted for the very purpose, which was just, that existing contracts should be permitted to be carried out?

Mr. HARRIS. As to the motives of the Senators reporting and the Senators passing that act, of course my opinion is worth no more than that of any other Senator or any other person, and in addition to that statement the Senator will remember that the Senate passed a resolution requiring or directing the Committee on the District of Columbia to report such a resolution forbidding the putting up of overhead wires. The Committee on the District of Columbia did report such a resolution, but unanimously recommended that it be not agreed to. It never was agreed to by the Senate.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, if I can have the floor for a few minutes to interrupt my friends on all sides, I should like to say on that subject that if this statement of the 15th of September, as the time when the provision in the appropriation bill should take effect and be absolutely prohibitory, was inserted for the purpose of giving this railway the right to get up its overhead lines and so on before that time, I feel safe and certain in stating that I never heard of it, and I affirm my belief that nobody else ever heard of it on the floor of this Chamber, and if there is anybody on the floor of this Chamber who had heard of it on the floor, I should like him to stand up and say it now, and in the language of the ancient statesman, "I pause for reply." There was not any. The object, as the discussion on the appropriation bill will show, of this extension until the 15th of September was what I stated before, that no small matter of connection of the telephone, of the telegraph, or of the lighting companies might be interrupted, in order to get what for the time being might be done, and that was all.

I am not blaming this company. Like every other corporation that has capital and pluck and energy and friends, it was going in to make money in the best way it could in conformity with the law, and the law did not prevent the commissioners of the District, until the 15th of September, from granting this very thing. They got the commissioners to do it. In my opinion the commissioners did very wrong. I will not characterize it by any stronger statement which perhaps it deserves. These business gentlemen got it out of them. So the road was built.

The charter provided most liberally—for I am now on the point of any particular favor or urgency this company is entitled to ask—the charter of the company provided that, in lieu of all other taxes, all the contribution that they should make to the public purse in this District should be 4 per cent. of their gross earnings from passengers. "Gross receipts" it said, but that of course did not mean stock paid in, but gross earnings from travel.

There have been passed since that company began to operate, as I have found to the grief of my slender purse, two, if not three, periods of paying taxes in this District, and I have found, as one humble citizen owning the little house in which I live, that the payments of taxes for ordinary persons is like death, very inevitable. After this matter happened the other day, I tried to find out all about this company and about its reports which it was required to make, sworn reports to the Secretary of the Treasury or somebody by its officers of its doings and operations and income and receipts and expenditures, and a sworn report of the names of its stockholders. I sent to the Treasury Department, which I supposed had to do with the public moneys in the District of Columbia as well as of the United States, to inquire whether this company had paid the 4 per cent. on its gross income. I received a reply from the Secretary of the Treasury, dated the 10th of March, as follows:

I learn through the office of the District commissioners that the Eckington and Soldiers' Home Railway Company has not paid to the District of Columbia the 4 per cent. of its gross earnings required under the terms of the act of June 12, 1888.

They made the first report called for by the charter, but by a mere accident, I suppose, did not make it under oath as it regarded who the stockholders were; but I suppose that was a mere accident, because it is impossible to conceive that there would be any subterfuge, or color, or misarrangement about who were the people really interested in the road, as in some State might possibly happen, but certainly not here in the District of Columbia; and so I assume that the failure to give a sworn report of the list of stockholders was a mere accident.

There was a sworn report of the receipts and disbursements and the gross earnings of the line for a short time of the first six months report, that a few thousand dollars (the 4 per cent. on which might not be more perhaps than $500), a sum that perhaps one half of the Senators, if they were taxed against them, as we are all said to be millionaires, might possibly raise the money to pay like anybody else. They did not pay it. Then the next time for paying taxes came, when the receipts of this company had of course gone up immensely. They did not pay that; and in the face of that delinquency they come, and if they have paid it since then they have paid it probably as they did the assessment of $10,000 for putting the streets in order that they built through in the District on the very day, by some curious coincidence, that my friend from Kansas, whom I do not see here, introduced a resolution directing the commissioners to report whether that company had paid for the expenditures of the District in putting the streets in order, as the charter and general law required.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will suspend until the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business.

Mr. CULLOM. It is only 1 o'clock.

The SECRETARY. Report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections on the contested seats in the Senate from the State of Montana.

Mr. CULLOM. I think, under the circumstances, as the election case is up for consideration, that it ought to be finished to-day, and this bill had better go over for the present.

Mr. HARRIS. I do not propose to raise any question of order.

Mr. EDMUNDS. My friend from Massachusetts has the Montana matter in charge. I am perfectly willing to go on or not, as may be the pleasure of the Senate.

Mr. HOAR. I understand the Senator from Vermont desires, in consequence of the state of his health, to be absent from Washington, and that that absence may begin very soon. I thought it was just to him to call up this motion while he was here, rather than call it up in his absence, and the Senate will see from what he has already said that it would have been very improper to call it up after his departure. Now, whether this matter had better be finished or the Montana case gone on with at once I will leave to the determination of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. HARRIS. I wanted to suggest—

Mr. HOAR. I think we had better finish this matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Delaware yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. GRAY. Yes.

Mr. HARRIS. I wanted to suggest to the Chair that when the order was made to meet at 11 o'clock instead of 12 o'clock I am not aware of any change of the rule that requires the transaction of routine business and the consideration of the Calendar under Rule VIII up to the hour of 2 o'clock, and I am inclined to think that the unfinished business should not be laid before the Senate until the hour of 2 o'clock.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The following is the order in regard to the morning hour:

Resolved, That after to-day, unless otherwise ordered, the morning hour shall terminate at the expiration of two hours after the meeting of the Senate.

Mr. HARRIS. I thought the language of the rule was "until 2 o'clock."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. "Two hours after the meeting of the Senate."

Mr. INGALLS. What is the date of that order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. August 10, 1888.

Mr. INGALLS. That would not of course apply to the present order of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That fixes the morning hour two hours after the meeting of the Senate.

Mr. INGALLS. For that session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. "Until otherwise ordered."

Mr. INGALLS. It has been since otherwise ordered, for after that the Senate amended it to meet at 12 o'clock. But while it is true that the custom has been when the hour of meeting was fixed at 11 o'clock to have the consideration of morning business expire at the end of two hours, it has always been in pursuance of a stated order of the Senate. The precedent would not apply; and in regard to the matter now under consideration it seems to me that the wishes of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] ought to be consulted. If he is ready to go on, he ought to be allowed to proceed, as he was on the floor at the time of the adjournment last evening.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That was the reason why the Chair recognized the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] as entitled to the floor.

Mr. EDMUNDS. If the Senator from Delaware will allow me, I wish to say to my friend from Massachusetts and the rest of the Senate that if I should not be present when this Eckington matter again comes up I beg that nobody will wait for me. I have stated almost all that I could have wished to state in regard to it.

Mr. HOAR. I think in view of what the Senator from Vermont has said in regard to a possible absence from the Senate when this matter is resumed I shall endeavor to call it up again on Saturday morning at the conclusion of the routine morning business. I think I ought to say that I shall submit to that Senator, if I can have an opportunity, an amendment which will cover, as I understand, all the objections he has heretofore so far raised to the condition of legislation in regard to this company, except the single objection that the locality where it is authorized to go will not be affected by these amendments. In other words, I understand that this company is willing to have its right to maintain overhead wires absolutely expire in three years, according to this amendment. So, unless the public opinion of the country is so informed as to the entire safety and security of these contrivances that the authority is then renewed, it shall end.

I understand they are also willing, in answer to what the Senator has been saying last, to have a provision enacted that all the rights which they have got to lay down any tracks or any roads in this District shall expire in one year from the present time, and if the thing is not completed in that time all rights shall be forfeited if not acted upon in that time. I make that suggestion to the Senator.

ELECTION OF PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE.

Mr. CULLOM. Will the Senator from Delaware allow me to introduce a resolution?

Mr. GRAY. Certainly.

Mr. CULLOM. In pursuance of the announcement of the Vice-President a few moments ago of his desire to be absent from the Senate, I offer the resolution which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That JOHN J. INGALLS, a Senator from the State of Kansas, be, and he hereby is, elected the President pro tempore of the Senate, to hold office during the pleasure of the Senate in accordance with the resolution of the Senate adopted on the 12th day of March, 1890, on the subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator ask for the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. CULLOM. I do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the resolution was considered, and agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will designate the Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM] to conduct the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS], the President pro tempore of the Senate, to the chair.

Mr. INGALLS, escorted by Mr. CULLOM, advanced to the desk, and the oath of office having been administered to him he took the chair as President pro tempore.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. CULLOM. I offer an additional resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Ordered, That the Secretary wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that the Senate has elected JOHN J. INGALLS, a Senator from the State of Kansas, President of the Senate pro tempore, to hold and exercise the office in the absence of the Vice-President from time to time, during the pleasure of the Senate, in accordance with the terms of its resolution passed March 12, 1890, as follows:

Resolved, That it is competent for the Senate to elect a President pro tempore, who shall hold the office during the pleasure of the Senate and until another is elected, and shall execute the duties thereof during the future absences of the Vice-President, until the Senate otherwise orders.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

Mr. CULLOM submitted the following order; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Ordered, That the Secretary inform the House of Representatives that the Senate has elected JOHN J. INGALLS, a Senator from the State of Kansas, President of the Senate pro tempore, to hold and exercise the office in the absence of the Vice-President from time to time, during the pleasure of the Senate, in accordance with the terms of its resolution passed March 12, 1890, as follows:

Resolved, That it is competent for the Senate to elect a President pro tempore, who shall hold the office during the pleasure of the Senate and until another is elected, and shall execute the duties thereof during the future absences of the Vice-President, until the Senate shall otherwise order.

ADJOURNMENT FOR GOOD FRIDAY.

Mr. SHERMAN. I enter a motion to reconsider the order by which we agreed to adjourn over to-morrow, and I will call it up later.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COCKRELL in the chair). The Senator from Ohio enters a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate this morning agreed to adjourn over to-morrow. The motion will be entered.

Mr. SHERMAN. I should like to have the sense of the Senate as to whether they will sit to-morrow. I think there was not a quorum of Senators present when the order was made to adjourn over, and I think we ought to sit. I do not wish to say anything more about it.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I hope the matter of adjourning over Good Friday, Mr. President, will be settled now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] is entitled to the floor. Does he yield?

Mr. GRAY. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, the motion of the Senator from Ohio will be presented to the Senate; that is, to reconsider the order adopted by the Senate this morning by which the Senate agreed that when it adjourned to-day it adjourn to meet on Saturday.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The question is on reconsidering.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On reconsidering the vote by which the Senate agreed to adjourn over from to-day till Saturday.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I believe it is not a debatable motion, but I want to implore my friend from Ohio not to press his motion. Good Friday is recognized by all Christians of every description as being just as holy a day as Sunday, and for years and years we have thought it not fit, as the Supreme Court thinks it not fit, to sit on that day.

Mr. SHERMAN. All I can say is that I do not know but that it may be correct that the records will show we have adjourned over Good Friday, but I think in the present condition of the public business the best thing we can do is to attend to the public business. Good Friday is not a legal holiday, and we have no right to make a mere calendar holiday a legal holiday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the Senate ready for the question?

Mr. PLATT. Mr. President, while I am exceedingly anxious to get on with the business—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator can not proceed except by unanimous consent.

Mr. PLATT. I thought a motion to reconsider was debatable?

Mr. EDMUNDS. It is an undebatable motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut will proceed in the absence of objection.

Mr. PLATT. I have only a word to say. I am, as I think, as anxious as any member of this Senate to get on with the business of the Senate, and I myself should have no particular scruples about sitting to-morrow, but I am aware that with many members of the Senate this question of adjourning or sitting to-morrow takes the form of a religious matter. They have religious scruples, so to speak, against sitting to-morrow, and I think that when Senators have those opinions and those scruples the Senate ought to recognize them. I shall therefore vote against a reconsideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate agreed to adjourn over to-morrow.

The motion to reconsider was not agreed to.

SENATORS FROM MONTANA.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections in regard to the Montana Senatorial contest.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. President, when the Senate adjourned last evening I was attempting to display to the Senate and to the country something of the character of the objections that were made to the regularity and fairness of the election as it was held at precinct 34 of Silver Bow County on the first Tuesday of October, 1889. The Senate will pardon me, I am sure, if in resuming this topic this morning I somewhat repeat myself in order to make the remarks that I shall submit to-day consistent with themselves, and, so far as they can be dignified by the name of argument, a complete argument.

It will be remembered that the provocation to a discussion of what occurred at this precinct 34 came from what was said by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] in regard to the fairness and regularity and conduct of that election. It was because he, as I thought, unjustly aspersed the character of the voters and of the vote at that election precinct that I thought it was incumbent upon me to say a word out of common respect to the people, part of the citizens of this great Republic, who voted at that election, and to display as well as I might how perfectly unfounded those criticisms were, and not at all because I considered that we, in this judicial investigation that we are carrying on as to who are entitled to be seated as Senators of the United States from the State of Montana, are properly engaged in a discussion of what took place at those polls, or can appropriately, for any purpose of deciding the question before us, go behind the returns which we have already on both sides at some length discussed.

Then, as a matter of public interest introduced by the Senator from Massachusetts in his speech yesterday, and also in the report which he submitted on behalf of the majority of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, let us inquire what really happened at those polls and examine the objections that are made to their regularity and fairness, and upon which it is seriously contended, as I understand by that Senator and by the majority of the committee, that that poll was properly thrown out, and that those votes ought not to be regarded as of any account whatever in determining the result of the election that was had on the 1st day of October, 1889, in that State.

In the first place, I suppose it will be admitted that there are some presumptions that run in favor of the regularity and of the due and fair performance of civic duties by the citizens of this country, as well as in favor of the due performance of official duties by officers. Certainly it would be a most dangerous and pernicious doctrine to introduce or consider seriously for one moment that there could be any presumption against the fairness and against the regularity of the votes of any citizens at any precinct, great or small. So we commence with a presumption in favor of that regularity and in favor of the legality and fairness of the votes cast at that election precinct, precinct 34, in Silver Bow County. Then we are to consider what was the character of the objection, and I was proceeding yesterday at the adjournment to enumerate them and hold them up to the Senate, that they might consider whether they were worthy of one moment's serious consideration or not.

I have already called the attention of the Senate to one of these objections, or two of them, but I wish to group them all together this morning, because I recognize the fact that the Senator from Massachusetts did say that perhaps no single one of these objections was sufficient to throw out and disregard the 174 votes that were cast at that precinct, but that taking them together they did constitute an indictment of that poll upon which he was willing that that poll should be thrown out, and he was of the opinion that it was properly disregarded by those returning boards in Montana. He used some very strong language in regard to the effect these objections had upon his mind.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from Delaware yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. GRAY. Certainly.

Mr. GEORGE. I should like for the Senator before he goes into those objections to give me and the Senate this information: First, were a majority of the judges or inspectors who held that election, of the Republican party? and, second, whether or not these inspectors or judges of the election, after having held it, did or did not canvass the vote and certify it, the majority of them being Republicans, to the county board of canvassers, and whether or not the county board of canvassers did not at first accept this return from the Silver Bow County precinct as right and proper, and that only after it was discovered that if this precinct were thrown out the character of the Legislature as Republican or Democratic would be changed, were any objections made, and when those objections were made did not the county canvassers, who were also Republicans, reverse their former action on that subject?

Mr. GRAY. Mr. President, I had intended to allude to the subject which is covered by the questions of the Senator from Mississippi, but perhaps I may as well now as at another time answer his questions.

This election at precinct 34, in favor of which I have undertaken to show every presumption as to its regularity and fairness at the outset obtains, was held on that 1st day of October, 1889, by three judges and two clerks. Two of those judges were Republicans, one a Democrat. That appears in the record that is before the Senate, and I do not know that it is denied anywhere. The agent under the registry laws who, prior to that election, registered 182 voters as appropriately belonging to that voting precinct was also a Republican, as was every other registry agent in Silver Bow County. As I have already said, the majority of the judges of election at those polls were Republicans, as were the majority of judges at every election poll in Silver Bow County. That I understand to be a fact, and I have not heard any controversy upon it.

The presumption to which I have alluded seems to be strengthened by the fact that I have just stated in this respect, that the result of the vote at precinct 34 was adverse to the party to which a majority of the judges belonged. I do not mean to say that the judges of one party or the other would have done wrong or done differently, but in considering this question as a matter of fact and of antecedent probability the presumption of fairness and regularity which arises is strengthened, I think, by that fact in the mind of every fair man. So we have that state of things at the commencement; and that vote so cast was returned by those judges over their hands and attested by the clerk to the canvassing board of Silver Bow County.

It might be interesting to Senators who have not examined this record to call their attention to a bit of positive evidence upon this same point, not relying merely upon this presumption of which I have spoken, but of positive evidence that has not been directly controverted, and that is the evidence that is obtained from the sworn testimony of these judges, two of them being Republicans, these clerks and the county clerk of Silver Bow County. They all swear to a state of facts which may be summarized. I will not detain the Senate by reading their several affidavits, but I will only say that there are no counter-affidavits whatever to dispute what is testified to by them; and I shall state the substance of what transpired and is testified to by them as it is recited in the report of the minority of the committee.

In the first place, it appears by the law of Montana and by the testimony that was before the committee and before the Senate that the registry provided for by the act of March, 1889—

Itself is a thorough challenge and examination of every voter whose name is entered thereon.

In the case of naturalized persons the facts necessary are required, at the instance of the register, to be proven by a witness in addition to a personal examination of the voter.

Mr. GEORGE. That examination goes on before the election?

Mr. GRAY. Days before the election.

Mr. GEORGE. Making the registry?

Mr. GRAY. Making the registry. This registry is publicly posted for seven days or more before the election for further challenge, if any cause for challenge be known to any one.

That in precinct 34 of Silver Bow County, as to which alone inquiry is material, all these requirements were fully complied with, and the registry list of 182 voters was perfected, filed, and placed in the hands of the election officers.

Now, that is a fact established.

That the election on the ratification of the constitution and for State and county officers and members of assembly was conducted in said precinct 34 on the first Tuesday of October, 1889, as elsewhere in said Territory, under the Territorial act of March 15, 1889, which is a carefully considered and revised form of the Australian ballot system.

That is a fact that is proven to the committee and is established before the Senate. The ballots were prepared at public expense, by the county clerk, with all the careful circumspection required by law. At the proper time he placed in the hands of the judge of the election authorized to receive them 800 ballots, being 200 ballots for every 50 registered voters or fraction thereof. One hundred and seventy-four of these ballots were stamped and delivered by the proper officers of the election, one to each voter, as the act provided. Twenty-six of the ballots were used by the election board for posting up according to law and supplying such as were destroyed by the wind after they had been posted for public examination. Six hundred were returned after the election to the county clerk.

Now, this appears from the affidavit of the county clerk, who, in the first place, issued the 800 ballots, receiving back 600, and the remaining 200 are accounted for under oath by the judges of election by the fact that 174 were voted and 26 were posted up and reposted when they were blown down by the wind. In fact, every requirement of the law was carefully and honestly carried out. Every precaution that human ingenuity has been enabled to devise to secure the freedom and purity of the ballot, and to exclude fraud or corruption, is shown by the evidence to have been vigilantly and carefully observed. The count of the ballots began at the proper hour in a tent where the election was held, in which there was no fire. About 11 o'clock p. m., the wind having arisen and the tent becoming very cold, the boxes and ballots were removed into a room in a house on the same lot and almost in contact with the tent in which the counting had been begun, and the count was there finished.

The poll-list showed 174 names. The ballots deposited in the box showed 174 votes, and every ballot was regularly and officially stamped. The proper and truthful returns were prepared and executed. They were sealed up by the board, and by one of their number—that is, by one of the judges—delivered personally, with seal unbroken, to the clerk of the board of county commissioners, who was the legally designated depository of the same, there being no mail facilities nearer the place of election than the place of delivery to the clerk. The returns thus prepared and delivered were opened by the county canvassing board. When they were opened the vote cast for the candidates of one of the parties varied between 168 and 172 votes. The votes of the other party varied from 2 to 6.

Mr. President, those are the facts in regard to the conduct of this election that appear by sworn testimony that is before the Senate and is in this record, and is nowhere, so far as I know, controverted or denied.

That being the case and the law requiring that within fifteen days after the returns the county board should canvass, it appears that they met upon Friday, which was the 11th, and made an abstract of the votes of all the voting precincts in Silver Bow County; that they were engaged in that work on Friday and Saturday and adjourned over until Monday, and on Monday, as the Senator from Mississippi has suggested by his question, news got out and down came the lawyers from Helena. They had found what would be the result of counting this precinct, and they came before that board to disfranchise 174 white American freemen by objections which I am now about to recount to the Senate, and which are indorsed only in theory, only in part, I will say, by the Senator from Massachusetts, for there seem to be some of them which he could not gain his own consent to repeat.

To the first objection I have already alluded, but will pray the indulgence of the Senate while I repeat what I have already said.

Mr. GEORGE. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. GRAY. Certainly.

Mr. GEORGE. I wish him to explain a phrase he used. The Senator said the news got out on Monday. Will he please state so that I can understand it, to what news he referred?

Mr. GRAY. I said the news of what the result of counting precinct 34 would be upon the election of members of the assembly from Silver Bow County got out.

Mr. GEORGE. That is, if that precinct was not thrown out the Legislature would be Democratic?

Mr. GRAY. Exactly.

Mr. GEORGE. And if thrown out it would be Republican.

Mr. GRAY. Yes, sir.

Mr. GEORGE. That was the news?

Mr. GRAY. We must use party names; and that was the fact.

That being the state of facts and those returns being before a canvassing board who were clothed with none but ministerial duties, who had no judicial function whatever to perform (and it is not claimed by the majority of the committee or any one so far as I know that they had other than ministerial duties to perform), that canvassing board, so assembled on the Monday after the Friday upon which they convened, received these learned gentlemen of the law who, on behalf of some of these ambitious leaders of one of the political parties, came before them to show why those votes of 174 white American freemen should be thrown out and trampled under foot, despised and rejected as unworthy to go into the general count or be reckoned in the result that was to be made up all over the State of Montana.

What do they say? Do they say that the votes were illegal, that any man voted who ought not to have voted? No. Do they attempt by proof, affidavit, or evidence of any kind to impugn the right of a single one of those 174 men to vote? Not at all. With all the stimulus that partisan interest and a retainer gave them, they were not able to impeach the regularity and legality of a single vote, and they did not attempt to do it. But they said—and this was the first objection—I read from the record:

That what purported to be returns from precinct No. 34, Silver Bow County, Montana Territory, were not received by the clerk of the board of county commissioners in a registered package or by mail at all.

As the law required. And yet they knew that one of the judges took that sealed package containing those returns and personally handed it to the county clerk of Silver Bow County.

That was one objection, and the first objection, seriously urged by these learned gentlemen before this county canvassing board when these 174 freemen were busy with their picks and shovels up at Homestake tunnel, on the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains. I do not care whether there were mail facilities or not; but think of urging that as a reason for disfranchising 174 or any number of voters, that the return of the votes made by the judges and in a sealed package was handed by one of them personally to the clerk instead of being sent by mail! That is Dogberry rediculus; nothing can equal that.

Mr. GEORGE. It is the "dog" without the "berry," I think.

Mr. GRAY. Now, what was the next objection? The next objection—I read from the record—was—

That what purported to be the returns from said voting precinct showed upon their face that they were not made out by the clerks of said election at said precinct; that they were not certified to by said clerks and their signatures attested to by the said judges of election.

As to the first, it appears by the evidence in the case—

Mr. SPOONER. From what is the Senator reading?

Mr. GRAY. I am reading from page 118 of the case of Clark and Maginnis. It appears by the evidence on this record and by the affidavits of one of the judges that one of these clerks was an illiterate man, although a sensible man and a good man, and he asked one of the judges, who was a better penman, when they came to make up these returns, to perform that office for him.

Mr. GEORGE. It was done in his presence?

Mr. GRAY. It was done in his presence so far as it appears. Now, that is another objection.

All the time these 174 men are working away with pick and shovel, utterly ignorant of the monstrous character of the votes they had cast, and of their utter illegality and unworthiness to be counted with their fellow-citizens of Montana in the general result which was to be made up on the 1st of October. What is the next objection? It is—

That they were not certified to by said clerks and their signatures attested to by the judges of election.

I explained that yesterday. The law required that these returns should be signed by the clerks and attested by the judges, and the blanks that were sent out by the clerk of the county commissioners and distributed at all these voting precincts had columns with proper headings, and at the bottom of the sheet was in brackets "for judges" "for clerks," then over on the left-hand corner was the word printed "attest;" and it so happened that these clerks wrote their names opposite to the printed word "attest," and not below it, and the judges signed above it. That is the objection. All the names were there, attested by their signatures, not one of those signatures denied or challenged. There is the third objection. You would think if they had a good case they would put their strongest objections first, and so they have apparently done. What comes next?

Mr. GEORGE. The signatures were all there, as I understand, under a proper certificate that the returns were just and legal and proper and right?

Mr. GRAY. Yes. These learned gentlemen go further in their zeal to disfranchise these 174 men. You will notice that there is not a single word of impugnement of the legality or fairness of a vote that was cast or the want of qualification of a single elector. Here is another objection:

That the names of the persons voting at said precinct were not written down on the poll-books of said precinct by said clerks.

There they repeat themselves. I have already considered that.

That the tally-list of votes, as counted by the judges of election at said precinct, were not made or kept by said clerks of election at said precinct. That the said clerks in no way participated in the canvass of the votes of said precinct, or participated in the making out of the returns of votes cast thereat, at said election.

That will bring me to discuss this objection, which seems to be indorsed by the Senator from Massachusetts, that the tally-lists were not kept.

That the tally list of votes, as counted by the judges of election at said precinct, were not made or kept by said clerks of election at said precinct.

That has already been considered. That is, that one of these clerks asked one of the judges, who was a better penman, to write for him upon a blank list what was required to be written or what they intended to write. That is not the objection that the Senator from Massachusetts dwells upon.

It will very much surprise Senators who have not studied this record to be told, as I tell them now, that that is a complete list of the objections made by these learned attorneys on behalf of these ambitious citizens of Montana as to the returns from precinct 34. They are signed—

Hiram Knowles and Thompson Campbell, attorneys for defendant board.

Mr. GEORGE. Attorneys for whom?

Mr. GRAY. For defendant board. They are in the mandamus proceedings.

Now, those are the objections that are urged by them. We hear among these objections and in the answer in the mandamus proceedings nothing whatever of the want of qualification by reason of not having taken the oath to support the Constitution. We hear nothing whatever of any fact or thing that goes to impugn the fairness of the election by reason of any one voting who was not lawfully authorized to vote. The only thing that approaches it, which I will submit to the Senate whether it at all modifies what I have said, is that after these objections had been filed, and upon another day, five affidavits were produced—I was going to say hunted up, but were produced; I will not characterize it—the affidavits of five men who swore that they voted the Republican ticket.

Mr. TELLER. Seven.

Mr. GRAY. There are in this record produced by any party, by Mr. Power or Mr. Sanders, but five affidavits. If I am wrong I shall be glad to be corrected.

Mr. TELLER. If the Senator will allow me I will state that Messrs. Power and Sanders do not present any affidavits.

Mr. GRAY. They presented an argument before the committee in print, in which five affidavits are introduced.

Mr. TELLER. The affidavits presented were presented by the other side. The answer in this case that the Senator refers to sets up seven affidavits.

Mr. GRAY. Very well, take it at seven. I have not time to stop on that. Take it at seven. I shall not stop to discuss that matter.

Mr. VANCE. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. GRAY. Certainly.

Mr. VANCE. I simply want to remind the Senator of that which perhaps had escaped his observation, that of these five affidavits the makers of two of them swore positively that they had voted the straight Republican ticket; one swore that he had voted the Republican ticket in part and another swore that he had voted the Republican ticket to the best of his knowledge and belief.

Mr. GRAY. That had escaped my notice.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. GRAY. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. I will ask the Senator from North Carolina to explain to the Senate how it happens that if four persons swore they had voted the Republican ticket there were only three Republican votes on the poll.

Mr. GRAY. Oh, there were 5 Republican votes, and it was so returned by these precinct judges. I leave it to my friend from North Carolina to fortify my statement without stopping myself now to do that. I do not mean that there were 5 Republican votes all along the ticket for every man, but certainly there were men on the Republican ticket who received 5 votes.

Mr. President, wounded birds are known by their fluttering sometimes, and while we are on this point I am not surprised that my friends want to increase the affidavits, if only by two. That is a little better than five, but take it at seven, take it at nine, if they had them here, I do not care what it is, when we are considering the purpose for which they are brought and the result that is hoped to be affected by it. Take seven affidavits, if you please. My friend from North Carolina has explained what these affidavits were. Take seven affidavits, if you please, to throw out 174 votes.

There is other evidence in this case. I shall not pause now to consider it, because I do think it is utterly immaterial. There are affidavits to show how the affidavits as to the way some of these affidavits were obtained which entirely destroy any confidence that we might before have had in the truthfulness of what those affidavits stated. But I shall not pause, as I said, to consider that now.

I only want to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that when the vote of precinct No. 34 is sought to be impugned by these learned attorneys before this canvassing board the only objections that they urged were those I have recited, frivolous, flimsy, and unworthy as they are, and upon these they rested, unless they may be supposed to have rested also upon these five or seven affidavits, if you please, of men who swore that they had voted the Republican ticket.

Mr. GEORGE. I wish to ask the Senator right there if these affidavits contain any matter except as to how the affiants respectively voted.

Mr. GRAY. Not at all.

Mr. GEORGE. They did not impeach the election in any other respect?

Mr. GRAY. Not at all. On the contrary, one of those men who made affidavit says that the election was peaceable, fair, and regular throughout, so far as he knew.

Now, that being the case, why was it that it remained for the Senator from Massachusetts to add to this indictment? He must have realized how perfectly rotten every link in that chain of objection was, and how the chain itself was no stronger than any single link. He says not upon one objection would he throw out these votes, but upon all together. I submit to the candor and fairness of the Senators who hear me to say whether singly or cumulatively, segregated or all together, they have the effect of not only legally impugning that vote, but of creating a doubt in your mind as to the fairness and regularity of the vote at that precinct No. 34.

But the Senator from Massachusetts has added another and two others. I know he must have felt compelled to help out these lame apologies for an indictment against the integrity of those polls at precinct 34. What are they? One is that a large number of these men, sixty-odd of them, he says, were not qualified to vote by reason of the fact that they had not taken the oath to support the Constitution of the United States, as aliens are required to do by the act of Congress before they can vote in a Territorial election. Now, what are the facts? Let us examine them and see whether this objection adds the weight of a feather to those already registered.

The law of Montana by which according to the act of Congress and the ordinance of the convention this election was to be held provided that every male citizen of the age of twenty-one years and who had such and such residence could be an elector, and also any other person than a citizen, of sufficient age, who had declared his intention to become such citizen, and who could ultimately be made such, should be a qualified elector. Under that law of Montana, so far as I am informed, elections had been held for years and years, for twenty-five years, I am informed, and men had voted over and over again, electing Democrats and electing Republicans, in which elections had participated men who had not taken this oath to support the Constitution, but had taken the oath declaratory of their intention and of their abjuration of allegiance to any foreign prince, potentate, or power. Over and over again had the elections been repeated at which electors thus qualified under the laws of Montana had voted, so far as I know, without objection and without challenge. On that very Tuesday in October, 1889, they voted all over the Territory of Montana, so far as I know anything to the contrary, without objection and without challenge, and these learned attorneys did not think it worth while to include that as a count in this indictment.

Mr. President, are we seriously asked to disfranchise these 174 men upon the mere suggestion that they had not, in addition to the oath declaratory of their intention to become citizens, also taken a distinct and separate oath to support the Constitution of the United States, and should these 174 men all be disfranchised, or enough of them to change the result of the election? All over that Territory we know as a fact, because it has never been suggested otherwise, men with precisely the same qualifications had voted at every precinct. Would you punish these men after a lapse of twenty-five years of continuous practice in that way in order to accomplish a partisan result and to seat these ambitious leaders of a political party in the Senate of the United States? I think that disposes of that objection.

Now, what is the other that the Senator from Massachusetts adds to the indictment made by the attorneys out in Montana? He thinks it necessary to add another, and that is, he says, it is remarkable and miraculous that this poll-list which was returned with the official count to the board of canvassers should be in alphabetical order. Men do not vote in alphabetical order, we all know that; and the Senator from Massachusetts dwells upon that fact, that exceedingly suspicious fact, ignoring the explanation of that fact that was right beneath his eyes. It is no longer miraculous when you hear the explanation, and whether the Senator from Massachusetts continues to think it miraculous and exceedingly suspicious or not, I will venture the assertion that no Senator who for the first time to-day hears this explanation will think it either miraculous or suspicious. It is true that the laws of Montana required, among other things, that the judges of election should return a poll-list to the canvassing board with their abstract of votes; and that that poll-list should be kept by the clerk and the names written upon it as the voters deposited their ballots. That was the law of Montana under which, I think, this election was properly held, and had been the law of elections for many preceding years. But in March, 1889, the Territorial Legislature provided for a registry law for the first time, and it provided that—

The registry agent shall prepare and complete, not later than two days next preceding that on which the election is to be held, in "index books," one for each election precinct, and which shall be known as the "check-lists," lists of the names of all electors found on the official register for such election precincts, alphabetically arranged (the surname first), with the number such name bears in the official register placed at the left of the name of the elector, and with a blank column at the right of the column of names, formed by two parallel perpendicular lines, in which the judges of election shall check the names of those voting by some particular character, thus, "V" for voted. said blank columns last mentioned shall have written headings made by the registry agents, showing what particular election the said "check-lists" apply to; as, for instance, "Voted at the general election, 1888."

The copy of the official register, together with the "check-lists" for election precinct, as herein provided, shall be carefully preserved and duly certified by the registry agent, and delivered, together with affidavits of objection, to some one of the judges of election in each election precinct, at a time not later than the day next preceding that on which such election is to be held, and such "check-lists" shall be carefully preserved, and any surrendered certificates which may have come into the hands of such registry agents pursuant to this act, and after election they shall be transmitted by the judges of the election to the clerk of the board of county commissioners in connection with and as a part of the "election returns," as provided by law.

This election on the first Tuesday of October, 1889, was the first election held after that law went into effect, and in obedience to the provisions of that law the registry agent of Silver Bow County furnished the judges of election with a check-list, as it is called in the law, made of all the names that were entitled to vote, and in this case 182 at the given precinct, precinct 34. They are alphabetically arranged, as required by law, the surname first. I hold in my hand a copy of that check-list as it was returned to this canvassing board, with the marks opposite to each name as the vote was cast—the letter V (voted). When the poll-list, in addition to this check-list, was made it appears not to have been regularly kept. Now, that is not in evidence, but we may make some inferences. I have not heretofore been making any inferences; I have been dealing with proven facts; but I think we may reasonably infer in all charity to our fellow-men that the clerks and judges of that election thought that whereas for the first time they were required to keep the check-list by marking V opposite the name of each one as the vote was cast, perhaps it dispensed with the necessity of keeping a separate poll-list.

I do not think so, but it appears that they thought so, and therefore to make a poll-list they copied from this check-list the names of all who were checked, and of course they appeared in alphabetical arrangement. You will find by looking at the appendix of the report of the minority, on page 154, a specimen page of this check-list, and then you will see the poll-list that was made from it, which contains only the names of those marked with a V, omitting those which were not marked at all.

Mr. President, that is a short and simple and it seems to me a very satisfactory explanation of this somewhat peculiar feature of these election returns. I think when made I have the right to challenge any Senator's opinion as to whether or not that would be sufficient alone or coupled with what has gone before to justify his vote that precinct 34 ought not to be considered in summing up the result of the election in Silver Bow County on the 1st of October, 1889.

The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER], whose attention was drawn away at the moment I was speaking on this point, asks that I repeat what my explanation of this matter is. It is this: That for the first time the election of October, 1889, was held under the registry law, and by that registry law the registry agent was required to furnish on the day before the election to the judges of each voting precinct a check-list made up of the names of those entitled to vote at his precinct, arranged in alphabetical order, and the judges were enjoined by law, or the clerks, to check off by the letter V opposite to it the name of each voter as he deposited his ballot in the box. That was done in this election precinct 34, but they seem to have thought that that dispensed with the necessity of keeping the separate poll-list, and after the election was over they made up what they called a poll list by copying the checked names in necessarily alphabetical order on paper and returning that as the poll-list.

Mr. HOAR. May I ask the Senator if he understands that check-list to have been before the committee?

Mr. GRAY. I will answer that. When that objection was made and my attention was first called to the peculiar character of what was called the poll-list, which was in alphabetical order, I sought an explanation of the matter myself, and with another member of the minority of the committee we sent for an explanation out to the Territory of Montana. A reply to that inquiry did not come until after the committee had passed upon this question, and after the reports had been in process of preparation, both the majority and the minority; but when it was received I took such papers as I had explanatory of this matter over to the Senator from Massachusetts and left them with him at his desk in order that he, who had charge of the majority report, might see for himself any evidence we had or proposed to use.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator allow me to ask him if I understand him to state that that check-list was copied from the registration list?

Mr. GRAY. That check-list is a list made from the registration list.

of that district or county, and contains the names of all those who were entitled to vote at the given precinct, and it is required by law to be handed to the judges of each election precinct the day before the election, and the judges of election by the same law are required to check off the name of each person as he votes on that list.

Mr. GEORGE. So if the check was made the letter "V" was put opposite the name of each man as he voted, and there was a complete list of those voting preserved?

Mr. GRAY. Oh, certainly. It is impossible, it seems to me, for any reasonable man to say that, whether he thinks the check-list dispensed with the necessity of a separate poll-list or not, and I do not think it did—it is impossible for such a person to say that all the objects of the law were not substantially complied with and obtained by the poll-list or the check-list, made as I have described it to be made. You have a list of all the men who voted. It is true that you have them in alphabetical order. It is true that you have them not in the order in which they voted, but with that exception it accomplishes every purpose that a poll-list would possibly accomplish in regard to testifying to what occurred at an election poll.

Mr. GEORGE. Would the fact of keeping the list so as to show the order in which the voters voted be of any conceivable use in determining the fairness of the election?

Mr. GRAY. I do not think it could. The Senator from Massachusetts made a plausible suggestion in that regard, I am bound to say, but really I do not think a poll-list so kept would promote the fairness of the election, and the law did not expressly require it to be so kept.

There may be an object in a poll-list showing the exact order in which the votes were deposited, so that if an inquiry came as to whether a certain man voted you might locate him by saying he voted before a certain man or after this one; but I can not conceive, except perhaps in that one respect suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts, any possible object to be accomplished by the keeping of a poll-list that was not accomplished by the keeping of that check-list.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. GRAY. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. In order to understand this matter I should like to ask the Senator one or two questions if he pleases, not with reference to his arguments, but to get the facts before the Senate.

Mr. GRAY. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. I understand the Senator to say that he brought those papers to my desk, which is true. I agree with him on that; but is the check-list in print, except this specimen page?

Mr. GRAY. The check-list is in print in the appendix of the minority report.

Mr. HOAR. I find nothing but Appendix D.

Mr. GRAY. It is a specimen page. I did not care to encumber the record with the whole list.

Mr. HOAR. Did the Senator examine and compare the check-list with the poll-book to see whether it verifies his theory that one is a copy of the other?

Mr. GRAY. I did. I ought not to say that I did it personally. It was done for me.

Mr. HOAR. Now, I desire to ask the Senator another question. I found when I compared the old registry-list with the poll-book it was manifest one was not a copy of the other. I did not see but that they might have taken the registry-list, but in one the christian name followed the surname, which was not the case in the other; and the names are often spelled differently, and the christian name will sometimes be abbreviated and sometimes written out. I have not looked fully, but I find on this specimen page that the same difficulty exists and very clearly the poll-book is not a copy of the check-book. Look, for instance, at the name of Mulligan. You turn to the poll-book, and it is John Mulligan in one case and James Mulligan in the other.

Mr. KENNA. Is it the same Mulligan?

Mr. HOAR. Undoubtedly. There was but one Mulligan.

Mr. KENNA. There are a thousand Mulligans.

Mr. HOAR. I understand, but there was but one Mulligan at that election who voted there, and he is the same who is marked as having voted, so that it is clear that one is not a copy of the other.

Mr. GRAY. Does that conclude the Senator's question?

Mr. HOAR. Yes, sir.

Mr. GRAY. I am glad the Senator recalled me to the point he made yesterday, and which I might have overlooked. The Senator from Massachusetts, who seems to have recognized the force of that explanation, tries to evade it; I do not mean to say that he tries to evade it in any unworthy sense, but he submits an explanation which justifies him in still insisting upon this objection in this, that in the check-list the surname comes first in alphabetical order and the christian name afterwards, while in the poll-list it is just reversed. I think it is quite competent and quite reasonable that in making a copy of that check-list one man would have called off the names, as he probably did, while another wrote them down, and that for the purpose of the poll-list they chose to put the christian name first. But the name was there, and whether you say Mulligan, James, or James Mulligan, does not make much difference. That criticism and explanation of the Senator from Massachusetts reminds me of the story of an Irishman who was more witty than brave, which is not often the case with Irishmen. He was called on to explain why he was ejected from his neighbor's house so easily. "Ah," says he, "John said, 'McCarthy, get out of my house,' and I went. If he had said, 'Get out of my house, McCarthy,' I would have killed him on the spot." [Laughter.] So I do not think it makes much difference whether it is Mulligan, James, or James Mulligan; it is the same Mulligan after all.

But I should like to call the attention of the Senator from Massachusetts to the fact that he compared the specimen page of the check-list with the printed copy of the registry. I have in manuscript a certified copy of that registry in which the name is James Mulligan. So it must be a mistake of the printer which makes it John. So much for that.

Mr. GEORGE. I submit to the Senator that the mistake of a printer here in Washington is sufficient ground to change the election of a United States Senator.

Mr. GRAY. Now, so much for that. But before I leave this point entirely, urged with so much persistency and eloquence by the Senator from Massachusetts as sufficient ground, with these foregoing objections which he does not think sufficient of themselves, such as they may be, that these returns were handed to the clerk by the judge instead of being sent by mail, let me call the attention of the Senate to another fact which throws a little light upon this subject and makes an interesting commentary upon these objections. It appears to have been an opinion shared by many in Silver Bow County on that 1st day of October, 1889, that this provision of the registry law that was passed that year superseded the law requiring a separate poll-list to be kept and returned.

I do not agree with that opinion, but it was not a unique position taken only by the officers of precinct 34, for I hold in my hand a certified copy of the poll-list of precinct 17, which is in alphabetical order precisely as is precinct 34, and I have not heard that it has ever been attempted to disfranchise the voters at precinct 17, 199 of them, because the clerks of election, over whom they had no control, saw fit to return the poll-list of their names in the order of the alphabet. It may be that the explanation of that fact is found in what I am told. It may be entirely wrong, but it may be that the explanation of that fact is found in this, that the voters at that precinct 17 were two to one of the party which agrees with that side of the Chamber. I have avoided the word "Republican."

Now, Mr. President, in the name of that fairness, of that straightforward dealing, of that honesty between man and man which should characterize every transaction concerning an election, I appeal to the Senate and to Senators individually whether they can gain the consent of their own consciences to vote to seat two men as United States Senators when to do so they are obliged to trample under foot and throw out as unworthy of being counted 174 electors on objections like these.

One other count is added to the indictment by the Senator from Massachusetts, because he must have recognized the utter weakness of the indictment as it was framed by these attorneys out in Montana, and it is this:

But let us go a little further—

Says the Senator from Massachusetts—

There are 171 Democratic votes and 3 Republican votes, varying once or twice, so that there are 4 for one and 170 for another, and 172 for one and 2 for another, and here was a hotly contested election in the State of Montana, and the election in that county of Silver Bow was so close that a change of 60 votes the one way or the other would have defeated the candidate declared elected or elected the candidate declared defeated—generally an average of 60 or 70 votes—and yet it is found in this one precinct, newly settled, a place where men of all nationalities and gathering from all parts of the Union had come together, that the remarkable and miraculous result is that the votes were divided between the two parties there, when it is so even over all the rest of the Territory and over all the rest of that county, in the proportion of 171 to 3.

That is the last objection the Senator from Massachusetts contributes to this indictment of precinct 34, that it is miraculous that there should be that disproportion between the Democratic and Republican vote. Has it come to this, Mr. President, that a Senator of the United States can rise in his place and seriously attempt to impeach the right of any number of American freemen to cast their ballots and have them counted in the general result on the ground that they have not so divided their votes as to meet his approval? Is it to be said that, before the railroad laborer out in the Rocky Mountain district of Montana Territory can hope to enjoy the right the Senator from Massachusetts and every other Senator on this floor claims and enjoys, he must consult that Senator or somebody else as to how many of his compatriots vote the Republican or the Democratic ticket? It seems to me that but for the fact that that objection was seriously made by the distinguished Senator you should reject it with all the scorn and contempt that otherwise it would deserve. A suspicious fact; sufficient to justify the casting out of these 174 votes; miraculous!

What is the proportion that is to come within the bounds of human probability? Four to 171 or 5 to 171, it appears, is not sufficient, for in the precinct to which I have just alluded, precinct 17, I am told (I do not know; I may be mistaken), the proportion of the Republican to the Democratic vote was as two or three to one. Then, perhaps, that must be the standard and those votes must be counted. I see nothing remarkable or miraculous in that result. In all candor and with no intention of indulging in the slightest degree in any mere partisan appeal or an appeal that might be attributed to a demagogue, I say to the Senator that there is nothing remarkable in this country that 171 or any other large number of white laborers should vote the Democratic ticket when you consider that those men themselves, or their ancestors, have come to this country and left their own in order to escape class rule and the privileged conditions which they largely believe would be reinstated in this country by a party or parties opposed to the Democratic party.

It is no uncommon thing that men of that class who earn their living by their daily labor should vote with such unanimity the Democratic ticket when you recollect that the large majority of the white voters of this country vote the Democratic ticket. More than a million majority of the white voters of this country all over it are found in the Democratic ranks. That is a fact upon which I am at liberty to comment in the face of this remarkable statement of the Senator from Massachusetts that, because 171 to 4 or 5 at this particular precinct chose to vote the Democratic ticket, that poll must be thrown out on account of the exceeding improbability of such a vote being a fair or an honest one.

Mr. President, how much and how far have the Committee on Privileges and Elections who have brought this case before the Senate strengthened it by a discussion of the facts and the truth as it appears by the evidence in respect to what occurred on the first Tuesday of October, 1889, at precinct No. 34, in Silver Bow County? It seems to me that it does not require any emphasis of statement on my part, that it requires no enforcement by attempted argument to show the Senate that these objections are unworthy of their consideration; that if they shall be considered as the committee would have the Senate consider them it would make a blot in the history of this great Republic so far as it is represented in this Chamber; that we are invited to make ourselves participants in the sharp practices of these sharp attorneys of a political party in that distant State; and that party exigency may sometimes be so powerful that it will hurry even the Senate of the United States away from the fact, away from the truth, in order to accomplish a partisan result. I do not believe it, and I shall not believe it until the vote is recorded at that desk that declares it to be so.

I had intended, but I will not detain the Senate longer by doing so, to refer to the opinion of the court of the State of Montana after the Territory had become a State, in a cause that was properly before it concerning the election of the sheriff in Silver Bow County, in which the whole conduct of that election at precinct 34 was gone into judicially, and judicially found and determined. In that contest, in February last, where the very issue was as to the vote in that one county, and it turned upon this very precinct 34, contested on both sides, the court make a finding of facts and of law most interesting in connection with the inquiry we are now making. I shall not detain the Senate by reading the opinion of the court.

Mr. GEORGE. What was the result of that judicial inquiry?

Mr. GRAY. Some Senators ask that I should allude to it. In the case to which I have just alluded, decided in February, the court make certain findings. They are very interesting, of course not binding on the Senate, but certainly persuasive as the judgment of a court upon the facts that were in contest before it in a case pleaded to issue and in which the issue involved the integrity of these polls. Certainly, if we assume him to have the ordinary amount of self-respect that we find in judges who sit in our State courts everywhere in this broad land, the finding of that judge upon the facts out there in that very county, with the power to summon witnesses, and with interested parties on both sides with their attorneys competent to develop all the facts on either side of the case, must be very persuasive to us at this distance, who have not the same opportunity to ascertain what the real truth of the matter was. To that end and for that purpose I may be allowed to detain the Senate at the request of one or two Senators around me by reading what the finding was. I will only read one passage of many that I had marked:

On the whole evidence the court finds that the said election held at precinct 34 in said county on the 1st day of October, 1889, was fairly and honestly conducted; that no fraud was committed or attempted at said precinct by the election officers or others; that such irregularities as occurred thereat were without fraudulent intent, and resulted in injury to no one, and did not affect the result nor the fairness of the election; that all voters registered for said precinct, who applied to vote, were permitted to vote; that no intimidation or undue influence was exercised or attempted upon the voters by any one; that the said judges and clerks, nor either of them, did not mark any ballot after its delivery by the voter to the judge of election, nor were said ballots marked by the judges of election in any manner, except by the official stamp placed thereon before they were delivered to the voter; and that the said returns from the said precinct 34 express and show the true and correct result of said election held thereat.

Then he goes on to make conclusions of law. There are other matters in that finding which I may, if there is no objection, have permission to print as part of my remarks, but I shall not detain the Senate further by reading them.

There is also the finding of the Territorial court in the mandamus case by another judge in which substantially the same thing is found, that this election at precinct 34 was honestly, fairly, and legally conducted. We have the opinions of two courts, one a Territorial court and one a State court, pronounced upon that very fact in causes that were before them and which they were competent to decide, and in which it was necessary to pass upon the fairness of the election at precinct 34, for in those contests, it may be observed, the court by the common law were not bound by the returns, and the parties who contested the election were permitted to go behind them and contest every vote that were put into the ballot-box and challenge it just as it might have been challenged when it was offered at the polls on the day of the election. In those two cases the judges have pronounced emphatically that the election was conducted fairly and honestly, without intimidation or undue influence of any kind.

It would be only wasting time to cumulate further affirmative evidence that goes to prove the absolute fairness of this election, to say nothing of any comment upon the utter failure on the part of those who object to it to produce any proof whatever.

There are some affidavits which are attached in an appendix to the minority report which go further and open up an unpleasant subject, I admit, but they are there for Senators to read. They go to show the desperate condition in which this party found itself in the State of Montana after the election, and what was attempted in order to change the result that had been fairly attained and honestly announced. We have affidavits repeated, four, five, six, or seven, I do not remember correctly the exact number, to show that the agents of ambitious leaders of the Republican party went down into this wilderness at precinct 34, to Homestake tunnel, and offered large sums of money to some of these poor railroad men if they would find something by which precinct 34 could be thrown out. The judges of election were approached, and they, according to their affidavits, if they are to be believed, were offered sums of money to aid in throwing out precinct 34 after it had been returned.

Mr. President, in the face of all that, and there is more of it, can it be that the line which divides this Senate Chamber right there in that aisle is to so distort the intellectual processes, is to so change the human conscience, is to so operate upon the human heart that upon evidence like this that line shall be the line of demarkation between an affirmative and a negative vote on these resolutions? I do not believe it. I will not believe that I have any more hope in addressing this side than I profess to have in addressing that, to convince them that to vote for the resolutions proposed by the majority of the committee would be to violate all the most sacred traditions of American history and American liberty.

It is a poor service, sir, to one of this fair sisterhood of States that we welcomed so gladly into this Union in November last to blazon upon her coat of arms the odious mark of a bar sinister thus early in her career. She has come, this fair State of Montana, with all her wealth and her vast proportions, to contribute, as I fondly hope, to the common glory and the common prosperity of this great Union of ours. I do not wish to see the star that shines for her in the constellation of our flag dimmed or obscured while only thus high in the horizon. She has come to be part and parcel of this great American Union, to be one sovereignty among many that go to make it great and glorious, and to remain such forever and forever. But long as her history may be, it will never be forgotten, if the resolution reported by the Committee on Privileges and Elections is adopted, that her birth was attended by fraud, and that in order to give her representation in this Chamber a portion of her citizens were denied the equal privilege of their fellow-citizens in that State and Territory, and their votes were ruthlessly thrown aside as unworthy of being counted in making up the general result of that election.

Mr. President, for her sake, and for the sake of her future history, I trust that no such stain will be put upon her.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I do not rise, of course, to reply to the Senator from Delaware now, but I wish to set right one particular fact which he dwelt on with a good deal of emphasis, and which I judge, from its bringing out a question from the Senator from Mississippi, impressed certainly some Senators other than the Senator from Delaware. The Senator stated that a district judge in the county where this Silver Bow precinct exists had issued a writ of mandamus directing the count of the vote of the precinct in Silver Bow County, and charged that the State canvassing board had hastened their proceedings when they knew that that writ was about to issue, with a view of counteracting its effect. I rose during the Senator's speech and asked him if he was not aware of the fact that that decree of the court was vacated by an appeal, to which the Senator responded with great warmth of manner that the statute of Montana required in the case of an appeal, which otherwise would have made this thing wholly void, the filing of a bond within five days; that the appeal was taken on the 1st of November and a bond was not filed until the 8th. Now, I want to call the attention of the Senator exactly to the law and the fact upon that subject. I hold in my hand the statutes of Montana, and read from section 421:

An appeal may be taken * * * from an order granting or dissolving an injunction.

All other final appeals may be taken at any time within a year, but "from an order granting or dissolving an injunction" within sixty days. That is the time for the appeal.

An appeal is taken by filing with the clerk of the court * * * a notice stating the appeal from the same, or some specific part thereof, and serving a similar notice on the adverse party or his attorney.

Then there must be either "a deposit of money" or "an undertaking be filed" to abide by the result and pay the costs.

The undertaking on appeal must be in writing and must be executed on the part of the appellant, by at least two sureties, etc.

I have not the next section here, but the substance of it is that if the undertaking be not filed in five days, as the Senator stated, the appeal shall be void. Now, what happened? I read from the report of the facts made by the Senator from Delaware and myself.

Mr. GRAY. From what page?

Mr. HOAR. I am reading from page 72:

To which ruling of the court—

That is the order of the court to issue the mandamus—defendants by counsel duly except and file notice of appeal. Defendants also offer—

That is on the day the appeal is taken—for filing an undertaking on appeal; objection was made by counsel for relators to the filing of said undertaking, and filing the same was suspended pending the order of the court in relation thereto.

Then, on the 8th of November:

This day, by agreement of counsel for the relators and defendants, proceedings are to remain in statu quo until Tuesday, the 12th day of November, at 2 o'clock p. m.

Mr. GEORGE. Will the Senator read the date of that agreement and read the agreement again? I did not catch it.

Mr. HOAR. I have just read it. It was on the 8th of November. In other words, the undertaking was filed at the time of the appeal, on the same day, and a question being raised by the counsel on the other side in relation to it, the whole proceeding was suspended by order of the court until that should be disposed of. Then, on the 8th of November, all proceedings in the case were ordered to be suspended and remain in statu quo, and on the 12th of November the whole authority of that court was swept away and overthrown by the admission of the State.

Mr. GRAY. That superseded everything.

Mr. HOAR. It superseded everything.

Mr. GRAY. The appeal and everything else.

Mr. HOAR. The appeal and the original writ of mandamus and the decree.

Mr. GEORGE. So, if that was the case, the judgment of the original court awarding the peremptory mandamus stands unaffected by the appeal and is now in full force and effect.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from Mississippi may stand on that proposition if he wants to plant himself on that rickety and tottering platform. Here is a case where the whole thing is vacated by an appeal, and the appeal in its turn is to be vacated unless the man files his undertaking within five days; he filed his undertaking within five minutes, and the court undertook to determine the question whether it was valid or not. The parties agreed that the thing should remain in statu quo for a certain time, and within that time the authority of the court was gone. Now, if the gentlemen on the other side, or any of them, want to put the weight of this case, or any part of it, or their own reputation as lawyers upon the assertion that in that state of things you have got the judgment valid and the appeal void, they are welcome to make the argument.

Mr. BUTLER. What was the objection to the undertaking, if I may inquire of the Senator?

Mr. HOAR. It does not appear. The defendant filed his undertaking and the counsel on the other side objected to filing it. That is all. It does not say that they objected to its character. Now, the proposition is well settled, and I happen to have heard it affirmed by one of the judges of the Supreme Court of the United States in an opinion within a year or two, that where anybody is bound to file with a certain officer a document at a particular time, as, for instance, in the case of the filing a deed for record or filing a claim of any kind, and the party interested in it files the document, the neglect of the recording officer to record it or his refusal for any reason does not destroy the legal right which the party offering it has so gained.

Mr. GRAY. Now, Mr. President, one word further. The Senator from Massachusetts thinks this is an exceedingly attenuated ground on which to place any contention on this side of the question.

Mr. HOAR. To charge the authorities of a great State with fraud. That is the ground.

Mr. GRAY. Very well. He thinks this is a very attenuated ground. I do not think, and I have not so contended, that anything material in this case on this side of the question turns upon the filing of that appeal bond; but it did occur to me in passing, and in reply to what seemed to me the attenuated position taken by the Senator from Massachusetts, that this appeal had superseded the writ of execution, which in that case was a peremptory mandamus, to reply, for I do not think that position was material either, that as I read the laws of Montana, somewhat hastily it is true, it seemed to me that that appeal had not been perfected under the law, and that the undertaking or appeal bond not having been actually filed until after the five days which the laws of Montana prescribe it shall be filed within, therefore the appeal ceased to be a supersedeas. That is all.

There can be an appeal pending, a valid appeal, which is not a supersedeas. I do not know what peculiarity there is in the laws of Montana, but I believe that the general law of this country, obtaining in all the States, is that the provision in regard to appeal bonds only affects the appeal in respect to the question whether it is a supersedeas or not. The appeal is just as good whether you file a bond or not. In my State, in the State of Pennsylvania, and in other States with whose laws I am familiar, and in the courts of the United States, it is just as good as an appeal, and gives the appellate court a jurisdiction, but it is not a supersedeas unless a bond or undertaking is filed according to the provisions of a statute or the rules of court.

There is a statute here regulating this, which says that unless an appeal bond or undertaking is filed within five days from the notice of the appeal the said appeal shall be unavailing for any purpose whatever. That is a very marked and emphatic provision of the law, and I do not know whether a similar one can be found anywhere else. It may be; but it certainly goes a great deal further than any provision in regard to appeals with which I am familiar.

I do not know how it is in the State of Mississippi or in the State of Massachusetts, but I never knew a law regulating appeals which undertook to say that the failure to file an appeal bond within a certain time after the notice of appeal would make the appeal unavailing for any purpose whatever. In my own State it does not affect the right of appeal. The court gets jurisdiction when the appeal is entered, and if the bond is entered in due time then a supersedeas of the execution of the judgment of the court below is the necessary result.

Mr. VANCE. I wish to suggest to the Senator, with his permission—I do not know that it is material—the fact that this agreement, to wit, that all proceedings should remain in statu quo until Tuesday, the 12th day of November, 1889, at 12 o'clock m., was entered into after the peremptory writ of mandamus had been served and obeyed.

Mr. GRAY. That was on the 8th of November.

Mr. VANCE. On the 8th of November, and the further proceedings, whatever they were, were to remain in statu quo.

Mr. GRAY. That is a fact, as the Senator from North Carolina has observed. I do not wish to make a speech supplemental to the long one I have already made, but it is very significant to me that, as he says, this entry of an agreement was after the whole matter had become fait accompli, after the writ of mandamus had been served and obeyed, and therefore that writ was functus officio at that time, and all that it could do had been performed, and the obedience of these canvassers to that writ took the matter out of court, took the matter out of litigation, and there was nothing upon which an appeal could operate.

Mr. HOAR. The undertaking was tendered to the court at the moment of claiming the appeal, and the judge then took into consideration the objection which the counsel made to filing it. That was the day; and from that time forward that appeal and undertaking had utterly voided the whole authority of the judgment of the court. It is true that this subsequent agreement of counsel only extended to the still further time when the court itself went out. Any court in the United States, in my humble judgment—and I think the Senator from Delaware will not differ from me—would have issued to that inferior court a writ of prohibition against proceeding further, or whatever the process was, in undertaking to go on and issue this mandate, or having issued it in undertaking to treat it in force for the rendering of that function.

This proposition, the Senator says, he does not regard as very important in answer to something that was said on my part. The Senator forgets the use he made of it. The Senator attacked the State authorities of the State of Montana with great vehemence and eloquence and severity, and charged them with dishonor in hastening their action when they knew that this mandamus was coming.

Now, certainly whatever arguments may be attenuated or not, the Senator from Delaware does not make such charges on the floor of the Senate or anywhere else against eminent State officials or anybody else, high or low, without what seems to him sound reason; and when he makes such a charge he will agree with me that it is something important that has been said, and therefore it seemed to me that it was important to call his attention to the fact that that can not be as he thought, because, when the inferior court announced that judgment that the mandate should go, the appeal which vacated it was instantly taken, to which the Senator replied that these men knew very well, or it was very well known, at any rate, that it was not followed up by the bond or undertaking within the five days.

Mr. GRAY. The Senator from Massachusetts will allow me to ask him a question there.

Mr. HOAR. When I finish the sentence I am now uttering.

The Senator said that it was not followed up by the bond or undertaking within five days, and hence was void, to which I replied by calling his attention to the fact that at the moment of taking the appeal that undertaking was tendered, which was all that the parties could do, and the court took into consideration whether it should be filed. That was a lawful filing for all lawful purposes, and it would have been a lawful filing if the court had ordered it not to be filed. The man had got all his rights and the judgment had become absolutely void. But before the court had issued its final judgment upon the question whether it should be filed or not, the parties agreed that everything should remain in statu quo. That was after this writ had been served, it is true, but then the whole thing was swept away, so that the supreme court of the Territory, which had gone out of office, as well as the lower court and everything else, could no longer issue its restraining process upon the court below.

That is the whole story. Now I will answer any question of the Senator with great pleasure.

Mr. GRAY. I thought the Senator was through.

Mr. HOAR. I am through.

Mr. GRAY. I will answer the Senator in the course of what I am going to say. I will occupy the floor for a few moments only, because in the first place I do not know that it is necessary, but if it is I want promptly to avail myself of the opportunity of disabusing the Senator's mind of any idea or feeling that I have in any way attempted to treat any part of his argument with disrespect.

Mr. HOAR. I did not so understand.

Mr. GRAY. I am glad that the Senator did not so understand me. When I said that the position was attenuated, it was only in reply to what I understood the Senator from Massachusetts to say, that it was a very rickety and tottering sort of ground that Senators on this side were attempting to stand upon when they attempted to place this case upon the effect of the not filing of this undertaking for an appeal; and I attempted in reply to that to say that we did not attempt to place this case on that ground at all; it was merely a comment made by me some time ago in passing upon what had been urged by the Senator from Massachusetts, a mere incident to the argument, and not all a necessary premise to any part of it.

But now, to come to this very question, which is not material and I hope Senators will not get into their minds the idea that we are now discussing anything that affects the result of this case at all, whatever opinion we may have about it; it is just an interesting question between the Senator from Massachusetts and myself about this matter, and does not at all affect the merits of this case.

Premising so much, let us examine and consider for a moment what the law of Montana provides for and what the effect of what was done in Silver Bow County in this court really was.

It appears that on the 1st day of November a notice of appeal was filed which the Territorial law of Montana required should be the first step in taking an appeal. It was filed. The statute then goes on to provide—and as the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE] has the statute before him, if he will read the section in regard to the effect of filing an undertaking I shall be obliged to him.

Mr. GEORGE. I will read the whole section.

Mr. GRAY. Yes, read the whole section.

Mr. GEORGE. It is in these words:

SEC. 422. An appeal is taken by filing with the clerk of the court in which the judgment or order appealed from is entered a notice stating the appeal from the same, or some specific part thereof, and serving a similar notice on the adverse party or his attorney. The order of service is immaterial, but the appeal is ineffectual for any purpose unless within five days after service of the notice of appeal an undertaking be filed or a deposit of money be made with the clerk, as hereinafter provided, or the undertaking be waived by the adverse party in writing.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. President, that being the state of the law, what was done by the parties to this litigation? It appears by the record we have before us, and the only one that I know anything about, that on the 1st day of November the "defendants, by counsel, duly except and file notice of appeal."

That is the first step.

Defendants also offer for filing an undertaking on appeal; objection was made by counsel for relators to the filing of said undertaking, and filing of same was suspended pending the order of the court in relation thereto.

I do not dispute the principle of law announced by the Senator from Massachusetts, that where a man has a legal right, a right conferred by positive law, to do a certain thing at a certain time, an offer to do it may, under certain circumstances, amount to the same thing as the doing of it if it is objected to or if he is hindered by those who ought to co-operate with him. But he may or may not consent to that objection. He may or may not prosecute and persist in his offer.

It was perfectly competent for these defendants, upon the suggestion of the court or of the counsel that the filing of the appeal be suspended until a later day, to acquiesce, and there is no evidence here that they did not so acquiesce. There is no evidence here that they were hindered or interfered with in doing this thing which the law gave them the right to do; and we must take it, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it seems to me, that they did acquiesce, did decline, and did as a matter of fact omit and fail to file actually this undertaking of appeal until six days thereafter, and then they actually filed it.

Why did they not stand on their own original offer instead of on the 7th day of November actually filing an undertaking? It would seem to negative the idea thrown out by the Senator from Massachusetts that the offer must be considered as the actual filing. If so, and they thought they had important rights under the filing of that appeal, they could have kept that appeal bond away from the files of that court entirely. They did not rely upon the offer on the 1st day of November. Now, as the fact is that the appeal undertaking or bond was not on file until the 7th, and that was more than five days after the notice of appeal, then the law of Montana must have the effect which it declares, shall obtain in such case, as was read by the Senator from Mississippi that such an appeal shall be ineffectual for any purpose whatever.

Mr. President, I do not understand that the effect of an appeal is to vacate a judgment. I do not know whether I understood the Senator from Massachusetts correctly or not, but he spoke of the entry of the appeal or the taking of the appeal on the 1st day of November as vacating the judgment of the court below. It may be so. It may be so in the State of Massachusetts, but here is a state of things out in the State of Montana which is unknown and very peculiar, so far as I know anything about such things, and I never heard of an appeal vacating a judgment. After an appeal is taken an execution may issue upon that judgment, which could not be the case if it were vacated; and unless the execution is superseded by an appeal bond properly filed that execution can go until the case below is reversed by the appellate court. That is my understanding. If that be so this peremptory writ of mandamus properly issued on the 7th day of November was legally and lawfully served, even if we admit that there was a proper appeal pending in the Territorial court.

This is all I have to say about it.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, an allusion has been made by the Senator from Massachusetts to myself and in reference to what has been said by the Senator from Delaware which makes it proper that I should respond.

I admit that I am not familiar with the laws of Montana. I might go further and say that I am not familiar with the laws of any State or country in the world. The question in this case, as I understood it to be made between the Senator from Massachusetts and the Senator from Delaware, is the allegation on the part of the Senator from Massachusetts that a writ of mandamus which had been issued by this court to the returning or canvassing board of the county of Silver Bow demanding them to count precinct 34 was a void order, and, therefore, that the counting or canvassing of that return by the canvassing board was also void, because, as I understood the Senator from Massachusetts to allege, at the time this peremptory writ was issued there was no authority in the court to issue it for the reason that at that time there was a valid, subsisting appeal from the decree of the court which rendered it incompetent for the court to make the order. That is the issue on the part of the Senator from Massachusetts, as I understand it. Am I correct?

Mr. GRAY. That is the way I understand it.

Mr. GEORGE. The Senator from Delaware took issue upon that, alleging that at that time there was no valid order of appeal, and that is the issue upon which I desire to address a few remarks to the Senate now.

At the civil law, and I believe in admiralty, an appeal, when once validly granted, has the effect to set aside the judgment or decree appealed from, and the power in the appellate court was what the lawyers call de novo, to try the case exactly as if there had been no appeal at all. In Montana I discover from reading the statute, which the Senator from Massachusetts loaned me, an appeal has no such effect. It has the same effect exactly as a writ of error at common law as to a judgment rendered in a common-law court; that is, merely to remove the record from the inferior court to the superior court in order that the superior court may try whether there is an error in that record or not. Section 428 of the Revised Statutes of Montana says:

Whenever an appeal is perfected, as provided in the preceding sections of this chapter, it stays all further proceedings in the court below upon the judgment or order appealed from.

That is, when the appeal is taken it does not vacate the judgment, but has a suspensive effect prohibiting that court from further proceeding in that case. The judgment stands, and it stands with this legal presumption—and I desire to call the attention of Senators to that—the presumption that it is correct.

Now, if I concede all that the Senator from Massachusetts claims, that a valid appeal had been taken, and that, by virtue of the admission of this Territory then as a State into the Union, it could not be further prosecuted, that there was no court to try it, then in what condition did that leave this judgment in the inferior court? As I have before stated and as I have read from the statute, that judgment is valid to all intents and purposes until set aside, and until set aside by what and by whom? By the superior court to which the appeal is taken. The effect of suspension is simply to prevent the inferior court from proceeding with the judgment until the appeal is disposed of.

Mr. President, now comes a law, a valid, constitutional law, which disposes of the appeal by enacting that this appellate court can not and that no other appellate court ever can exercise any jurisdiction to hear the appeal. What is the attitude of the judgment, then? I call the attention of Senators to that view of it. What was the attitude of that judgment when, by the admission of Montana into the Union, no further prosecution of the appeal could be had? It was simply to suspend, to destroy, to forever obliterate any effect whatever arising from the appeal, and leaving the original judgment, which was wholly unaffected by the appeal, in full force and effect.

That is the way the thing stands; so that, if we concede all that the Senator from Massachusetts claims, we have a judgment not exactly unappealed from, but a judgment appealed from, the appeal having been destroyed by law and leaving the original judgment in full force and effect. I should like to hear the answer to that. Where is the answer to that?

Mind, Mr. President, if the appeal had had the effect that it had at the civil law, annulling the judgment appealed from, then the inability of the party to prosecute his appeal would have left that judgment exactly where the appeal left it when it was taken. It would have been no judgment. It would have been set aside and defeated, and that judgment would have been remitted to an original suit to recover the rights embraced in that judgment. But here the man has his judgment, he has a valid judgment; the appeal from that judgment has been destroyed by law, and on the face of the record in the inferior court he has a valid and subsisting judgment. If he can not enforce it, what can he do? I call the attention of the Senate to that. If he can not enforce the judgment as it stands upon the record, what can he do with it? He can not sue again upon the original cause of action, because the answer to that is, "You have already recovered a judgment upon that and you can not recover two judgments upon the same cause of action." Then this remarkable result comes from the destruction of the appellate court and the appeal: that the plaintiff who has recovered a judgment, which has not been set aside or vacated in any sense whatever, a valid, subsisting judgment, which can only be set aside by the prosecution of the appeal, the appeal being destroyed, the plaintiff, according to the position of the Senator from Massachusetts, is like Mohammed's coffin, suspended between heaven and earth, that is, suspended between the original court and the appellate court, with no power to take any step in either. Of course a result so remarkable as that, so absurd as that, can not be entertained by this Senate for a moment.

One other point, and I am through. Suppose we concede to the Senator from Massachusetts all he claims, suppose we concede that this judgment is there and can not be enforced. We are trying here what is the right of the case. Certainly, the judgment has the effect, because it would have that effect on the trial before the appellate court, of carrying with it the presumption that it was correct. How are you going to destroy that presumption, a legal presumption, a presumption which will stand until the end of time according to the law of the land, until the appellate court sets aside the judgment?

Then, the Senate stands with reference to this case in this attitude: We have the judgment of the highest court allowed by law to pass upon this question. I say "highest" because I concede to the Senator that upon the admission of the Territory into the Union as a State no other court was left with capacity and power to revise and reverse it. I repeat, the Senate stands in this attitude with reference to this judgment, or this judgment stands in this attitude for the consideration of the Senate: A judgment of the highest court authorized by law to pass upon this case, adjudging that precinct No. 34, in Silver Bow County, must be counted. How are you going to get around that? There is the court, there is the judgment. It is unrevoked, and, according to the Senator from Massachusetts, there is no earthly tribunal that can reverse it. There it stands.

We have something more than that. Who are the parties that have a right to complain that this judgment is suspended? Who were the defendants in this mandamus suit? Will the Senator from Massachusetts and the Senator from Delaware correct me if I mistake in saying that the county board of canvassers of Silver Bow County were the defendants? Is that so? [Mr. GRAY nodded assent.] Then we have this remarkable thing: We have a judgment that is irreversible and we have the voluntary compliance with that judgment by the only men in this broad world who have a right to complain that the judgment is suspended. I think that closes out the controversy upon that point.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, there is one simple answer to all this, and the lawyers of the Senate will know whether I am wrong. It is claimed that the taking of an appeal or the bringing to the court of an undertaking vacated the judgment.

Mr. GEORGE. No, sir; suspended it.

Mr. HOAR. It never suspended it; it was vacated. That is the law everywhere, as I understand the law.

Mr. GEORGE rose.

Mr. HOAR. Let me finish.

Mr. GEORGE. All right.

Mr. HOAR. An appeal from the judgment of an inferior court lawfully taken vacates that judgment till the appeal is denied, and nothing whatever has happened in the lower court after that in legal contemplation, except the foundation of the preliminary step necessary for the jurisdiction of the superior court; and when that court under that appeal was applied to the judgment of the lower court was vacated. Then came in the statute and said that the appeal should not operate, that it should itself be void under a condition subsequent, to wit, a failure to file the undertaking within five days. Now, at the moment of claiming the appeal the undertaking was tendered to the court and was filed with the clerk. Whether the judge had any power over it I do not know, but the question was raised whether it should be filed, and that question was adjudged.

Now, as I understand the law to be, when a particular document is required to be filed in a public office and it is tendered for filing, that is enough. As the Senator from Delaware said, when a document is required to be filed in a public office in order to give the citizen a legal right, the bringing of that document to the office secures that right, whether the clerk or register or recorder writes on the back of it that it is filed then or postpones it until the next day or the next week or does not do it at all.

That I understand to be the settled law in the United States in proceedings under the bankruptcy act and I understand the courts of the United States have, within a few years, so held. So, then, before this mandate issued the power of that court had been taken from it; the proceedings (except so far as to give jurisdiction to the superior court) before the court that rendered the judgment had been wiped out as if with a wet sponge on a blackboard. That is my understanding of the law.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I take issue with the Senator upon the effect of the appeal. The Senator says the appeal sets aside and annuls the judgment. That was so under the civil law, but in the statute of Montana, section 428, which I read, and which I suppose the Senator did not hear me read, or else he would not have made the statement, we have this language:

SEC. 428. Whenever an appeal is perfected as provided in the preceding sections of this chapter, it stays all further proceedings.

Not that it vacates the judgment, but it suspends and supersedes all further proceedings. That answers that part of the Senator's argument. Now, I will answer the other part. The Senator says that when the record shows that an offer has been made to file an undertaking or file a paper and that offer has been refused, it is equivalent to filing. That may be so when the offer is made to a ministerial officer, but it is not true when it is offered to the court, and if it were true then this record does not show that all the papers necessary to make that undertaking a valid and proper paper to be filed were offered to be filed.

Mr. President, I was about to quote from memory from that paper, but I have a copy of it now by the kindness of my friend from Delaware. Here it is:

To which ruling of the court defendants, by counsel, duly except and file notice of appeal. Defendants also offer for filing an undertaking on appeal; objection was made by counsel for relators to the filing of said undertaking, and filing of same was suspended, pending the order of the court in relation thereto.

All that was offered to be filed was the undertaking, and upon objection being made, not to a ministerial officer, but to the court reviewing it, the court ruled that the offer was insufficient, or at least—and that is the legal meaning of it—the court declined to accept the filing; and why? The record is silent. But now again calling the attention of Senators who are lawyers to the universal principle that the decision of every court upon a question before it is to be presumed to be right unless the record shows to the contrary, and if there be things which are required to be done by law to make this filing perfect and effectual, and the record does not show that those things were offered to be done, the presumption to which I have alluded and which no lawyer will dispute, that the court's ruling is right, will prevail in the silence of the record showing that the court was wrong.

Now let us see what other papers were required to be filed besides this undertaking:

SEC. 430. An undertaking upon appeal shall be of no effect—unless it be accompanied by the affidavits of the sureties that they are each worth the amount specified therein, over and above all their just debts and liabilities.

Utterly worthless—

The court had a right to refuse the filing of this paper without these affidavits. The record is silent as to whether they were offered or not, and the presumption of law is that they were not offered; for if they had been offered the court would have been in error in declining to accept the undertaking.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, one of the Senators belonging to the minority of the committee I supposed would proceed this afternoon, but I understand that Senator would find it inconvenient, in consequence of the condition of his throat, to enter upon debate at the present time, and so—

Mr. CULLOM. Will the Senator allow me to call up a bill?

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator will allow me, I shall be through in a moment. I should like at the present time to understand whether it is the desire of the Senate to proceed with this case on Saturday or on Monday. I suppose the general understanding that Saturday should be devoted to the Calendar would probably prevail; but if any Senator thinks otherwise, I should like to have him now state it. Otherwise I shall not call up this case again until Monday.

Mr. HALE. Was it not the general understanding on the part of the Senate that if the Calendar was not taken up for an hour or more each day Saturdays should be devoted to it?

Mr. HOAR. I say that is my understanding, but if any Senator thinks differently, now is the time to settle that question.

Mr. COCKRELL. The understanding is that all Saturdays are to be devoted to the Calendar of unobjected cases.

Mr. HOAR. Then, unless some other desire is manifested by the Senate, I will now ask that this matter stand over, to be taken up as unfinished business immediately after the close of the routine morning business on Monday next, and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE] will then have the floor. He can take it now and retain it if he pleases.

Mr. VANCE. That is agreeable to me, Mr. President.

Mr. CULLOM. I believe the Senator from Massachusetts agreed to yield to me for a minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TURPIE in the chair). The further consideration of the report in the Montana case will be postponed and remain the unfinished business on Monday next, if there be no objection. The Chair hears no objection.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT AURORA, ILL.

Mr. CULLOM. I believe I have not made a personal request of the Senate this session, and I do not make one now on my own account, except that I think it probable I shall not be able to be here on Saturday, and I am very anxious, for reasons not necessary to relate to the Senate, to call up Senate bill 2714, Order of Business 639, and I ask for present action upon it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HARRIS. What is the Order of Business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be reported by its title.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (S. 2714) for the erection of a public building at the city of Aurora, Ill.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask for the consideration of the bill at this time.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fire-proof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices in the city of Aurora and State of Illinois, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $75,000, which said sum of $75,000 is hereby appropriated for said purpose, out of any moneys in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination, and of his recommendation thereon, and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusion in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $5 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

So much of the appropriation herein made as may be necessary to defray the expenses of advertising for proposals, actual traveling expenses of said agent, and the compensation and actual traveling expenses of said commissioners, and other expenses incident to the selection of the site, and for necessary survey thereof shall be immediately available.

So much of said appropriation as may be necessary for the preparation of sketch-plans, drawings, specifications, and detailed estimates for the building by the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department shall be available immediately upon the approval by the Secretary of the Treasury of such site.

No money appropriated by this act shall be available, except as hereinbefore provided, until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Illinois shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

After the said site shall have been paid for and the sketch-plans and detailed estimates for the building shall have been prepared by the Supervising Architect and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Postmaster-General, the balance of said appropriation shall be available for the erection and completion of the building, including fire-proof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Aurora, in the State of Illinois."

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. McPHERSON, its Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 7496) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes; and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

CENSUS OF CHINESE.

Mr. HALE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 785, being the bill (H. R. 6420) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for taking the eleventh and subsequent censuses," approved March 1, 1889.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT LEADVILLE, COLO.

Mr. TELLER. I ask the Senator from Maine to yield to me while I secure the passage of Senate bill 2950.

Mr. HALE. If the pending bill can be laid aside temporarily I shall yield to the Senator.

Mr. ALLISON. Let us have the regular order.

Mr. TELLER. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of Senate bill 2950, a public-building bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is asked to take up Senate bill 2950 on the request of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER]. Previous to that an order was made to take up a bill on motion of the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], which has been temporarily laid aside.

Mr. TELLER. I do not understand the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] to insist on the regular order now.

Mr. ALLISON. The only desire I have is that whatever Order of Business is transacted to-day shall be concluded to-day. I do not want to have any unfinished business remaining over.

Mr. TELLER. The bill I called up would have been passed by this time.

Mr. HALE. The Senate has already taken up House bill 6420, which is the regular order, I take it, without question, after the bill of the Senator from Colorado shall be disposed of.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask for the regular order, whatever it is.

Mr. TELLER. I hope the Senator will not object to this bill.

Mr. ALLISON. I will not object to this bill, but after it is concluded I shall ask for the regular order.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2950) for the erection of a public building at Leadville, Colo.

Mr. COCKRELL. What is the regular order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is the first bill on the Calendar.

Mr. HALE. I beg pardon; the regular order is the bill taken up on my motion, which is temporarily laid aside till the bill of the Senator from Colorado shall be disposed of.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill (S. 2950) for the erection of a public building at Leadville, Colo., is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fire-proof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices, in the city of Leadville and State of Colorado, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $100,000, which said sum of $100,000 is hereby appropriated for said purpose, out of any moneys in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination, and of his recommendation thereon, and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusion in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $5 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

So much of the appropriation herein made as may be necessary to defray the expenses of advertising for proposals, actual traveling expenses of said agent, and the compensation and actual traveling expenses of said commissioners, and other expenses incident to the selection of the site, and for necessary survey thereof shall be immediately available.

So much of said appropriation as may be necessary for the preparation of sketch-plans, drawings, specifications, and detailed estimates for the building by the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department shall be available immediately upon the approval by the Secretary of the Treasury of such site.

No money appropriated by this act shall be available, except as hereinbefore provided, until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Colorado shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

After the said site shall have been paid for and the sketch-plans and detailed estimates for the building shall have been prepared by the Supervising Architect and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Postmaster-General, the balance of said appropriation shall be available for the erection and completion of the building, including fire-proof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon, at Leadville, in the State of Colorado."

COLLECTION DISTRICT OF PUGET SOUND.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President—

Mr. ALLEN. Will the Senator from Maine yield to me for a moment?

Mr. HALE. I will, if the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] does not call for the regular order.

Mr. ALLISON. I will withdraw my call for the present, but after the Senator from Washington is through with whatever he has to present, I shall ask for the regular order.

Mr. ALLEN. Thank you, sir. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Order of Business 747, Senate bill 3163.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3163) to reorganize and establish the customs collection district of Puget Sound.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment, in section 2, line 12, after the words "subject to the," to strike out "provision" and insert "supervision," so as to read:

Subject to the supervision of the collector of customs at Port Townsend.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. HALE. I now ask that the bill which was taken up on my motion be proceeded with.

Mr. STEWART. I rise to a question of privilege. I am credited in various newspaper dispatches with having introduced a bill to regulate the manufacture, sale, and importation of lager beer. It is stated that "Senator STEWART to-day introduced a bill to regulate the manufacture, sale, and importation of lager beer," and I find that it is commented upon very extensively in the newspaper dispatches. I simply wish to say that I know nothing about the bill and have not introduced such a bill.

CENSUS OF CHINESE.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6420) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for taking the eleventh and subsequent censuses," approved March 1, 1889.

Mr. HALE. I ask, now that the bill is before the Senate, that the formal reading may be dispensed with, and that it be read with the committee amendments to be acted upon as they are reached in the reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to that request? The Chair hears none, and it will be so ordered.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read the bill.

The first amendment of the Committee on the Census was, in section 1, line 8, after the word "complete," to strike out "an" and insert "and;" so as to read:

That the seventeenth section of an act entitled "An act to provide for taking the eleventh and subsequent censuses" be so amended as to authorize and require the Superintendent of Census to enumerate the Chinese population in such manner and with such particulars as to enable him to make a complete and accurate descriptive list of all Chinese persons of either sex who may be found in the United States at the time of taking the census, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1, line 20, after "United States," to insert "except as hereinafter provided;" so as to read:

And that the Superintendent of Census be, and he is, further authorized and required to give to each Chinese person so enumerated in the census an engraved certificate, to be duly numbered and registered in the Census Office, which shall contain all the particulars necessary to fully and accurately identify the Chinese person to whom such certificate shall be issued, and such certificate, when produced by any Chinese person and found to appertain and belong to the holder thereof, shall be the sole evidence of the right of such Chinese person to be and remain in the United States, except as hereinafter provided.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1, line 28, after the word "census," to insert:

Chinese children born in the United States subsequent to June 1, 1890, shall not be held to be Chinese persons within the meaning of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, line 3, after the word "refuse," to insert "to give the information required by the census enumerators at the time of taking the census in June, when so called upon, or who shall fail or refuse," and in line 7 of the same section, after the word "act," to strike out "in submitting himself for such enumeration and;" so as to read:

SEC. 3. That any Chinese person subject to enumeration on the 1st day of June, 1890, who shall fail or refuse to give the information required by the census enumerators at the time of taking the census in June, when so called upon, or who shall fail or refuse, for the period of ninety days from said 1st day of June, to comply with the provisions of this act in obtaining the certificate of identification herein provided, and all Chinese persons found thereafter in the United States without such certificates of identification, shall be deemed to be unlawfully in the United States, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after section 3, to insert as a new section:

SEC. 4. That any Chinese person arrested under the provisions of this act may show by competent testimony that he or she was a resident of the United States prior to the 1st day of June, A. D. 1890, and has been accidentally or otherwise omitted from the census enumeration; and upon establishing such fact to the satisfaction of the court such person shall not be subject to the penalties of this act, but shall be given the certificate provided for in this act by the Secretary of the Interior upon the certification by said court, under its seal, of its judgment in the case, and such certificate shall entitle such said Chinese person to the same privileges and immunities as if originally issued by the Superintendent of the Census; and any enumerator or other officer, agent, or employé of the Census Bureau who shall knowingly omit to enumerate any such Chinese person with intent to subject said person or persons to the penalties of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in a sum not exceeding $1,000 and imprisoned for a term not exceeding two years.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 6, line 7, after the word "required," to insert:

And every Chinese person other than a laborer who may enter the United States after the enumeration herein required shall have been concluded, and who shall be the bona fide holder of the certificate prescribed by section 6 of an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to execute certain treaty stipulations relating to Chinese,'" approved July 3, 1894, and who shall have entered the United States in conformity with the requirements of said act approved July 3, 1894, shall be deemed to be lawfully entitled to be and remain in the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. EUSTIS. I should like to ask the chairman of this committee to explain to the Senate what is the necessity for this proposed law; whether its object be to take a census of the Chinese or whether that census will not be taken under existing law.

Mr. HALE. It is desirable, Mr. President, for many reasons, which will be apparent to Senators, that there should be a complete enumeration of the Chinese inhabitants of the United States. That enumeration, without raising any of the other questions which are called up by the provisions of the bill, would perhaps be difficult to be taken completely and accurately by the ordinary enumerators. The subdivisions of the districts need to be different, and, therefore, in accordance with the general proposition that the Superintendent of Census should have extraordinary powers in the way of affording enumerators for this distinct purpose, the committee thus far has agreed to the bill.

Beyond that is an undoubted object, aside from what is strictly census business, in the demand that comes from the Pacific coast that there should be an identification of the Chinaman who is here and has a right to remain here, as against the Chinaman who, contrary to the spirit and letter of the late legislation of Congress, is constantly stealing into the United States. Do the best our officials can under the old certificates, which were authorized by the acts of 1882 and 1884, Chinamen are constantly coming in, as it is alleged, by the thousands, coming in over the line between us and the British Provinces, coming in by way of Mexico, and it is impossible to send them away under the present acts which Congress has passed.

Taking advantage of the forthcoming census, which is to include Chinamen, this bill provides that every Chinese person enumerated by the census-takers shall receive within three months from the time when he is enumerated a certificate, which shall be engraved and formal and shall be lodged in the form of a copy in the Census Office, and shall be a permanent record of all Chinamen that are found here on the 1st day of June next. That certificate is to take the place of all other certifications which are only partial and which apply in only certain cases under the previous legislation of the United States.

The bill as it came from the House of Representatives to the Census Committee has been altered in very material ways. Under the provisions of the House bill, as Senators will have noticed if they have followed the reading of the bill, it was provided that any question arising hereafter with reference to the right of a Chinaman to remain in this country, he being found here, would depend upon this certificate, which was to be, in the language of the House bill, the sole evidence of his right. The Committee of the Senate did not deem that just to the Chinaman who is already here, and in the amendment which is found upon page 5, and which now forms section 4 of the bill, it is provided that when any question arises hereafter about the right of a Chinaman to remain in this country he shall have the right by competent evidence to show that he was a resident at the time when the census was taken in 1890. Otherwise the committee thought it would be hard upon the Chinamen if the enumerator escaped them or for any cause declined to take them, or if they could not be reached, that they should be confined to the evidence furnished by the document alone and nothing else, and therefore the provision is found.

Provisions have also been inserted in the interest of a fair enumeration in order that these alien people may have the protection of the laws if they are here, making it imperative upon enumerators to take the enumeration of every Chinaman by special penalties which are fixed upon the enumerators.

In reference to another class, which the House bill left out, the present legislation is based, as Senators will remember, on the labor clauses in the acts of 1882 and 1884 and 1888, applying only to laborers. It does not exclude the Chinese merchant; it does not exclude the Chinese student; it does not exclude the Chinese traveler; but under the ordinary comity existing and pervading the relations of nations they, under the Senate amendments, are allowed to come here, and they are not made subject to the drastic provisions of the bill. That is another amendment that the Senate committee put on.

The committee dealt with the subject after several hearings of persons upon both sides of the question, and deemed it wise and just and fair that the extreme features found in the House bill should be modified so that the Chinaman who is here on June 1 should have the chance of establishing that fact hereafter.

It is undoubtedly the purpose of the bill to segregate these people by this enumeration, which shall describe and define and limit them, so that subsequent accessions to this population shall be prevented. That I am free to say, Mr. President. I fully agree to, and I am in sympathy with, the purposes of the bill. The committee did not attempt to strike out that, because it considered that this question had been settled over and over again in important debates which have arisen in Congress, and in important legislation which has been placed upon the statute-book, legislation which has passed the scrutiny of the courts, and which has been decided to be constitutional legislation.

All that great domain which was brought out in the discussion that occurred heretofore in this body and elsewhere about the advisability of legislating so sharply against the spirit of treaties and against a nation with whom we were friendly and with whom we were engaged somewhat in commercial relations, was left outside of the purview of the amendments submitted by the committee.

The committee admitted that that had been settled heretofore; but upon the question of giving protection to the Chinaman who is here, who is upon our hands, whom we have permitted to come and who is found here now, the committee's amendments were based upon the proposition that these people should have the full rights that any people should have in this regard.

That, Mr. President, is the spirit of the bill with the amendments which have been provided for by the Senate Committee on the Census.

Mr. EVARTS. Mr. President, I received only this morning a petition bearing upon the provision which is now under discussion, and as I have not had an opportunity to look at the bill with the amendments, I am somewhat in the dark as to the extent to which the amendments now made by the committee meet the objections on the part of the religious boards that are opposing this provision as it has passed the other House, in reference to their attitude and their missionaries and their relation to China and our obligation. I will ask that this petition may be read now for information, as it is a short statement of the subject.

The Secretary read as follows:

MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.
150 FIFTH AVENUE, New York, March 31, 1890.

To the Senate of the United States, Washington, D. C.:

The undersigned, corresponding secretaries of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, respectfully present this our protest against the passage of the bill now pending before your body, and which passed the House of Representatives on the 17th instant, providing that any Chinese found in the United States after a certain date without certificates from the census enumerators shall be liable to deportation or imprisonment.

We would respectfully represent that the spirit of retaliation is rapidly rising in China, and that our missionaries and merchants are in danger from the repeated acts of unfriendly legislation toward the Chinese in this country; that these acts have already gone too far; that there is no national danger to us from the presence of the Chinese now in this country, who number less than 100,000; that they are among the most quiet and inoffensive of all the immigrants within our borders; that they are seldom found in our jails or in our poor-houses; that it would be a great outrage to add this additional act of injustice to the rigid measures already passed against these people.

The society which we represent has large interests in China. We have four separate missions, with 75 American missionaries, associated with whom are nearly 70 ordained native preachers, besides a large number of unordained preachers, with over 5,000 native Christians connected with our churches; with church property and mission-houses valued at over $160,000, besides orphanages, schools, hospitals, and printing-presses valued at over $50,000. Societies of other Christian denominations in this country have similar large interests. Our missionaries and our property are gravely imperiled by the proposed additional, unnecessary, and unjustifiable legislation.

In the name of common humanity, in the interest of the fair reputation of our beloved country, and in the interest of continued peaceful relations between us and the greatest nation of the Orient, we protest against the proposed enactment, and beg the Senate to wait until the Christian sentiment of the United States can be heard upon this subject.

C. C. McCABE,
J. O. PECK,
A. B. LEONARD,
Corresponding Secretaries.

Mr. HALE. The subject-matter of this memorial was before the committee and is covered by the amendment at the end of section 6. As the House of Representatives left this bill, there was no exception to its provisions, excepting consular and diplomatic officers and their attendants. The Senate committee reported the amendment which is found at the end of section 6, which includes all of the classes referred to in the petition which has been presented by the Senator from New York, and leaves that as it is at present, so that merchants, travelers, students, missionaries, if there are any, and in fact any person other than laborers shall be unrestricted, because the committee considered that the fundamental proposition upon which our Chinese legislation has proceeded was the exclusion of laborers, the element that comes into competition with American labor, and it found on investigating the statutes that the distinction had been carefully maintained. Therefore the amendment which was submitted by the committee is in the interest of the Chinese merchant, traveler, student, and in fact all others than laborers, and that amendment has been reported and read to the Senate and already adopted.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President, I wish to make one suggestion in reply to the memorial which has been read. If the good people who sent that memorial here would go into any country where the Chinese are and see how they drive out churches and other institutions which are necessary to civilization, they would not be in the way of excluding Chinamen from this land. If we wish to maintain churches and school-houses in this country and maintain them in their perfection, as we do in some sections, we must exclude the Chinese. Where you establish one school-house or one church in China, the presence of 50,000 or 100,000 of those people here will drive out ten times the number in our own country. If these good people would go and see the spectacle which is presented on the Pacific coast and wherever these Chinamen resort, and see the effect which their presence has upon our society and our people, it would soon be manifest to them that the little good which they can hope to accomplish in China would amount to nothing as compared with the evil which the Chinese by their presence inflict on our country.

Mr. EVARTS. Mr. President—

Mr. HALE. I wish to say, if the Senator from New York will permit me, that, so far as I am concerned, I should have been willing to go further and stronger in the way of exclusion than the bill does as reported from the Census Committee of the Senate. I did not vote for all the amendments in the committee, but I am here and now representing the sentiment and voice of the committee in ameliorating, as I think it does in many respects, fairly and wisely, some of the provisions of the House bill.

I fully agree with the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] that if the gentlemen who are behind this petition, and others having that feeling, would go to the Pacific coast and see this population and be about where it lives and exists for a few days, many of the feelings which they honestly harbor and which are represented in their petitions here would disappear.

The amendments of the committee are all in the direction of making the bill less severe, and I fear it has gone so far that it may be difficult even to make its provisions operate to the exclusion of Chinese who are not here already.

Mr. EVARTS. Mr. President, it will not, I think, be safe for the Senator from Nevada or the Senator from Maine to assume that these able and eminent men, distributed all over this country in the Methodist connection and in all the other religious societies of this land, had not fixed their eyes on the question of the Chinese and the Chinese here, nor on the inconveniences or the enormities, if I may use a large word, connected with their presence here. I know no right we have to suppose that this large and organized and ever-active religious sentiment and obedience is not as attentive to the welfare of this country as the Senators here are, and I know their eyes are more prevalent in these investigations than those that we have.

Mr. President, I have always been from the beginning, and am now, for the exclusion of Chinese immigration. Every step that has been taken has been taken with my concurrence, either in this place or in other forms of authority. I except, however, what I must regard as a great error, the course taken when the Chinese treaty was still pending.

As I have said to the Senator from Maine, I spoke somewhat in the dark, wholly in the dark, as to this provision, and I ask that as the Senator pointed it out it may now be read.

Mr. HALE. The Secretary had better read the whole of section 6, because the first part of it to line 7 shows how the other House left the bill, and the succeeding part shows that we have adopted all the provisions under the present law and treaty with reference to other persons.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The section will be read as indicated.

The SECRETARY. Section 6—

Mr. EUSTIS. I should like to ask the Senator from Maine a question. Leaving out of view this proposed law, what is the condition of a Chinaman who is in this country in violation of the exclusion act?

Mr. HALE. Will not the Senator state that question again, so that I may see just what class of Chinamen he is inquiring about?

Mr. EUSTIS. Suppose that a Chinaman is to-day in the United States, and he is in the United States in violation of the exclusion act, what is his condition as regards the Government? Can he be punished?

Mr. HALE. He can be deported.

Mr. EUSTIS. I know; but can he be punished? Is it a criminal offense?

Mr. HALE. I am not certain about that. He can be deported.

Mr. EUSTIS. I know he can be deported. What I want to know is whether he can be prosecuted criminally.

Mr. HALE. I am not certain about that.

Mr. STEWART. Oh, no; he can not.

Mr. EUSTIS. He can not?

Mr. STEWART. No.

Mr. EUSTIS. Mr. President, it strikes me as a little strange that the Census Committee, which is a committee charged, as I understand, with simply the duty of having the population of this country enumerated and charged with the duty of having a census taken, for instance, in regard to occupations, and so on, should undertake to report to the Senate a bill which has nothing to do with the question of census, but has a great deal to do with the question of not only municipal police, but of international-law relations and obligations, and by what is called an amendment to the census law to present for our consideration questions which have nothing whatsoever to do with the census, to provide penal statutes with reference to a certain class of people residing in the United States by reason of treaty rights, to subject them to peculiar degradation, to give what I would consider just cause of complaint by a foreign government, a government which we consider within the range of the family of nations, a civilized government with which we have entered into solemn treaties, with which nation we are engaged in important and valuable commercial relations, a nation which from our standpoint up to this time has no right to complain of what the Congress of the United States has thought proper to do with regard to this important question, but a nation which we all know has not submitted to our legislation without some feeling of resentment and some feeling of indignation.

Now, for us, without any cause, without any necessity, without any provocation, to aggravate and to intensify that feeling, to cause more irritation between our Government and the Chinese Government, to reopen wounds which have been healing, by a proposition which is brought from the Census Committee, by a measure that has no possible connection with the question of enumeration or the question of census, seems to me most remarkable.

While I have voted in favor of every exclusion act which has been proposed in Congress and while I have believed that that legislation, harsh and stern as it may appear to the Chinese Government, has been necessary and wise, I do not feel prepared to go beyond the point which we have reached and to offer what I consider an insult to the Chinese nation and to the Chinese Government. I for one am prepared to insult foreign governments when it is necessary to do so, when it is necessary to maintain and preserve the dignity and the power of our Government; but why, in the absence of any provocation whatsoever, should we provide in taking a census that this people shall wear a tag like animals, for it will be as degrading to them to receive this chromo, this engraving for their identification, as it would be to carry any badge to exhibit to the public that they are subject to the suspicions of our Government and are therefore a degraded people? We propose to spend $100,000 to present these Chinese laborers with engravings, pictures of themselves, to have a vast Chinese picture gallery at the expense of our Government, to have hundreds of additional Republican enumerators, and for what? To discover whether a Chinaman has a right to be in this country or not, to identify him.

Why, Mr. President, we have laws upon that subject already in existence. We have stringent laws, rigid laws, governing the question of excluding the Chinese from our territory and their right to reside in our territory. I think that the Census Committee ought to adopt some other mode than the mode here proposed. If they want to increase the expenditures for this census and to increase their vast army of enumerators, it can be done without presenting to the Chinese residents of our country chromos and engravings. A leather tag would be much cheaper. I have no doubt that you could buy one for 10 cents and tie it to a string and let a Chinaman wear it around his neck.

Mr. President, I am not pandering to the feeling on the Pacific Slope. I am not prepared to vote for a law which accomplishes no beneficial purpose. If the laws excluding the Chinese are not sufficiently severe, if they are not sufficiently comprehensive, if there are loop-holes and gaps in those laws by which evasions are made on the part of the Chinese, let amendments be proposed to those laws, and I shall vote for those amendments, as will every Democratic Senator in this Chamber, as we have done in the past. We have been the advocates of Chinese exclusion. It was during the administration of Mr. Cleveland that the most exclusive of all Chinese exclusion acts was passed. We stand on that platform to-day.

You have a race prejudice against these Chinese. So have I. I avow it. I proclaim it. I say that there is such a thing as antagonism of races. You deny it when it comes to the question of the negro and the white man. You say that the negro is not the inferior of the white man; that he is the equal of the white man; that he can live in harmony and in peace with the white man; that the white and colored races can share the responsibilities and duties of Government; that they can march shoulder to shoulder and advance in the great strides of civilization; that they can build up social order, promote the greatness and prosperity and majesty of our great country and of our great Government. We have denied that principle. We believe that God Almighty has created different races in this world; that the Chinese race is a different race from the Anglo-Saxon race; that the African race is a different race from the Anglo-Saxon race; and we Democrats and Southern Senators have voted upon this Chinese question in order to prevent and avoid those terrible collisions and terrible conflicts which are likely to arise between those different races. We have voted in order to secure peace and prosperity to the Pacific Slope when we have heard the appeals from our fellow-countrymen that the enormous influx of the Chinese race should be arrested. We have set treaties aside and passed laws in order to exclude that foreign race and that foreign element in favor of the Anglo-Saxon race because we believe that this is a white man's country and a white man's Government.

That is not your platform. Those are not your doctrines. Those are not your proclaimed beliefs. You are ready at any sacrifice to make war upon the Chinese race, but you ask us to keep in lovable embrace the African race, which is inferior to the Chinese race in every respect.

And now you come forward with a proposed law which asks us to go much further than we have ever gone. That is the reason why I ventured to propound to the chairman of the committee the inquiry what was the necessity for this legislation. I say that if we are to reopen this question of Chinese exclusion, let it be done in a proper way and not under disguise and concealment, under the sham and mockery of taking a census. We have a Committee on Foreign Relations; we have a Committee on the Judiciary; we have committees which can carefully scrutinize these measures, who can weigh these important questions, who can consider these important matters, and let us know whether or not we shall promote the interests of our people and of our Government by furnishing material for further irritation and further provocation to arise between the Chinese Government and the American Government.

I repeat, sir, that upon the naked proposition of absolutely excluding the Chinese I have voted every time in favor of that proposition, and I propose to do it in the future; but here you have a measure which degrades a class of people, insults a foreign Government, puts an indelible stigma upon a foreign nation, places our Government in a false position and in a false attitude, ay, even making it a penal offense, a penitentiary offense, for a Chinaman not to answer the enumerator's questions that he may propound to him, whereas under existing law that is not an offense with regard to any other class of people, as I understand.

I say, Mr. President, that the Census Committee has bowed down to this House bill, which, in my judgment, is the most outrageous bill that was ever sent to this body. The idea that a Chinese student, a Chinese merchant, a Chinese scholar, a Chinese scientist, as the House bill proposes, should be required to have an engraving, or chromo, or picture of himself in order that he shall be identified while he is in this country, not only by virtue of treaty rights and treaty obligations, but by virtue of treaties which were made at the solicitation of our Government, and not at the solicitation of the Chinese Government!

Mr. DAWES. Why should a Chinese laborer carry around his neck a ticket-of-leave any more than a Chinese student?

Mr. EUSTIS. That is what I do not understand.

Mr. HALE. There is nothing of that kind provided for in the bill.

Mr. EUSTIS. I will say that the Senate Census Committee have eliminated from the bill that feature, and, as amended by them, it allows Chinese noblemen and Chinese merchants and Chinese scientists to be relieved from wearing that badge of degradation.

If it be the purpose to have a census of the Chinese, if that be the object of the measure, I think that is fully and amply covered by existing statutes. If that be not the object of the measure, as I understood the Senator from Maine to intimate very candidly and very clearly, I say that this is too important a question for us to deal with in this way. Our trade with China is exceedingly important. We are in competition to-day with Germany and with England in securing the advantage of that trade. It is known to us that the Chinese people and the Chinese Government are to-day engaged in vast works of public improvement. There is great competition for influence with regard to that people and with regard to our Government; and while we have felt it our duty to exclude the Chinese laborer from our territory, and we have done that by prohibitory and stringent laws, while I approve and justify that legislation, I see no necessity why the Chinese Government and the Chinese people shall be insulted, affronted, and degraded by the Committee on the Census of this body.

Mr. BERRY and Mr. HALE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. HALE. Before the Senator from Louisiana sits down, I should like to ask him if he does not perceive that the object of the bill, aside from the mere taking of an enumeration of the numbers of the Chinese, is to carry out the settled policy of the Government as shown by its legislation in the past, in which he says he has willingly participated, of excluding Chinese laborers from coming in hereafter? That is the only object. It is no degradation to the Chinaman who is here that there shall be afforded to him an opportunity of showing by a certificate which the Government gives to him free that he may remain here, and that no rude hand can be laid upon him to molest him in that right. It is not a tag, as the Senator says, that is to be hung about his neck as a badge of degradation, but it is to show what is the number and who are the persons from China who are here on the 1st day of June, and to let them remain here, while it is to exclude others who come in afterwards and are coming in all the time.

The Senator may declaim as much as he will about his desire to participate in the exclusion theory with reference to Chinese, unless the Senate passes this bill or some such bill as this hundreds and thousands of them will come in from month to month and from year to year, as they are now coming in. The object of the bill is to prevent that.

Mr. EUSTIS. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has recognized the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY].

Mr. EUSTIS. I merely want to answer the Senator from Maine in a few words.

Mr. BERRY. I yield to the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. EUSTIS. I was admitting that to be the object and purpose of the bill. That is a matter with which the Census Committee has nothing whatever to do, in my judgment.

Mr. HALE. The other House sent the bill over here as a proposition from the Census Committee of the House, and the Senate referred it to the Census Committee, and as we all know, as the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY] knows, whom I do not wish to interrupt, we found the matter before us and dealt with it accordingly.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. EUSTIS] wholly misunderstands the scope of the amendments which have been adopted by the Senate committee. The argument he made would apply very well, I admit, to the bill as it came from the other House, but it does not apply to the bill reported with amendments from the Senate committee.

I agree with all the Senator from Louisiana has said on the race question. I believe with him that there are race antagonisms which can not be reconciled, and so long as it is attempted there will be irritation and friction. I agree with the Senator from Louisiana that the Senator from Maine and others who agree with that Senator are wholly inconsistent when they make rigid laws against the Chinese and treat them as an inferior race and entitled to no rights, and at the same time claim that the African is the equal in all respects with the white man and should be protected in every privilege. For that reason and for the same reason that has actuated the Senator from Louisiana, I have voted for every Chinese exclusion bill that has arisen since I have been a member of the Senate. But it seems to me that what the Senator from Louisiana says in regard to race questions and his argument in favor of these Chinese do not agree. I am upon the same line that I have been, while he seems disposed to part company.

The object and purpose of the bill as it came from the other House was, as avowed by the California delegation which appeared before our committee, to carry out the act of 1884, which excluded Chinese laborers from this country. The act of 1884 was passed under a treaty with China which authorized us to exclude Chinese laborers from this country, and was passed for that effect. It was claimed by the Representatives from the Pacific coast, Democrats and Republicans (every Representative from California, I believe, and the Senator from Oregon appeared before the committee), that that law was being constantly evaded by Chinese, who crossed from British Columbia, from Vancouver's Island, and from Mexico and other points, and were coming in by the hundreds, in violation of the law of Congress. They claimed that it was necessary to have a registration of the Chinese who are here now and entitled to remain. The committee of the Senate believed that the provisions of the bill as it came from the other House were harsh and unjust and would operate to exclude some of those who are already here and who have a right to remain.

The bill as it came to the Senate provided that the sole evidence of the right of a Chinaman to be here ninety days after the 1st day of June should be the certificate given by the supervisor of the census.

I for one believed that that was unjust, that it was not right, and I fought the provision from the beginning until the time the bill was reported. A majority of the committee agreed with me, and we amended the bill so as to authorize any one who did not have the certificate, who failed to receive it from the enumerator, who by mistake did not get it, to show before a United States court that he was here on the 1st day of June and that he had a right to be here at that time, and when he did show that that he should receive a certificate from the court. That is one of the Senate committee amendments to which I say the entire delegation from the Pacific Slope objected, but it was passed by the Senate committee over their objection and we provided that it should be done.

The bill as it came from the other House furthermore practically excluded all merchants, all students, all missionaries, and all travelers in this country who should not be here on the 1st day of June. They had a representative before the committee, General Foster, who was formerly minister to Mexico, and, I think, to Spain, who appeared in their behalf. He advocated these amendments, which, as I understood him, would be entirely satisfactory to those he represented, the Chinese merchants and others of the country, if they were adopted.

The Senate committee did adopt an amendment by which no man is excluded under this measure who is not already excluded by the law of 1884. The Senate committee amendments, I repeat, leave every man who has a right to come under the present law so that he still has the right. Then the only effect of the bill will be simply to register those who have a right to be here and who are now here. It excludes no Chinaman who has a right to come in under the present law, but, on the contrary, it affords protection to those who are here by showing that they have been registered and hereafter their right to have been here on the 1st day of June can not be questioned. If they have a certificate it is an absolute protection to them from being deported from the country on the ground that they have come here since that time.

As I said, and I repeat, every member from the Pacific Slope objected to these amendments and fought them from the very beginning, and as I understand to-day they are opposing them in the other House and will insist upon the bill as it passed that body. The amendments that were adopted by the Senate committee were in the interest and for the protection of the Chinese. The bill as amended by the Senate committee does not exclude any Chinaman who now has a right to come, but it will have the effect to keep out laborers who, under the present law, have no right to be here.

Mr. President, I for one am opposed to the Chinese coming here. As I said awhile ago, I sympathize to a great extent with the feeling on the Pacific Slope, that these people, an alien race, who have nothing in common with the white people of this country, ought not to be permitted to come, and that as to those who are excluded by the present law such a law should be passed as will keep them out.

Therefore, I say that the bill as amended by the Senate committee can do no injury to them, but, on the contrary, it will afford a protection to those already here. It will exclude those from coming in who are violating the law which is now upon our statute-book. Therefore, I think the bill should be passed as proposed to be amended by the committee.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, only a few words, because it is getting late, and I should be glad, if practicable, to reach a vote. I merely wish to call the attention of the Senate to the point made by the Senator from Louisiana that there is something like putting a stigma upon the Chinese population which is here, by granting this certificate. So far from that being the fact, all the legislation in connection with the treaty that now exists in reference to the dealing with these people provides for the method of certification. No student, however earnest may be his desire to become indoctrinated or informed upon our institutions, who comes here for that purpose; no merchant, however large may be his dealings with his fellow-men; no missionary, however beneficent may be his object; no professor, however learned he may be, under the law that the Senator from Louisiana has helped to make can now set foot upon this shore without a certificate identifying him, describing him, a chromo, if the Senator chooses to call it, tied about his neck, because early in this controversy it was learned that some method of discriminating between persons allowed to come here and persons not allowed should be fixed upon, and the certification was so fixed. It is for protection, and not as a disgrace.

Mr. President, the course of legislation upon this subject has been clear and plain and in one direction. Under the acts of 1882 and 1884 Chinese laborers departing were allowed to return. Hundreds and thousands and tens of thousands came into this country without certificates, which were furnished by the law and which nobody believed were a stigma or disgrace to them, and the courts in San Francisco and other ports were crowded with thousands of cases wherein it was claimed that they had a right to land, because it was alleged in their affidavits and testimony furnished that they came in during the time between 1880 and 1882, when the first exclusion act was passed. Congress legislated, if possible, to cover that in the act of 1888 known as the Scott exclusion act, which is simple, clear, plain, decisive, ruthless if you choose so to call it, in its provisions. It declares in a few sections—

That from and after the passage of this act it shall be unlawful for any Chinese laborer who shall at any time heretofore have been, or who may now or hereafter be, a resident within the United States, and who shall have departed—or shall depart therefrom, and shall not have returned before the passage of this act, to return to or remain in the United States.

No matter what his certificate—

All the previous legislation that sought to regulate departures and returns was swept away by that act, which has been decided to be constitutional by the courts of the United States. Now, the communities where this population is found, the entire Pacific Slope without distinction of party, come to us and say that they labor under a grievance which involves not the treatment of these people who are here, but the constant inflow and accession of thousands who are coming in against the act that was adopted in 1888, and that the only protection which exists on that coast (unless the Senator from Louisiana wants to invalidate the whole law in its scope and spirit) is to segregate the population that is here now by a system of certification that shall take the place of all other certifications, that is open and free to every Chinese person on the 1st day of June, and that shall be the rule to be followed hereafter, and the limitation as to the extent of Chinese population.

The Senator may disguise his act as much as he chooses, he may declaim about his allegiance to the proposition of exclusion, but I tell him (and the whole Pacific coast delegation are a unit upon that subject), unless you here and now do pass a bill, this or another like it, that gives the certification so that you may identify this population, thousands and tens of thousands of Chinamen will come in over the border, north and south, and you have no law to regulate it. It is the imploring appeal again of the Pacific coast population that Congress shall here and now, taking advantage of the occasion of this census which enables us to seize upon this subject and legislate upon it, give them protection against the thousands of Chinese who are coming in. That is all there is in the bill.

The Senator says that it is a new departure; that it is more extreme than any other measure. I deny it. As the House bill stands to-day, amended by the amendments that have been reported from the Committee on the Census, it is only in the line of carrying out the proposition that was assented to in the Scott exclusion law of 1888. It is only to breathe the breath of life into that act. It is only to prevent the incursion, the coming in of thousands more and more every year of these people. That is the whole scope and purpose.

The Committee on the Census, confronted with this proposition referred to them by the Senate, passed upon by the committee in the other House, having to act upon it, recognized that there were provisions in the bill which were unduly severe and struck them out. But they did not, and I venture to say that that committee never will, depart from the original purpose of the bill, and that is to make effective the legislation that has heretofore been built up by Congress to exclude new Chinese persons from coming in. I say again that, disguise it as the Senator may, his opposition to this bill is in opposition to the vital purpose of it, which is one of exclusion of more and more of this element from coming here.

Mr. EVARTS. Mr. President, I had asked while I had possession of the floor that the amendment might be read, and thereupon the Secretary was proceeding to read it, and this debate sprang up. I now ask that the sixth section be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Section 6 will be read by the Secretary.

The Secretary read as follows:

SEC. 6. That the preceding sections shall not apply to Chinese diplomatic or consular officers or their attendants, who shall be admitted to the United States under special instructions of the Treasury Department, and be entitled to remain without production of other evidence than that of personal and official identity, when such identification is required.

Mr. HALE. So far that is the House proposition. What follows, as the Secretary will read it, is the amendment that the Senate Census Committee has put upon the bill.

The Secretary read as follows:

And every Chinese person other than a laborer who may enter the United States after the enumeration herein required shall have been concluded and who shall be the bona fide holder of the certificate prescribed by section 6 of an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to execute certain treaty stipulations relating to Chinese,' approved July 5, 1884, and who shall have entered the United States in conformity with the requirements of said act approved July 5, 1884, shall be deemed to be lawfully entitled to be and remain in the United States.

Mr. EVARTS. Mr. President, I believe that I am not alone in finding this bill now presently presented for passage a new one. This bill has been passed by the other House and sent up here and referred to a committee, and during that process no attention, perhaps, is drawn on the part of Senators to the bill pending. Now, it is produced to-day. The Senator from Maine, with great intelligence, and, I have no doubt, with great fidelity, assures me that the amendments proposed by the committee cover all the objections of this religious community that I have brought to the notice of the Senate. There is, however, as appears, an opinion which seems to be somewhat substantial, and that is, that in the provisions of this bill, besides what accompanies a census and an identification, there are also some provisions of a penal character that are connected with the continuance in this country of those who are not entitled to remain here. Am I right in that opinion?

Mr. HALE. Undoubtedly.

Mr. EVARTS. Now, that does not belong to a census enumeration. A census enumeration is to learn who the people are, who are here; and this method of identification is not to be objected to if the legislation itself, and with which I am now finding no quarrel, is right. The process or the method that is necessary to identify these peculiar people in order to execute our rightful authority as shown in our law-making is not to be found fault with. If there be an extravagance or an oppression or an opprobrium in the method, that is a subject of criticism by itself, and I am assured by the Senator from Maine that those elements are not in this bill.

Mr. President, why should this census bill proceed into the region of crimes legislation? Unless I can receive some reason beyond what suggests itself to me from my general views and purposes in regard to legislation, I can not see that it belongs in a census-enumeration bill. But it is impossible for me, and I must assume that there are others on this floor who are unable to form their own judgments regarding this somewhat complex bill, which partakes of the innocent character of census and also of an efficient probable agency of prospective criminal legislation. I would ask, therefore, that this matter might go over till another day, that we may have an opportunity to examine it.

Mr. HALE. I have no objection, as it is late, that the bill shall go over, provided an agreement can be reached as to some particular time when it can be taken up and finished. I do not believe it will take much more time in debate, and meanwhile Senators can have an opportunity to examine it. I will ask the Senator from Massachusetts who is in charge of the Montana resolutions, which will undoubtedly give rise to extended and long debate, whether he objects, if his measure is not displaced as the unfinished business, to this bill being taken up to occupy some brief time on Monday morning after the routine business.

Mr. HOAR. I am hardly at liberty to answer the question of the Senator from Maine just now, because I would have to consult some absent Senators, who have something to do with that case, as to the course to be pursued on Monday. I do not think there will be any difficulty in getting the bill up, however.

Mr. VOORHEES. Will the Senator from Maine yield to me for a motion to adjourn?

Mr. HALE. My remarks were preliminary to that motion. I do not propose to keep the Senate here longer to-day.

Mr. HOAR. Before a motion to adjourn is made I should like to put a question to the Senator from Maine about this bill. He can answer it in one-half minute.

Mr. VOORHEES. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. It is a question about its machinery. If there is anything in the point, he may want to consider it before the bill comes up again. If I understand a hasty reading of this bill, anybody found without the certificate—

Mr. VOORHEES. I am informed by Senators on the other side of the Chamber that it is desirable to have a short executive session. That being the case, I withdraw my motion for an adjournment.

Mr. HALE. Will the Senator withhold the motion for a moment?

Mr. VOORHEES. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. Let me complete my question to the Senator from Maine, please, which I had half put. The bill provides that a person found without the certificate shall either be imprisoned or sentenced to deportation, of course at the expense of the United States, because the judgment of deportation is to be executed. A later section, section 8, provides that when a Chinese person wishes to depart he shall not be at liberty to depart unless he produces his certificate or shows what in substance is an excuse for the loss of the same, or something of that kind. I wish to ask the Senator from Maine why it is that if a man is departing, leaving the country at his own expense, it is worth while to arrest him and have a trial of him simply for the sake of carrying him out of the country at the expense of the United States.

Mr. HALE. The Senator has got it just wrong, and I am glad he has asked the question. It is necessary to have some alternative discretion that the court may exercise where a Chinaman comes, being ready to depart, without a certificate. Otherwise, if he is to be sent home, not at his own expense, but at the expense of the Government, unless you have some alternative provision allowing the judge the right to put a penalty upon the Chinaman, whenever he has got such accumulations as satisfy him, and he is ready to depart, he will destroy his certificate.

Mr. STEWART. Or sell it.

Mr. HALE. Or sell it to another man, and he will come up and will be adjudged as having no right to be here and will go back at the expense of the Government. To prevent that, which has been an evil already, the provision was put in that there should be an alternative of punishment.

Mr. MITCHELL. The Senator from Indiana yields to me for a moment.

Mr. VOORHEES. I have agreed with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SAWYER] to move a short executive session. I now yield the floor to the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL].

Mr. HALE. Will the Senator from Oregon let me make a statement simply about the order of business?

Mr. MITCHELL. Certainly.

Mr. HALE. I propose to ask the Senate on Monday morning, directly after the routine business, to take this bill up and finish it. It is not agreed upon, because the Senator from Massachusetts can not confer with Senators who then have the floor on the Montana case, but I have no doubt I can make that arrangement and have the unfinished business postponed for an hour or two, if that shall be necessary.

Mr. MITCHELL. I desire to occupy the attention of the Senate just one minute. I was not aware that this bill was to be called up this evening and was unavoidably absent from the Senate Chamber, and coming here I find that it is up, which I regret, as I desired to propose two or three amendments. As the bill is to go over I wish now to suggest the amendments, which I think are very important, because on an examination of the bill I am perfectly satisfied that the effect of one or two of the amendments that have been made by the committee is wholly and entirely different from that intended, as I think they will find upon a careful examination.

Mr. HALE. The Senator means by that to say that the committee has gone too far in its amendments?

Mr. MITCHELL. Certainly.

Mr. HALE. That is the Senator's belief, I have no doubt.

Mr. MITCHELL. I believe that. Of course this is not an exclusion bill. It is not intended to be an exclusion bill. This is a bill to enforce the provisions of the Constitution in relation to the taking of the census. If it were an exclusion bill, then of course I would desire it to go very much further; but what I mean to say is just what I did say precisely in the first place, that I hardly think the effect of the amendments that have been offered by the committee is precisely what the committee intended. I think they have been led into an error. I think they will find that out on a careful examination of the case.

Mr. HALE. Which way?

Mr. MITCHELL. I think they have been led into this error: I think they have made an amendment here which, if finally adopted, would be an absolute repeal of the Scott exclusion act. That is what I mean. Now, that was hardly intended, I presume.

Mr. HALE. No, it was not. The Senator is not alone in this fear. Other representatives from the Pacific coast fear that the amendments reported by the committee not only emasculate the Scott law in its action, but the previous settled legislation of Congress.

Mr. MITCHELL. I have no doubt about it at all.

Mr. HALE. I do not think so.

Mr. MITCHELL. I will state my amendments that they may go into the RECORD and may be considered when the bill comes up again. I shall move when the proper time comes to strike out the words "prior to," in line 3, on page 5, section 4, and insert in lieu thereof the words "on the 17th day of November, 1880, and so continued until." Then I would move again as a second amendment—

Mr. HALE. Let these amendments be taken down and printed.

Mr. MITCHELL. They are being taken down for the RECORD, I suppose.

Mr. PIERCE. In what line was the Senator's first amendment?

Mr. MITCHELL. The first amendment is, in line 3, section 4, page 5, to strike out the words "prior to" and insert in lieu thereof "on the 17th day of September, 1880, and so continued until."

The second amendment I suggest is to strike out the words "and every," in line 7 of section 6, on page 6, and to insert in lieu thereof "nor shall it apply to any."

The third amendment I would suggest is to insert, after the words "holder of," in line 10, on page 6, section 6, the words "and entitled to."

The next amendment I would suggest is to strike out the following words, in lines 16 and 17, on page 6, section 6: "shall be deemed to be lawfully entitled to be and remain in the United States," and to insert in lieu of those words the following: "but said certificate may be controverted and the facts therein stated disproved by the authorities of the United States."

That is all I wish to say at this time.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. VOORHEES. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After eight minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 40 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Saturday, April 5, 1890, at 11 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate the 3d day of April, 1890.

SURVEYOR-GENERAL OF NEVADA.

George F. Turritin, of Winnemucca, Nev., to be surveyor-general of Nevada, vice Charles W. Irish, to be removed.

RECEIVERS OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

John J. Lambert, of Pueblo, Colo., to be receiver of public moneys at Pueblo, Colo., vice Jonathan B. Kilbourn, whose term of office will expire April 15, 1890.

George C. Thaxter, of Carson City, Nev., to be receiver of public moneys at Carson City, Nev., vice Edmund James, whose term of office will expire April 10, 1890.

REGISTERS OF THE LAND OFFICE.

Henry C. Olney, of Gunnison, Colo., to be register of the land office at Gunnison, Colo., vice Frank P. Tanner, to be removed.

James I. Fleming, of Ottumwa, Kans., to be register of the land office at Topeka, Kans., vice John L. Price, whose term of office will expire April 13, 1890.

PENSION AGENTS.

Edward H. Harvey, of Paw Paw, Mich., to be pension agent at Detroit, Mich., vice Robert McKinstry, whose term of office will expire April 15, 1890.

John G. Mitchell, of Columbus, Ohio, to be pension agent at Columbus, Ohio, vice Gilbert H. Bargar, whose term of office will expire April 27, 1890.

INDIAN AGENTS.

Charles S. Kelsey, of Montello, Wis., to be agent for the Indians of the Green Bay agency in Wisconsin, vice Thomas Jennings, whose term of office will expire April 14, 1890.

James McLaughlin, of Fort Totten, N. Dak., to be agent for the Indians of the Standing Rock agency in North Dakota, whose term of office will expire April 19, 1890. (Reappointment.)

FIRST DEPUTY AUDITOR OF THE TREASURY.

Alexander F. McMillan, of Michigan, to be Deputy First Auditor of the Treasury, to succeed Orrin B. Hallam, whose resignation has been accepted to take effect on the 30th day of April, 1890.

POSTMASTER.

William W. Winterbotham, to be postmaster at Eau Claire, in the county of Eau Claire and State of Wisconsin, in the place of Hiram P. Graham, removed.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nomination confirmed by the Senate March 31, 1890.

POSTMASTER.

Patrick E. McMurray, to be postmaster at Jacksonville, in the county of Duval and State of Florida.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate April 3, 1890.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY.

Frank D. Allen, of Massachusetts, to be attorney of the United States for the district of Massachusetts.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

Second Regiment of Cavalry.

First Lieut. Edward J. McClernand, to be captain.

Second Lieut. Francis G. Irwin, jr., to be first lieutenant.

Fourth Regiment of Cavalry.

Maj. Anson Mills, of the Tenth Cavalry, to be lieutenant-colonel.

Tenth Regiment of Cavalry.

Capt. Stevens T. Norvell, to be major.

First Lieut. Levi P. Hunt, to be captain.

Second Lieut. William H. Smith, to be first lieutenant.

SURVEYOR OF CUSTOMS.

Frank N. Tillinghast, of New York, to be surveyor of customs for the port of Greenport, in the State of New York.

RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

Edmond W. Eakin, of Blunt, S. Dak., to be receiver of public moneys at Pierre, S. Dak.

COLLECTORS OF CUSTOMS.

George M. Gleason, of New York, to be collector of customs for the district of Oswegatchie, in the State of New York.

William Davis, of Mississippi, to be collector of customs for the district of Natchez, in the State of Mississippi.

Freeland H. Oaks, of Maine, to be collector of customs for the district of Saco, in the State of Maine.

POSTMASTERS.

Isaac T. Nichols, to be postmaster at Bridgeton, in the county of Cumberland and State of New Jersey.

Howard A. Clement, to be postmaster at Haddonfield, in the county of Camden and State of New Jersey.

Mrs. Emma C. Noble, to be postmaster at Raton, in the county of Colfax and Territory of New Mexico.

John P. McKnight, to be postmaster at Hiawatha, in the county of Brown and State of Kansas.

William J. Henry, to be postmaster at Lindsborg, in the county of McPherson and State of Kansas.

James F. Clough, to be postmaster at Sabetha, in the county of Nemaha and State of Kansas.

James A. Cochran, to be postmaster at Colorado City, in the county of El Paso and State of Colorado.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, April 3, 1890.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Journal of Tuesday, April 1, was read and approved.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

PROTEST AGAINST THE IMPOSITION OF DUTY ON HIDES.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer a memorial, and ask that the prayer be printed in the RECORD.

The memorial was read, as follows:

NEW ENGLAND SHOE AND LEATHER ASSOCIATION,
234 DEVONSHIRE STREET,
Boston, March 24, 1890.

The honorable the Ways and Means Committee of the National House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

SIRS: The undersigned, manufacturers of leather and shoes and dealers in leather and articles produced from leather, believe that any duty imposed upon raw hides and skins would be very detrimental to one of the largest business interests of New England and the Middle States, and that it would increase the cost to the consumer of every pair of shoes produced in this country.

It is also the opinion of all leading houses that the imposition of any duty would cause great embarrassment to the large export trade, now amounting to $10,000,000 or $12,000,000 annually, and tend to drive it to the Dominion of Canada, where labor and materials for tanning are much lower than they are in the United States.

For these and many other reasons which could be enumerated we respectfully and earnestly protest against the proposed duty.

[Applause on the Democratic side.]

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to having the memorial printed in the RECORD?

Mr. SPRINGER. Oh, no; let it be printed in the RECORD two or three times.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection, and the memorial will be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SUPPRESSION OF TRUSTS.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. Speaker, I present a memorial of members of the Farmers' Alliance of Winn Parish, Louisiana, signed by 952 farmers, indorsing the action of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union at the meeting held in the city of St. Louis on the 3d of December last, and asking, further, for the enactment of laws for the suppression of trusts. I ask unanimous consent to print the memorial, exclusive of the names, in the RECORD, and that the memorial be referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the request of the gentleman from Louisiana will be granted. The memorial will be referred to the Committee on Ways and Means and printed in the RECORD. The Chair hears no objection.

The memorial is as follows:

WINNFELD, La., January 10, 1890.

To the honorable the Senators and Representatives in the United States Congress:

We, your petitioners, with respect, represent that at a regular meeting of the Winn Parish Farmers' Union, of the State of Louisiana, held this day, resolutions were passed indorsing heartily and without reserve the action of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union at the meeting held in the city of St. Louis, Mo., on the 3d day of December last, relative to the demands to be made on the Congress of the United States at the present session.

Would further represent that in the opinion of this Parish Union the time has come when the farmers of the United States must appeal to their trusted Representatives in Congress for relief against the robbery and oppression of trusts and monopolies.

Therefore we most earnestly pray that you exert all possible means to procure the passage of such measures as may be introduced at the request of the joint committee of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union and the Knights of Labor.

Hon. GEO. A. KELLY,
Winnfield, La., Chairman,
S. R. NEWSOM,
Flat Creek, La.,
JAS. M. FLETCHER,
Montgomery, La.,
Committee on Memorial.
R. L. TANNEHILL,
President, Winnfield, La.
H. L. BRIAN,
Secretary, Millsborough, La.

[SEAL.]

RELIEF FROM TRUSTS, ETC.—PENSIONS.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri, obtained unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the following resolution adopted by the Farmers and Laborers' Union of Jasper County, Missouri, praying for certain legislation; which was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means:

[Resolutions of Liberty Union, No. 464.]

Whereas we know beyond doubt that unless the masses of our people are speedily relieved through the enactment of laws which will prevent the favored few from robbing the many, as they have been doing for years, we will soon be a nation of millionaires and paupers, thus creating conditions calculated not only to provoke widespread disorder, but to endanger the very existence of our governmental institutions; and although we do not believe that Congress has robbed the people outright, we do believe that the laws enacted by Congress during the last thirty years have been in the interest of capital and against labor, in the interest of the favored few and against the many:

We therefore beseech Hon. GEORGE G. VEST and Hon. F. M. COCKRELL, our Senators, and Hon. W. J. STONE, as Representative, as well as other Senators and Representatives who love their country, to devise such means and enact such laws as will relieve the suffering masses of our nation and save them from ruin, and at the same time to preserve this Government from danger and destruction. The people of the United States are willing for the Shylocks to keep the wealth which they have robbed the people of, inasmuch as the process of robbing was done under the forms of law; but we ask for laws to stop the process of robbing before the industrial classes are overwhelmed with utter exhaustion.

Through class legislation we have been forced into our present deplorable condition; through legislation we wish to be relieved. We ask for laws that will be just alike to the creditor who loans money and the debtor who borrows it; to the manufacturer who furnishes capital and to the operative who does the work; and especially to the consumer who pays for all. We ask for laws to protect agriculture, the foundation of all prosperity, from the plundering manipulation of trusts and combines—trusts which wage wars alike upon the producer and consumer. And

Whereas we still believe that if Congress knew what legislation we need and ask for we would not ask in vain, as the true policy of all legislation should be to protect the weak against the strong, the just against the unjust: Therefore, Be it resolved, first, That we ask Congress to enact laws, with heavy penalties, prohibiting trusts and combines of all kinds which tend to reduce prices received by the producer or to raise prices paid by the consumer.

2. That we ask Congress to pay particular attention to Armour and his meat trust, the most damnable robbers' den on this continent, by which the producers as well as the consumers of the country are robbed of millions every year. We would like to see it decided in the near future whether the "big four" combination is all-powerful or whether our Government has yet the will, the energy, and the power to check them in their unholy career.

3. We ask for unlimited coinage of silver, and that paper money be issued by the Government direct in sufficient amounts for all commercial and industrial purposes, and which shall be a legal tender for all debts of the nation. We also ask for a sufficient amount of fractional paper currency.

4. We ask that the laws regulating tariff on imports be revised so that a tariff for revenue only shall be collected, and that it shall be placed as much as possible on articles of luxury. We, the members of the Farmers and Laborers' Union of Jasper County, Missouri, do not ask for any other protection for our products than to be protected from the greed of high protectionists themselves.

5. We ask that all lines of public communication and transportation shall be owned and controlled by the people, and that equitable rates be everywhere established on the basis of the United States postal system.

6. We ask that all lands donated to railroads which have not been earned by a literal compliance with the terms of the grants be reclaimed by the Government, and that not another acre of public land be donated or sold to corporations or syndicates, and that all lands heretofore purchased or obtained from the Government by misrepresentation or any unlawful means shall be reclaimed by the Government and held for actual settlers.

7. We ask that our patent laws be so amended as to prevent the renewal of patents on any invention after the expiration of the legal term for which the patent has been granted.

8. We ask that a law be enacted that the next census of the United States shall show what proportion of the citizens of this country occupy their own homes and farms; what proportion of the homes and farms are under mortgage, and what percentage is so mortgaged. We need official evidence on these points to prove that those who are trying to make us believe we are living in an era of unprecedented prosperity are either not informed or are trying to mislead us; for we know beyond a doubt that this great nation is fast coming to a point when the middle classes will be obliterated and we will have but two classes of citizens, landlords and tenants, millionaires and paupers.

9. That we will not vote for any man for public office unless we know him to be qualified and trustworthy, and who will not indorse the declarations of principles of our order, of which the above resolutions are a part.

10. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Hon. GEORGE G. VEST and Hon. F. M. COCKRELL, Senators, and Hon. W. J. STONE, Representative from our Congressional district, and a copy to the Journal of Agriculture, the official organ of the Farmers and Laborers' Union of Missouri, for publication.

D. W. ALGEO, President.
C. L. HAYZLETT, Secretary.

Also, the following resolution adopted by the Zincite Post, 356, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Missouri, in regard to pensions; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions:

Resolved, That the members of Zincite Post, No. 356, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Missouri, in post meeting assembled January 17, 1890, do approve, by a unanimous vote, of the disability, service, and arrears of pension bills as presented to Congress by General Hovey, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to General Hovey and to our Representative, Hon. W. J. STONE, with an urgent request for their immediate passage.

W. J. HOLDEN, Commander.
D. G. VANDAMANT, Adjutant.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SPRINGER. Unless some gentleman desires to offer another remonstrance against the imposition of a tax on hides, I will demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. DINGLEY] desires to ask unanimous consent for the consideration of a matter.

FUR-SEALS OF ALASKA.

Mr. DINGLEY. I ask to take from the Calendar a bill which is unanimously reported from the Committee on Ways and Means, and for which there is urgency for its immediate passage.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3025) to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to gather full and authentic information as to the present condition and preservation of the fur-seal interests of the Government in the region of Alaska, as compared with its condition in 1870; also, full information as to the impending extinction of the sea-otter industry, and kindred lines of inquiry, etc.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint some person well qualified by experience and education a special agent for the purpose of visiting the various trading stations and native settlements on the seal islands, the Aleutian Archipelago, the peninsula of Alaska, and adjacent islands, for the purpose of collecting and reporting to him all possible authentic information upon the present condition of the seal fisheries of Alaska, the effect and extent of whatever injury has been inflicted upon them by pelagic sealing, the present status of the sea-otter industry, together with like information respecting the fur-bearing animals of Alaska generally; the statistics of this fur trade, and the condition of the people or natives of Alaska who are dependent upon the successful prosecution and perpetuation of the seal and sea-otter industries; such agent to receive as compensation the sum of $10 per day while actually thus employed, and to remain thus employed only as long as the Secretary of the Treasury deems it best for the full development of this inquiry, with all actual and necessary traveling expenses incurred therein, to be paid out of any moneys in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. What committee unanimously reported it?

Mr. DINGLEY. The Committee on Ways and Means. It is reported by request of the Treasury Department also. I may say I think there is no objection to it, but on the contrary there is great necessity for immediate action. The necessity arises from this state of facts:

Under the authority of an act similar to this, passed in 1870, the Secretary of the Treasury sent Prof. Henry W. Elliott, of the Smithsonian Institution, to the Alaskan seal islands to make an investigation of the extent of the herds of fur seal and measures necessary to prevent their extinction. Professor Elliott made a very able report on the subject, which was subsequently revised by him and published as a census monograph.

On the basis of this report the Secretary of the Treasury has framed regulations for the protection of the herds of seal on these islands, and has determined the number to be killed each year. During the past three years poachers have slaughtered so large a number of female seals in the waters of Behring Sea adjacent to the seal industry as to seriously reduce the herds. As under the contract recently entered into by the Government with the sealing company which made the highest bid, about $10 per skin is to be paid into the Treasury, and the Secretary of the Treasury is to determine the number of seals to be killed each year, it is of the utmost importance that the Treasury Department should have authority to send an agent to these islands, thoroughly informed on the subject, to resurvey the herds of seals, with a view of having information which will enable him to determine such number under the new contract.

It is important also that the Treasury Department should have reliable information as to the condition of the sea-otter industry, on which the Aleuts largely depend for existence, and also as to the condition of the natives themselves.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DINGLEY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

CLAIMS OF MISSOURI MILITIA.

Mr. HEARD. I ask unanimous consent to take up the bill (S. 430) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to cause to be examined certain vouchers filed or to be filed by the State of Missouri, or her agent or agents, for sums claimed to be due from the Government of the United States on account of payments made by said State since April 22, 1882, to the officers and enlisted men of her militia forces for military services rendered to the United States in the suppression of the rebellion, as evidenced by the proper pay-rolls heretofore filed with, examined, and accepted by the Government of the United States, and to report to Congress.

Mr. SPRINGER. Pending that, I hope the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. DORSEY] will be recognized to ask unanimous consent to dispense with the morning hour for this day.

Mr. DORSEY. As there has been one recognition for unanimous consent on this side, I will withhold that motion until the bill called up by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HEARD] shall be disposed of.

Mr. PAYSON. What is the present request?

The SPEAKER. The present request is for unanimous consent for the consideration of a bill.

The bill was read, as follows:

A bill (S. 430) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to cause to be examined certain vouchers filed or to be filed by the State of Missouri, or her agent or agents, for sums claimed to be due from the Government of the United States on account of payments made by said State since April 22, 1882, to the officers and enlisted men of her militia forces for military services rendered to the United States in the suppression of the rebellion, as evidenced by the proper pay-rolls heretofore filed with, examined, and accepted by the Government of the United States, and to report to Congress.

Whereas it is claimed that there is due from the Government of the United States to the State of Missouri certain sums on account of payments made by said State since April 22, 1882, to the officers and enlisted men of her militia forces, for military services rendered to the United States in the suppression of the rebellion, as evidenced by the proper pay-rolls of said military organization, bearing the names of such officers and enlisted men, and which said pay-rolls are now on file in the office of the Third Auditor of the Treasury, and have heretofore been examined, accepted, and paid upon by the Government of the United States: Therefore,

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department to examine the vouchers now on file, or which may hereafter be filed by the State of Missouri, or her agent or agents, for moneys expended by the said State of Missouri since April 22, 1882, for military services rendered to the United States in the suppression of the rebellion by the officers and enlisted men of the militia forces of the said State of Missouri, whose names are borne on the proper pay-rolls of their respective military organizations, and which said rolls are now on file in the office of the Third Auditor of the Treasury, and have heretofore been examined, accepted, and paid upon by the Government of the United States, and to report to Congress, at the earliest practicable day, the result of such examination, and the amount, if anything, which appears to be due to said State, according to the laws of the United States, on account of the expenditures so made.

Mr. HEARD. The Clerk has read the Senate instead of the House bill. The House bill is offered as a substitute for the Senate bill, and limits the appropriation for auditing these accounts to nine hundred and odd dollars.

The SPEAKER. The Senate bill has to be read first before the House bill can be offered as a substitute.

Mr. HEARD. I understand that, but wished to call attention to the limitation in the House bill which distinguishes it from the bill read.

The Clerk read the substitute, as follows:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to cause the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department to examine the vouchers now on file or which may hereafter be filed by the State of Missouri, or her agent or agents, for moneys expended by the said State of Missouri since April 22, 1882 (not to exceed the sum of $1,000 in the aggregate), for military services rendered to the United States in the suppression of the rebellion by the officers and enlisted men of the militia forces of the State of Missouri, whose names are borne on the proper pay-rolls of their respective military organizations, and which said rolls are now on file in the office of the Third Auditor of the Treasury and have heretofore been examined, accepted, and paid upon by the Government of the United States, and to report to Congress, at the earliest practicable day, the result of such examination and the amount, if anything, which appears to be due to said State on account of the expenditures so made.

Mr. HEARD. I want just one minute in which to explain this bill. It provides for the auditing of the remainder of what the State claims to be due on account of these demands, a part of which was formerly paid, and there being now nine hundred and ninety-odd dollars due. This bill provides simply for the auditing of the accounts and a report to Congress; and, if there is any reason why they should not be paid, Congress will have the opportunity for discovering it and of refusing to pay the claim. This bill has passed the Senate three times, but failed to pass the House.

Mr. KILGORE. I desire to make an inquiry concerning it. If I understand correctly, this is a proposition to have the Government of the United States ascertain the amount paid by the State of Missouri to its militia for service during the war.

Mr. HEARD. Under certain conditions the State organized, equipped, and maintained a certain militia force, and for the expense of this the State was to be reimbursed by the Government of the United States. A portion of it was paid, and this is for the remainder—nine hundred and ninety-odd dollars. This bill authorizes the accounting officer of the Government to audit these claims and see if they are correct, and, if so, to report the amount due to Congress for its action.

Mr. KILGORE. It goes no further than that?

Mr. HEARD. Oh, no; it limits the amount to be audited to $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HEARD moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. DORSEY. I ask unanimous consent that the morning hour be dispensed with.

Mr. PAYSON and Mr. SIMONDS objected.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made. The morning hour begins at twenty minutes of 12 o'clock, and the call rests with the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. Speaker, I thought the Committee on Commerce had the floor.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] has got that idea too firmly fixed in his mind. [Laughter.] The call is with the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Rivers and Harbors be passed without prejudice.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

COASTWISE SAILING VESSELS.

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries was called.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries I call up the bill (H. R. 1003) exempting American coastwise sailing vessels piloted by their licensed masters, or by a United States pilot, from the obligation to pay State pilots for services not rendered. The bill is on the House Calendar.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the local inspectors mentioned in section 4442 of the Revised Statutes may, upon application, examine the master or mate of any sailing vessel of the United States employed in the coastwise trade, and if satisfied from personal examination of the applicant and proof which he offers that he possesses the requisite knowledge, experience, and skill, they shall grant such master or mate a license for the term of two years to pilot such vessel, or any other sailing vessel belonging to the same owners, in such ports, harbors, or waters within the limits of such inspection district as may be prescribed in his license, with the same liability to suspension or revocation as licenses given to pilots of any steam-vessel under the laws of the United States; and no such sailing vessel shall be licensed or shall be held or obliged to take any other pilot in any such port, or be compelled to pay any charges or fees to any pilot for pilotage services offered and declined under the pilotage laws or regulations of any State.

Sec. 2. That no sailing vessel of the United States employed in the coastwise trade taking and having the aid or towage of a steam-vessel into or out of any port of the United States, when such steam-vessel is in command of a licensed pilot for such port under the laws of the United States, shall be obliged to take any other pilot in any such port, or, declining the offer or tender of pilotage services in such port of any pilot appointed under the laws or regulations of any State, be compelled to pay any fee or charges to such State pilot.

Sec. 3. That so much of the last clause of section 4441 of the Revised Statutes as is inconsistent with this act is hereby repealed.

Sec. 4. That this act shall take effect six months after its passage.

The committee recommended an amendment, inserting, after the word

"owners," in the eleventh line of section 1, the words "employed in the coastwise trade."

The SPEAKER. The question is upon agreeing to the amendment. Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, is it in order to raise the question of consideration at this time?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Then I raise the question of consideration.

The question was taken; and there were—ayes 70, noes 86.

Mr. HOPKINS. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 93, nays 107, not voting 128; as follows:

YEAS—93.

Adams,	Dalzell,	Mason,	Simonds,
Allen, Mich.	De Haven,	McComas,	Smith, Ill.
Andrew,	Dingley,	McCord,	Smith, W. Va.
Banks,	Dorsey,	McCormick,	Springer,
Bartine,	Farquhar,	McKinley,	Struble,
Hayne,	Featherston,	Milliken,	Sweeney,
Belknap,	Flick,	Moffitt,	Taylor, Ill.
Bingham,	Gear,	Moore, N. H.	Taylor, E. B.
Bliss,	Greenhalge,	Morey,	Thomas,
Boothman,	Groat,	Morrill,	Townsend, Colo.
Brewer,	Hall,	Morse,	Townsend, Pa.
Buchanan, N. J.	Hansbrough,	Niedringhaus,	Vandever,
Burton,	Hitt,	Nute,	Van Schaick,
Candler, Mass.	Hopkins,	O'Donnell,	Walker, Mass.
Cannon,	Ketcham,	Osborne,	Wallace, N. Y.
Carter,	Kinsey,	Owen, Ind.	Wheeler, Mich.
Clark, Wis.	Lacey,	Payne,	Whigham,
Cogswell,	Laidlaw,	Peters,	Willcox,
Comstock,	Lansing,	Pickler,	Williams, Ohio
Conger,	Laws,	Randall, Mass.	Wise,
Connell,	Lee,	Ray,	Wright.
Craig,	Lehlbach,	Reed, Iowa
Culbertson, Pa.	Lind,	Rowell,
Cutcheon,	Lodge,	Scully,

NAYS—107.

Abbott,	Crisp,	Lester, Ga.	Robertson,
Anderson, Kans.	Cummings,	Lester, Va.	Rogers,
Anderson, Miss.	Davidson,	Lewis,	Rowland,
Baker,	Dibble,	Magner,	Sayers,
Barnes,	Dockery,	Mansur,	Scranton,
Barwig,	Elliott,	Martin, Ind.	Seney,
Biggs,	Enloe,	Martin, Tex.	Shively,
Blanchard,	Ewart,	McClammy,	Skinner,
Bland,	Finley,	McClellan,	Stewart, Ga.
Boatner,	Fithian,	McCreary,	Stewart, Tex.
Bowden,	Flower,	McMillin,	Stewart, Va.
Breckinridge, Ky.	Forney,	McRae,	Stockbridge,
Brickner,	Fowler,	Montgomery,	Stockdale,
Brookshire,	Geisshainer,	Morgan,	Stone, Ky.
Brown, J. B.	Gibson,	Morrow,	Stone, Mo.
Brunner,	Goodnight,	Mudd,	Tillman,
Buchanan, Va.	Grimes,	Mutcher,	Tucker,
Bunn,	Hare,	Oates,	Turner, Ga.
Bynum,	Hatch,	Owens, Ohio	Turpin,
Campbell,	Haugen,	Parrett,	Walker, Mo.
Caruth,	Haynes,	Paynter,	Washington,
Cheadle,	Herbert,	Pennington,	Wheeler, Ala.
Chipman,	Hooker,	Pierce,	Whiting,
Clancy,	Kerr, Pa.	Price,	Wike,
Clarke, Ala.	Lane,	Raines,	Wilkinson,
Coleman,	Lawham,	Reilly,	Wilson, Mo.
Cowles,	Lawler,	Reyburn,

NOT VOTING—128.

Alderson,	Cothran,	Kelley,	Rusk,
Allen, Miss.	Covert,	Kennedy,	Russell,
Arnold,	Crain,	Kerr, Iowa	Sanford,
Atkinson, Pa.	Culbertson, Tex.	Kilgore,	Sawyer,
Atkinson, W. Va.	Dargan,	La Follette,	Sherman,
Bankhead,	Darlington,	Maish,	Smyser,
Beckwith,	Dolliver,	McAdoo,	Snider,
Belden,	Dunnell,	McCarthy,	Spinola,
Bergen,	Dunphy,	McKenna,	Spooner,
Blount,	Edmunds,	Miles,	Stahnecker,
Boutelle,	Ellis,	Mills,	Stephenson,
Breckinridge, Ark.	Evans,	Moore, Tex.	Stivers,
Brosius,	Fitch,	Norton,	Stump,
Brower,	Flood,	O'Ferrall,	Tarsney,
Browne, T. M.	Forman,	O'Neill, Ind.	Taylor, J. D.
Browne, Va.	Frank,	O'Neill, Mass.	Taylor, Tenn.
Buckalew,	Funston,	O'Neill, Pa.	Thompson,
Bullock,	Gest,	Outhwaite,	Tracey,
Burrows,	Gifford,	Payson,	Turner, Kans.
Butterworth,	Grosvener,	Peel,	Turner, N. Y.
Caldwell,	Harmer,	Perkins,	Venable,
Candler, Ga.	Hayes,	Perry,	Wade,
Carlisle,	Heard,	Phelan,	Wallace, Mass.
Carlton,	Hemphill,	Post,	Watson,
Caswell,	Henderson, Ill.	Pugaley,	Whitthorne,
Catchings,	Henderson, Iowa	Quackenbush,	Wiley,
Cheatham,	Henderson, N. C.	Quinn,	Williams, Ill.
Clements,	Hermann,	Randall, Pa.	Wilson, Ky.
Clunie,	Hill,	Richardson,	Wilson, Wash.
Cobb,	Holman,	Rife,	Wilson, W. Va.
Cooper, Ind.	Houk,	Rockwell,	Yardley,
Cooper, Ohio			Yoder.

So the House refused to consider the bill.

The following-named members were announced as paired until further notice:

Mr. THOMAS M. BROWNE, with Mr. RANDALL, of Pennsylvania.

Mr. WADE with Mr. NORTON.

Mr. EVANS with Mr. PERRY.

Mr. ATKINSON, of Pennsylvania, with Mr. FORMAN.

Mr. KENNEDY with Mr. YODER.

Mr. ATKINSON, of West Virginia, with Mr. ALDERSON.

Mr. SHERMAN with Mr. TRACEY.

Mr. DE LANO with Mr. COTHRAN.

Mr. GROSVENOR with Mr. BLANCHARD.

Mr. NIEDRINGHAUS with Mr. CATOWINGS.

Mr. STIVERS with Mr. RICHARDSON.

Mr. FINLEY with Mr. CANDLER, of Georgia.

Mr. THOMPSON with Mr. CULBERSON, of Texas.

Mr. BURROWS with Mr. COBB.

Mr. BELDEN with Mr. FITCH.

Mr. DUNNELL with Mr. HAYES.

The following members were announced as paired on this vote:

Mr. WALLACE, of Massachusetts, with Mr. KILGORE.

Mr. GROSVENOR with Mr. ELLIS.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa, with Mr. HOLMAN.

Mr. KNAPP with Mr. DARGAN.

Mr. QUACKENBUSH with Mr. CARLTON.

Mr. SAWYER with Mr. CRAIN.

Mr. SPOONER with Mr. CARLISLE.

Mr. MILES with Mr. BULLOCK.

Mr. RUSSELL with Mr. RUSK.

Mr. YARDLEY with Mr. BLOUNT.

Mr. BROSIUS with Mr. CLEMENTS.

Mr. RIFE with Mr. BANKHEAD.

Mr. POST with Mr. CLUNIE.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania, with Mr. McADOO.

Mr. BECKWITH with Mr. ENLOE.

The following-named members were announced as paired on all political questions for this day:

Mr. BROWNE, of Virginia, with Mr. VENABLE.

Mr. PERKINS with Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas.

Mr. SPINOLA and Mr. COVERT were announced as paired on this bill.

Mr. HOUK and Mr. McMILLIN were announced as paired on all political questions for April 1 and 2.

Mr. DARLINGTON and Mr. MOORE, of Texas, were announced as paired on all political questions from the 28th of March until Monday week.

Mr. TAYLOR, of Tennessee, and Mr. O'NEALL, of Indiana, were announced as paired on all political questions from March 24, 1890, to April 13, 1890, both days inclusive.

Mr. FLOOD and Mr. HENDERSON, of Illinois, were announced as paired on all political questions from March 21, 1890, until further notice.

Mr. FINLEY. Mr. Speaker, I am paired with the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CANDLER] on political questions; but, not regarding this as a political question, I have voted.

On motion of Mr. CUMMINGS, the recapitulation of the names of members voting was dispensed with.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The call is with the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Mr. FARQUHAR. The committee have no business on the Calendar, and if there is any time remaining I ask that it be reserved.

The SPEAKER. If there are no more bills there is no more time. [Laughter.]

INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION.

The Committee on Foreign Affairs was called.

Mr. HITT. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the committee, I call up Miscellaneous Document No. 113, which is the Senate concurrent resolution as to differences between nations.

The Clerk read as follows:

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, February 14, 1890.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring). That the President be, and is hereby, requested to invite, from time to time, as fit occasions may arise, negotiations with any Government with which the United States has or may have diplomatic relations, to the end that any differences or disputes arising between the two Governments which can not be adjusted by diplomatic agency may be referred to arbitration, and be peaceably adjusted by such means.

Mr. HITT. This resolution of the Senate has received the unanimous assent of the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

The question being taken, the resolution was concurred in.

SEIZURE OF SCHOONER REBECCA AT TAMPICO.

Mr. HITT. By direction of the Committee on Foreign Affairs I call up the resolution which I send to the desk, being Miscellaneous Document No. 165.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the President be requested, if it is not inconsistent with the public interests, to send to the House of Representatives copies of all correspondence between the United States and Mexico relating to the seizure, at port of Tampico, of the schooner Rebecca, in February, 1884, said schooner having left the port of Margan in January, 1884.

The resolution was adopted.

FOREIGN GIFTS AND DECORATIONS FOR UNITED STATES OFFICERS.

Mr. HITT. On behalf of the Committee on Foreign Affairs I call up the joint resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (H. Res. 93) authorizing the heirs of Rear-Admiral Charles H. Baldwin to receive a snuff-box from the Czar of Russia.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That the heirs of the late Rear-Admiral Charles H. Baldwin, United States Navy, be, and hereby are, authorized to receive the snuff-box set in diamonds presented to the rear-admiral by the Czar of Russia while he was special naval representative of the Government at the coronation of the Emperor in 1883.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HITT. I am directed by the committee to call up the joint resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (H. Res. 120) authorizing Henry Vignaud to accept from the President of the French Republic a diploma of Commander of the Legion of Honor.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That Henry Vignaud is hereby authorized to accept from the President of the French Republic a diploma of Commander of the Legion of Honor.

Mr. HITT. The circumstances and the reasons on which this joint resolution is based appear fully in the report, which, without detaining the House, I will publish in connection with my remarks:

Mr. ROCKWELL, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, submitted the following report (to accompany H. Res. 120):

The Committee on Foreign Affairs, to whom was referred the memorial, together with letter of Secretary of State, to permit Henry Vignaud to receive the decoration of Commander of the Legion of Honor, respectfully report:

That a bill conferring on Henry Vignaud the decoration of the Legion of Honor was carefully considered by the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the Forty-eighth Congress, and portions of the report then made are found, after further careful consideration, to present the facts and conclusions so justly that your committee adopt such portions of said report as their own.

Henry Vignaud is a citizen of the United States who has long been known to the reading world, especially in Europe, for his writings on questions of international law, philosophy, and political science. The series of articles in the Mémorial diplomatique, in which, through that able and dignified periodical, he vindicated the American position in the celebrated controversies growing out of the Alabama claims, drew the attention of thinkers on both sides of the Atlantic, and contributed powerfully to form a correct public opinion in Europe and insure the success of American diplomacy.

"The French Government, in pursuance of its liberal policy of recognizing achievements in science, art, invention—in all that contributes to the welfare of the human race, among not only Frenchmen, but foreigners, inscribed his name in the Legion of Honor, and the decoration of the order was bestowed upon him.

"Mr. Vignaud's wide knowledge and discreet counsel had been constantly given with patriotic alacrity to our legation during the troublesome days of 1870 and 1871, and often through subsequent years. He was of invaluable assistance at the time of the settlement of the Alabama-claims dispute. In 1878 he was induced by Minister Washburne to accept the post of second secretary.

"The Legion of Honor is an order of merit, originally instituted by the French Republic, after abolishing orders of nobility, and founded upon republican principles, recognizing the absolute equality of man, without regard to birth, fortune, race, or occupation."

Last year, in further recognition of Mr. Vignaud's character as a thinker and writer, especially on questions of public law and international intercourse, and following the extraordinary solemnities by which the French Republic celebrated the national anniversaries of both countries, the 4th of July for America and the 14th of July for France, the French Government conferred upon him the diploma of commander of the Legion of Honor.

Your committee see no reason why our Government should refuse permission to him to accept an expression intended to convey to the world evidence of the esteem in which an American citizen is held by our sister Republic.

Your committee therefore report and recommend the adoption of the accompanying bill.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, February 5, 1890.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit to you herewith, for the information and consideration of your committee, a copy of a dispatch to this Department from our minister at Paris concerning a decoration of the Legion of Honor which has been tendered to Mr. Henry Vignaud, secretary of our legation at Paris, for services rendered by him at the recent international exhibition.

I respectfully recommend that permission be granted to Mr. Vignaud to accept the above-named decoration, subject to the provisions of the second section of the act of Congress approved January 31, 1881.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM F. WHARTON, Acting Secretary.

Hon. ROBERT R. HITT.

Chairman Committee on Foreign Affairs, House of Representatives.

No. 33.]

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES, Paris, July 29, 1889.

SIR: I have the honor to send herewith a decoration of commander of the Legion of Honor, which has been presented to Mr. Vignaud by the French Government, and which he desires me to send to the Department, accompanied by his request that Congress be asked to grant him permission to accept it. This decoration was in no way solicited by Mr. Vignaud. It followed the unusual celebrations this year of anniversaries of the two countries, the 4th and the 14th of July, both of which were observed by the French Government, and it was tendered by the President through Mr. Spuller as a compliment to the United States, in whose diplomatic service Mr. Vignaud has been for many years, and as a mark of special regard for him.

Mr. Vignaud has been found a most valuable public servant, and I respectfully commend his request to your favorable consideration.

A copy and a translation of the note from the foreign office transmitting the same are herewith inclosed.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WHITELEW REID.

Hon. JAMES G. BLANE, Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

Mr. Spuller to Mr. Reid.

PARIS, July 13, 1889.

Mr. MINISTER: It is very agreeable to me to make known to you that the President of the Republic, desiring to give a special mark of its high esteem for Mr. Vignaud, first secretary of your legation, who resides since a long time in Paris, has, on my proposition, promoted him to the grade of commander of the Legion of Honor. I am happy to have been able to advocate the titles Mr. Vignaud has acquired to this high distinction, and I shall take care to transmit to you before long the insignia of the order, so that you may have the pleasure of handing them to him yourself.

Please accept, etc.,

Mr. WHITELEW REID,
Minister of the United States, Paris.

E. SPULLER.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Paris, July 29, 1889.

SIR: The French Government having been pleased to offer me the decoration of commander of the Legion of Honor, I respectfully request that the necessary application be made to Congress to enable me to accept it.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

HENRY VIGNAUD.

Hon. JAMES G. BLANE, Secretary of State.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HITT. I call up House joint resolution No. 121.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (H. Res. 121) authorizing Lieut. Aaron Ward, United States Navy, and Capt. H. C. Cochran, United States Marine Corps, to accept from the President of the French Republic diplomas of the Legion of Honor.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That Lieut. Aaron Ward, United States Navy, and Capt. H. C. Cochran, United States Marine Corps, are hereby authorized to accept from the President of the French Republic diplomas of the Legion of Honor.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HITT. I am also directed by the committee to call up House joint resolution No. 68.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (H. Res. 68) authorizing Capt. George S. Anderson, Sixth Cavalry, to accept from the President of the French Republic a diploma conferring the decoration of chevalier of the National Order of the Legion of Honor.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That Capt. George S. Anderson, Sixth Cavalry, is hereby authorized to accept from the President of the French Republic a diploma conferring upon him the decoration of chevalier of the National Order of the Legion of Honor.

Mr. CHIPMAN. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs I have submitted the views of a minority upon this joint resolution. I have dissented, and do dissent, from all these resolutions, my views upon the subject being embodied in the minority report in this particular case. I do not care to take up the time of the House in discussing the question; but I ask that my views as expressed in the minority report be published in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the views of the minority of the committee will be published in the RECORD.

Mr. HITT. I ask that the report of the committee be also published.

The SPEAKER. In the absence of objection, the report of the committee and the views of the minority will be printed in the RECORD.

There was no objection.

The documents referred to are as follows:

Mr. ROCKWELL, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, submitted the following report (to accompany H. Res. 68):

The Committee on Foreign Affairs, to whom was referred joint resolution (H. Res. 68) authorizing Capt. George S. Anderson, Sixth Cavalry, to accept from the President of the French Republic a diploma conferring the decoration of chevalier of the National Order of the Legion of Honor, submit the following report:

Last year the French Government invited our Government to send an officer of our Army to France to witness certain maneuvers on a grand scale of the French army. The orders designating Captain Anderson for that service are hereto annexed and made a part of this report. Similar invitations have been extended annually by France to this Government as to those in Europe, and it has been the custom of the great European powers to always send distinguished officers. Twenty-three officers, representing twenty-one foreign Governments, attended last year and followed the maneuvers for ten days and were present at the grand review of the corps at Rouen on September 14. All the foreign officers present received and accepted similar diplomas.

Our system requires an act of Congress to allow the acceptance of such diplomas, and hence this resolution. A similar resolution was reported from this committee and passed the House without objection (being S. R. 59) in the last Congress, authorizing General Baird to accept a diploma. This diploma was given by the French Republic to the officers present as an expression of friendly feeling toward the Governments they represent and as a mark of respect for the position and ability of the officers themselves.

Your committee see no reason why this expression of friendship for the United States and its representative by the sister Republic of France should be refused by this Republic alone among all those Governments to whose representatives similar diplomas were accorded, and therefore recommend that the resolution granting permission to Captain Anderson to accept the diploma be adopted.

[Special Orders, No. 106.]

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., August 24, 1888.

[Extract.]

By direction of the Acting Secretary of War, Capt. George S. Anderson, Sixth Cavalry, is designated, under an invitation extended by the Government of France, to witness the maneuvers of the Third Corps of the French army, to take place this year. He will proceed to Paris, France, and report to the minister of the United States for such further instructions or information as he may require. Such journeys as he may be required to make under this order, from his station to the place where the maneuvers shall take place and return, via Paris, are necessary for the public service.

By command of Major-General Schofield.

Official: R. C. DRUM, Adjutant-General.

O. D. GREENE, Assistant Adjutant-General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE.
Washington, D. C., August 24, 1888.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith an order designating you, under an invitation extended by the Government of France, to witness the maneuvers of the French army (Third Corps) to take place this year. The object in designating an officer for this duty is not only to recognize an international compliment, but also to obtain information that will be useful to our Army. The Secretary of War desires you to give particular attention to such matters as are not usually given in text-books, and that, as soon as practicable after your return, you prepare and transmit to this office a report of your observations, embodying whatever may, in your judgment, be of value or interest to the military service of the United States.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. C. KELTON, Acting Adjutant-General.

Capt. GEO. S. ANDERSON,
Sixth Cavalry, Fort Myer, Virginia.

VIEWS OF THE MINORITY.

Mr. CHIPMAN, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, submitted the following minority report:

The acceptance and display by a citizen, and especially by an officer of the United States, of a foreign decoration is a reprehensible act. Our Government is forbidden to confer a title of nobility and its officers to accept any title without consent of Congress. No doubt that body has power to authorize the gentleman named in the resolution to be made a chevalier and to wear the decoration emblematic of chivalry. The question is one of propriety, of true republicanism, of thorough Americanism.

Orders and decorations are mere baubles and are nothing in this country but an evil example, which tends to foster a taste for the vulgarities of royalty. It is true that the decoration in this case is offered by a Republic; but the claim that there is a courtesy which compels our acquiescence for that or for any other reason growing out of international comity is ill-founded. Our moral sense must not be surrendered to complacency. While it is not our province to decide the propriety of the existence of the national order in a popular government, we must not forget that it is the offspring of the first Empire. Whether the retention of it is wise, or even useful in any high sense, is a question for the French people alone. It certainly would be neither wise nor useful here.

Every decoration is a tribute to the latent savagery of human nature, as barbarous in garters and crosses as in scalp-locks and bears' claws. A grown man jeweled and gilded with oriental magnificence is hardly a spectacle of dignity; certainly not of republican simplicity. We have forbidden the court dress to our foreign representatives. We have no distinctive costume for the great officers of the Government, but we do have, unfortunately, a prurient taste in certain classes of our people who imitate foreign manners, and a decorated man is only a provocative to unrepentant appetites.

No doubt the Legion of Honor is a respectable order, its insignia are comparatively modest, and our great respect for the French Republic teaches us high consideration for any institution she cherishes; but even a moderate patriotism demands that the fountain of honor to every American shall be his own country. There is, therefore, no rudeness in deciding that any foreign decoration will be useful neither to the nation nor to its recipient, for we only cling to our own American fashion. The resolution ought not to pass.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, has this matter been discussed?

The SPEAKER. That is not for the Chair to say. The gentleman has been present and has heard what has transpired.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HITT. I will not occupy further the time of the House.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Senate have heard with deep sensibility the announcement of the death of Hon. David Wilber, late a Representative from the State of New York.

Resolved, That the Senate concur in the resolutions of the House of Representatives, providing for the appointment of a special joint committee to take order for attending the funeral of the deceased at his residence in the State of New York, and that the members of the committee on the part of the Senate be appointed by the Vice-President.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

FLAGS OF COLORADO REGIMENTS.

The Committee on Military Affairs was called.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I call up Housebill No. 4553, and yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. LANSING], who is in charge of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 4553) to authorize the Secretary of War to deliver to the State of Colorado the flags carried by Colorado regiments.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to turn over and deliver to the State of Colorado the flags now in his custody that were carried by the regiments and other military organizations raised and enlisted into the United States service from the then Territory of Colorado during the war of the rebellion.

Mr. LANSING. I understand that by the uniform course of our legislation these Army flags have been turned over to the State authorities. Colorado having been a Territory during the war is now a State; and this bill simply proposes that the same course be pursued with her flags that has been adopted in regard to the flags of other States.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CONVICTIONS BY COURTS-MARTIAL.

Mr. CUTCHEON. On behalf of the Committee on Military Affairs I call up the bill (H. R. 8201) to amend the Articles of War relative to punishment on convictions by courts-martial.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That whenever by any of the Articles of War for the government of the Army the punishment on conviction of any military offense is left to the discretion of the court-martial, the punishment therefor shall not, in time of peace, be in excess of a limit which the President may prescribe.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WAR SERVICE COMPUTED AS DOUBLE TIME.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I call up, on the part of the Committee on Military Affairs, the bill (H. R. 8394) to amend chapter 67, volume 23, of the Statutes at Large of the United States, for present consideration. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That chapter 67 of volume 23 of the Statutes at Large of the United States, being an act entitled "An act to authorize a retired-list for privates and non-commissioned officers of the United States Army who have served as such for a period of thirty years or upward," approved February 14, 1865, be amended so as to read as follows:

"That when an enlisted man has served as such thirty years in the United States Army or Marine Corps, either as private or non-commissioned officer, or both, he shall, by application to the President, be placed on the retired-list hereby created, with the rank held by him at the date of retirement, and he shall receive thereafter 75 per cent. of the pay and allowances of the rank upon which he was retired: Provided, That if said enlisted man had war service with the Army in the field, either as volunteer or regular, during the war of the rebellion, such war service shall be computed as double time in computing the thirty years necessary to entitle him to be retired.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I desire on the part of the committee to present an amendment.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. If I caught the provision of the bill from the reading by the Clerk, let me inquire does not this make an appropriation, and is it not liable to the point of order?

Mr. CUTCHEON. No, it calls for no appropriation.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Does it not increase to the extent here provided the retired-list, and does it not to that extent make a charge upon the Government? In other words, does it not retire those who under other circumstances would not be retired?

Mr. CUTCHEON. If the gentleman will allow me I will make a word of explanation.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I would like to hear some explanation of the bill.

Mr. CUTCHEON. The Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 8394) to amend chapter 67 of volume 23 of the Statutes at Large of the United States, report that the existing law is incorporated in the part of this bill which precedes the proviso, the only change being made by the addition of the proviso, in the following words:

Provided, That if said enlisted man had war service with the Army in the field, either as volunteer or regular, during the war of the rebellion, such war service shall be computed as double time in computing the thirty years necessary to entitle him to be retired.

This amendment is in strict accord with the resolution adopted at the last national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The number of the old veterans of the war who still continue as enlisted men of the Army can not be large, and this amendment would have the effect of allowing war service to be computed as double time in making up the required thirty years of service to entitle them to retirement. Probably it would not reduce the period of actual service below twenty-seven years in any case.

The entire number of enlisted men now on the retired-list is 249, and this amendment would only anticipate the date of retirement by the length of war service with the Army in the field.

The committee recommend the passage of the bill.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I did not hear the reading of the bill; but as far as I did hear it, it seems to me this is a charge upon the Government by making a new class upon the retired-list.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Not at all, but it has the effect of allowing war service to be computed as double time in making up the required thirty years' service to entitle to retirement.

The SPEAKER. It is one of those cases repeatedly decided requiring argument to show it would tend to increase of expenditure. It has been ruled in. It is on the border line.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I hope the gentleman will not insist upon his point of order.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. My impression is from the ruling heretofore it has been ruled in. I do not desire to antagonize the Chair.

Mr. McMILLIN. It is quite apparent, it seems to me, that this authorizes the retirement of parties embraced in the bill at an earlier date under certain contingencies than they would be entitled to under existing law. Inasmuch as their places are filled immediately by others and the retired-list is increased it necessarily increases the charge upon the Treasury, and is subject, I think, to the point of order requiring its first consideration in the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks, according to the rulings of former Speakers, it is in order.

Mr. ROGERS. I hope the gentleman will make some explanation. Mr. CUTCHEON. I have already made an explanation, but as it will take but a word or two, I will repeat it.

By the act of 1864 enlisted men who served for thirty years in the Army should go on the retired-list. There are now 249 of these enlisted men. This provides those who have had war service with the Army in the field shall have that service computed as double time. As it is now twenty-five years after the war it would not in effect exceed 50 men.

Mr. ROGERS. Is it confined to service in the war of the rebellion?
Mr. CUTCHEON. The original act provides—

That when an enlisted man has served as such for thirty years in the United States Army or Marine Corps, either as private or non-commissioned officer, or both, he shall by application to the President be placed on the retired-list hereby created, with the rank held by him at date of retirement, and he shall receive thereafter 75 per cent. of the pay and allowances of the rank upon which he was retired.

This is the same as the original law, but the change which is proposed is contained in the following proviso:

Provided, That if said enlisted man had war service with the Army in the field, either as volunteer or regular, during the war of the rebellion, such war service shall be computed as double time in computing the thirty years necessary to entitle him to be retired.

There has been no war since the war of the rebellion and active service in that war is allowed to be computed as double time.

I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, in line 18, by inserting, after the word "field," the following: "Or in the Marine Corps in active service."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. CUTCHEON moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

COURTS-MARTIAL.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Mr. Speaker, I now call up the bill (S. 428) to amend article 103 of the Rules and Articles of War.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the one hundred and third article of the Rules and Articles of War be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding thereto the following words:

"No person shall be tried or punished by a court-martial for desertion in time of peace and not in the face of an enemy, committed more than two years before the arraignment of such person for such offense, unless he shall meanwhile have absented himself from the United States, in which case the time of his absence shall be excluded in computing the period of the limitation: Provided, That said limitation shall not begin until the end of the term for which said person was mustered into the service."

Mr. McMILLIN. Will the gentleman from Michigan in charge of this bill please state what the limitation is now and what change is proposed by this bill?

Mr. CUTCHEON. If the Clerk will read the first paragraph of the report it will state succinctly the purpose of the bill.

I will state, however, that at the present time there is a general limitation upon courts-martial that no person shall be tried for a given offense committed more than two years prior to arraignment. It has been a question under this article of war whether it applied to cases of desertion or not, because the desertion being a continuing offense must be a continuing offense until the expiration of the term of enlistment. This bill is designed to make certain that which has heretofore been uncertain and applies to desertion, providing that the statute of limitation in such cases shall not begin to run until the end of the term of service for which the person was mustered into the service. There is also a provision as to the case where a person has absented himself from the United States.

Mr. McMILLIN. I do not ask for the reading of the report. The gentleman's statement is satisfactory.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and being read the third time, was passed.

Mr. CUTCHEON moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SPRINGER. I now demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the continuation of the special order, the bill for the admission of the Territory of Idaho.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I hope the gentleman will allow me to introduce one other bill. I have several others, and this will take but a short time.

Mr. SPRINGER. I can not yield, because the time has largely been taken up already, and we are limited to-day.

Mr. DORSEY. I ask unanimous consent that the time for closing the debate on the Idaho bill be fixed at 3.30 to-day instead of 3 o'clock, as a considerable part of the time was taken up on yesterday by the consideration of the appropriation bill.

Mr. SPRINGER. I hope that will be done.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska?

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

ADMISSION OF IDAHO.

Mr. DORSEY. Will the Chair be kind enough to state what time has been occupied on either side in the discussion?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks each side has occupied about two hours.

Mr. DORSEY. I think that is correct. I yield now to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PERKINS].

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I would be obliged to the Chair for information as to what length of time I have already consumed?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman occupied twenty-three minutes on yesterday.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, in consequence of the limited time at my disposal I shall be compelled to omit some suggestions that I had intended to make in connection with the consideration of this bill. I desire, however, in the time remaining to me to emphasize as far as practicable the fact that the only objection that has thus far been made by the minority of the committee, and by gentlemen who are opposed to the passage of the bill providing for the admission of Idaho into the Union as one of our States, is the objection that under the constitution which was framed by the people of that Territory and indorsed almost unanimously by them at an election called for that purpose Mormonism is denounced and those who are believers and professors of the practices of Mormonism are discriminated against. In other words, Mr. Speaker, those who believe in polygamous or bigamous practices are disfranchised under this constitution. That is the only objection that has been urged against the passage of the bill.

My friend from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] says that is not quite a correct statement of the proposition; he says they only object to that provision of the constitution because such people are disfranchised prior to their arraignment in court and conviction of the offense alleged, and he thinks that a constitution which disfranchises these Mormons because of their belief or because of their practices prior to the time of their indictment and conviction by a court is not right and ought not to be indorsed by this House. That, I repeat, is the only objection made by my friend from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] or by the minority of the Committee on the Territories, and I desire the members of this House, those who are friendly to this measure as well as those who are opposed to it, to understand clearly the issue. I want the members who occupy seats upon the floor of this House as well as the country to understand clearly the point of division, and to remember that the only objection that is made by any one, so far as we have heard, to the passage of the bill is that the Mormons who profess and practice and teach the doctrines of their church and believe in them are disfranchised.

My friend says he does not believe in polygamy; the minority of the members of the committee say they do not believe in polygamous practices, but yet they say they do not believe in disfranchising those who do in the Territory of Idaho in advance of conviction in court. But in this connection, Mr. Speaker, I desire to call the attention of my friend from Illinois, the distinguished gentleman representing the minority of the committee [Mr. SPRINGER], to his vote in this House on what is known as the Edmunds act. When that bill was considered in the House my friend took a conspicuous part in the debate and was one of its most active supporters, and that measure disfranchised absolutely in all of the Territories of the United States every man guilty of polygamy or bigamy, no matter whether he was convicted in court or not. The fact that he was guilty of such practices disfranchised him.

But, notwithstanding his vote on that measure, notwithstanding his advocacy of that bill which is to-day the law of Idaho and Utah and of all of the Territories of the United States, notwithstanding his support of it, now he comes forward and says that the bigamist and the polygamist of Idaho ought not to be disfranchised until indicted and convicted in court. The majority members of the Committee on Territories say, as I believe the majority of the members of the House will say when they come to vote on it, that the man who is guilty of these practices, or the man who encourages them, or who encourages the church which teaches them, or believes that the chief allegiance of the citizen is to that church rather than to the United States, should be disfranchised, whether convicted or not. When the Legislature of Idaho, under the constitution, convenes, it will enact legislation to carry into effect this provision. Then a test oath will be provided for as it is now provided for; and, as I said on yesterday, the citizens of that State who can satisfy the judges of election that they are not disqualified by the provisions of the constitution or by the law that may be framed to carry it into effect will be permitted to vote, as they should be.

But, Mr. Speaker, I desire again to call my friend's attention—the gentleman from Illinois—to his action when what is known as the Edmunds act was considered in the House in the Forty-seventh Congress. The distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] moved to strike out the section disfranchising the polygamists and the bigamists of the Territories, and my friend from Illinois voted against that motion; he voted against the motion to strike out from the Edmunds act the section which disfranchised and disqualified bigamists and polygamists, whether convicted or not; and notwithstanding that vote, which was creditable to him as a citizen, which was creditable to him as a member on the floor of this House, notwithstanding the record then made and his vote, he now sets up a different rule and asks us to follow a different practice to be embodied in the constitution of the State of Idaho, to the effect that the people who encourage, who teach, who believe in or follow these unlawful practices shall not be disfranchised until convicted by a court of justice.

Mr. OATES. I ask my friend if the Edmunds law was not passed by the Forty-eighth Congress?

Mr. PERKINS. No; it was passed in the Forty-seventh Congress. Mr. OATES. When was it that the Edmunds-Tucker bill was passed?

Mr. PERKINS. The Edmunds-Tucker bill was passed and became a law in the Forty-ninth Congress. The Edmunds-Tucker bill is simply a bill to carry into effect and to enlarge and emphasize the provisions of the Edmunds law. So unanimous was this House in the Forty-ninth Congress for the passage of the Edmunds-Tucker bill that those who were opposed to it and who demanded the yeas and nays upon the passage of that bill could get but 8 votes in favor of that proposition. Both sides of the House believed that the Edmunds law should be strengthened and its provisions enlarged, so that polygamy could be broken up and its followers punished, no matter whether residing in Idaho, Utah, or whatever Territory, and disfranchised and not permitted to exercise the privileges of electors in any of the Territories. That is all that this constitution provides for. As I explained on yesterday, if they do not believe in these tenets, if they do not practice them, if they do not belong to this church which encourages and teaches them, then they are authorized by the constitution prepared by the people of Idaho to exercise the same privileges that are exercised by others, the privileges of electors.

Now, will it be said by any one that these Mormons ought to be permitted to vote? Will it be said by any that they ought to exercise the important privileges of electors or that they ought to be eligible to positions of trust in that State, that they might be elected to the Legislature to frame and pass laws for that people or to perform other important official privileges that might be given them?

I desire for just one moment to call attention to what this church teaches and believes. I will admit that there are good men, moral men, perhaps conscientious men, who are followers and members of this church; but as an organization I believe it is pernicious and bad; and I think it ought not to receive the indorsement of any man upon the floor of this House.

Mr. MANSUR. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the gentleman if he will yield to me for a question.

Mr. PERKINS. I will do so with pleasure.

Mr. MANSUR. Why, then, did you not vote to disfranchise the Mormons in Wyoming?

Mr. PERKINS. No such proposition was advanced, nor is it claimed that in Wyoming, so far as I know, men believe, practice, and follow the teachings of Mormonism. No such proposition was brought to the attention of the committee; and under the provisions of the Edmunds law, if there were, they are disfranchised. My friend from Missouri on yesterday suggested that the Mormons of Idaho are disfranchised because they vote the Democratic ticket, and for that reason the Republican members are in favor of this constitutional provision. I suppose it follows necessarily that the Democrats are opposed to it because they vote the Democratic ticket.

Now, I am willing that he should confess for himself. I am willing that he should admit that he is in favor of enfranchising these men who practice the faith and teachings of the Mormon Church because they vote the Democratic ticket; but he can not confess for me and for this side of the House, and say that we believe in disfranchising them for that reason. I believe in disfranchising them because of their practices and because of the practices of their church and because of the obligations it imposes upon its members. And in that connection, as I said—

Mr. MANSUR. I desire to ask the gentleman, as he has said that the Edmunds-Tucker act will keep the Mormons from voting in Wyoming as a Territory, will it do it after it becomes a State?

Mr. PERKINS. When it becomes a State it will be a matter for the people of that State by proper legislative enactment and constitutional provision to determine, and they will declare the qualifications of the electors as they have been declared in the State of Missouri by the constitution of that State and in other States—

Mr. MANSUR. You knew when the constitution of Wyoming was under consideration that the Mormons were there as well as you know it now. Why did you not oppose their right to vote under that constitution?

Mr. PERKINS. Now, I desire to say this: That I am a little surprised at the position taken by my friend from Missouri in connection with this bill. Knowing the excellent characteristics he possesses, knowing his learning, and appreciating him as a man and as a lawyer, I know he does not believe in or indorse the teachings and practices of the Mormon Church, and I am surprised that he should become its defender upon the floor of this House, its "Jack-Mormon." [Laughter.]

I sympathized with him on yesterday when for more than an hour he attempted to frame some excuse for opposing this bill and yet sat down without being satisfied with his effort. He had my sincere commiseration.

Now, Mr. Speaker, just one moment, and I will call the attention of this House to what this church teaches. I will read from a sermon delivered by Mr. Cannon, second in authority in the Mormon Church, and known to many members of this House personally. He is a man who occupied a seat as Delegate from Utah upon this floor for years. After the Edmunds law had received the sanction of both Houses of Congress and the approval of the President of the United States and had become a law, he said this in a sermon to his people:

God has said there was but one channel through which His commandments should come to His people. It was not to be vox populi vox dei, but it was to be vox dei vox populi. God has chosen but one man to counsel His people, and by obeying him they have been successful. I am willing to stake my reputation as a prophet that if you abide his counsel you can not be overcome. Our enemies hope to divide us. They (Congress) have by their laws (the Edmunds bill) deprived the leaders of this people of those rights that belong to us as much as to them. They have sought to humble the elite of this people. They have sought out the enterprising men, the chiefs, the ruling men. They have deposed them, and another class of our people have been told they might come to the front and enjoy the privileges that rightly belong to others. It rests with the saints to say whether the Edmunds law shall take away the power of the men whom God has chosen as our leaders.

Later, after the Edmunds-Tucker act became a law, the gentleman from Utah who has the honor to occupy a seat upon this floor to-day presented to the President of the United States a protest against the enforcement of that law, which was signed by the representatives of his people, and from which I will read a brief extract:

As to our religious faith, it is based upon evidence which to our minds is conclusive. Our convictions can not be destroyed by legislative enactments or judicial decisions. Force may enslave the body, but it can not convince the mind. To yield at the demand of the legislature or judge the rights of conscience would prove us recreant to every duty we owe to God and man. Among the principles of religion is that of immediate revelation from God. One of the doctrines so revealed is celestial or plural marriage, for which ostensibly we are stigmatized and hated. This is a vital part of our religion, the decision of the courts to the contrary notwithstanding.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. PERKINS. How much time have I occupied, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Forty minutes.

Mr. PERKINS. The gentleman from Nebraska yielded me forty-five minutes.

Mr. DORSEY. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is correct.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Then the gentleman will proceed for five minutes.

Mr. PERKINS. After this law had been passed and had been approved by the Chief Executive of the nation, the leaders and representatives of this Mormon Church continued to teach these doctrines to their followers, and sent to represent them upon the floor of this House men who believe these doctrines and observe them. And yet we are told, notwithstanding this, that the Mormons in Idaho ought to be permitted to exercise the important privileges of electors until they are convicted in court of polygamy or bigamy; that is, we are told in effect that the existing law is wrong and ought to be changed. I shall watch with anxiety and with pleasure the vote that will be taken upon this bill, to see how many gentlemen will stand with the minority of the Committee on Territories in the position which they have taken. Whom do our friends of the minority of that committee represent? It was said on yesterday that all the Republicans in Idaho believed in this constitutional provision, that all the Democrats in Idaho believed in this constitutional provision, that all the good people of Idaho believed in this constitutional provision, but that the Mormons of Idaho were opposed to it. Will our friends, then, put themselves in opposition to the wishes of the Democrats of Idaho, in opposition to the wishes of the Republicans of Idaho, in opposition to the wishes of all the law-abiding people of Idaho, and say that, in the interest of the Mormons alone, statehood shall be denied to that Territory, and that this bill shall not become a law? The Delegate from Idaho had read here yesterday a telegram received from the Democratic Territorial committee, addressed to a gentleman lately a Delegate upon this floor, in which they say:

The Democratic Territorial committee unanimously request Democratic members of Congress to vote for the admission of Idaho.

That is signed by F. E. Ensign, chairman, and J. W. Wickersham, secretary, and is dated March 31 of the present year.

Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, it is for this House to say—it is for the gentlemen who have the honor to occupy these seats to say—whether by the votes they will cast upon the passage of this bill they will crown that criminal organization which is known as the Church of Latter-Day Saints with an indorsement and an approval which will say to the intelligent, patriotic, and law-abiding people of Idaho: "You can not be admitted into the Union as a State until you have taken into full fellowship the men who are guilty of the practices of bigamy and polygamy." Will the members who are to vote upon the passage of this bill put themselves in this position and say to all the good people of Idaho: "Stay out; remain a Territory as you are until you submit to us a constitution giving full recognition and full fellowship to the Mormon Church, to those who believe in its doctrines, who take part in its practices, and who promulgate its teachings?" I thank the House for its attention. [Applause.]

Mr. DORSEY. I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. STEWART].

Mr. STEWART, of Vermont. Mr. Speaker, I desire briefly to state

some reasons why I think this bill should become a law. It is very easy, as has been said, to inveigh against the practice of polygamy. The civilization of nineteen centuries has pronounced against it, and men only float with the tide when they denounce it. Let me say to my friend from Michigan [Mr. CHIPMAN]—and I have heard the same arguments over and over again on this question, because I had the honor to be associated with Mr. Tucker on the subcommittee which reported what is known as the Edmunds-Tucker bill—that it is very easy also to declaim upon the rights of men to what we regard as the sacred privileges of suffrage and office-holding. It is, however, not so easy to come up to the point of inaugurating such legislation as shall meet and overcome the evil of polygamy.

There is the rub. I have heard many times before the Judiciary Committee the same argument which my friend from Michigan made yesterday, though not so eloquently or forcibly put as it was put by him. This organization, which is known as the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, which is the Mormon community pure and simple, has been represented before the committees of both Houses of Congress and before Congress by the ablest lawyers in the country, and the same arguments were addressed to the committee against the Edmunds-Tucker bill which the learned gentleman from Missouri [Mr. MANSUR] presented yesterday to the House, and which were presented also by my eloquent and learned friend from Michigan [Mr. CHIPMAN].

It is known to every student of American history who has examined the subject that this organization has been at war not only with christian civilization, but with the American Government and the American people from the beginning of the organization in 1849. I refer to the formation of the Territorial government of the state of Deseret, which in itself was an act of usurpation; from that hour to this it has antagonized every step which Congress has undertaken in order to extirpate this evil of polygamy; and the same arguments, the same stale, stock arguments, have been presented over and over again.

Mr. Speaker, the question presented by this proposition which is so strenuously resisted on the part of some of the gentlemen on the other side is not a new question. Precisely the same question was presented by the Edmunds-Tucker bill. Precisely the same arguments were urged against that measure; yet the House almost unanimously adopted that act.

It is said that this bill goes further than the Edmunds-Tucker act. It goes no further in principle. It does go a little further in detail; it is a little more radical; but it is precisely in the line of the Edmunds-Tucker act; and it is for the same purpose—for no other—to wit, the extinction, the extirpation, of a great public evil.

Our friends on the other side say that this is the infringement of a sacred right. I maintain, Mr. Speaker, that the right of suffrage and the right to hold office are not natural rights. We prescribe, and rightly, qualifications for voters. It has been said—I have not examined the constitutions of the different States in this respect—that in the State of Tennessee a man who happens to be a clergyman is disqualified from holding office. I do not challenge the wisdom of that provision. It is said that in the State of Texas a man who is unfortunately poor, although he may be as wise as Diogenes in his tub, is disqualified for the exercise of the elective franchise. I do not question the wisdom of that provision. It is a part of the duty of the freemen of every State to prescribe such qualifications for the exercise of suffrage on the part of its citizens as they may think the welfare of the State requires.

Now, the man who practices polygamy is disqualified. Everybody agrees that that is right. But my friends on the other side say that if a man belongs to an organization which proclaims that the practice of polygamy is a divine injunction, that polygamy ought to be a part of the system of human society in order that men may reach the highest rewards in the kingdom to come, such a man should be permitted to vote. Now, this is radical legislation—

Mr. OATES. I wish to say that the disqualification in the constitution of Texas to which the gentleman has referred applies only to those who are denominated "paupers." A man is not disfranchised "because he is poor," which was the language the gentleman used. Disqualification applies only to those who are known as "paupers."

Mr. STEWART, of Vermont. I understand that; but I understand also that a pauper may become such without any act of his own. A man may be paralyzed, unable to help himself, may have no relatives to help him; and in such a case, though he may have the brain of Solon or Solomon, may be as wise even as my friend from Alabama and quite as capable of exercising the high duty of the elective franchise, yet the constitution of Texas says that because he is a pauper he shall not vote.

Now, my friends on the other side who have argued this question seem to overlook the fact that, while by this legislation we strike the individual and so touch individual rights, we are dealing with an organization—an organization which, as I have said, every student of history knows to be hostile to our institutions of Government. Its people are not homogeneous with our people; the two systems can not live together. A polygamist community and a monogamous community can not and ought not to live together. Our theory is that the home is the unit of society; and the home of christian civilization, where the father and the mother exercise the governmental control over the family, that is the ideal home; we all believe in that.

Now, let me say to my Democratic friends on the other side—and I see very many gentlemen here who were in the Forty-ninth Congress and who voted to sustain the Edmunds-Tucker bill—let me say to those gentlemen that if they were then sincere in their desire to strike a blow at this infamous system which has afflicted this country and has antagonized everything good in the country, not only the Government and the Army, but the judiciary and the general welfare of the community, a system which, as I have said, can not in the nature of things harmonize with the sort of community in which we believe—let me say to those gentlemen that if they are sincere in their desire to root out this evil they should let the good citizens of Idaho, the Democrats and Republicans there, who are a unit on this question, control this subject as they have already undertaken to do in their Territorial legislation.

Let them say what persons shall be qualified to vote; let them say, if they please, that not only the man who practices bigamy or polygamy, but the man who belongs to an organization which sustains and upholds that system, advises and counsels it—that all such men shall be disqualified from exercising the right of suffrage. If that be the character of our legislation, let me say to my friends on the other side that the christian communities to which they will return will say, "Well done, good and faithful servants; you have done the right thing; this evil ought to be ended, and you have adopted the proper way to do it."

Mr. STOCKDALE. I would like to ask the gentleman a question, though I do not mean to indicate by it how I shall vote on this subject. I have listened to this discussion, but nobody seems to have explained the point about which I wish to inquire. The gentleman argues, as others have done, that those who believe in and practice polygamy should not be allowed to vote. I think that is right. But the provision under consideration goes much further; it applies the exclusion to all those who shall sympathize with, aid, or abet (there are a number of words of that sort) the practice of polygamy. Now, when and by whom are these disabilities to be determined?

Mr. STEWART, of Vermont. They are to be determined by the individual man. If he says he does not belong to an organization which advises, counsels, aids, or abets polygamy—an organization a part of whose system it is to practice it—he is permitted to vote.

Mr. STOCKDALE. I do not understand that there is anything of that kind in this constitution.

Mr. STEWART, of Vermont. It is in the constitution, and it ought to be in the constitution.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. DORSEY. I yield to the gentleman one minute more.

Mr. STEWART, of Vermont. I maintain that a man who belongs to an organization such as I have described ought to be disfranchised. I ask my friends, if they have not studied the history of this organization, to go back and do so. In connection with the Edmunds-Tucker legislation, I went through the entire history of this business from the adoption of the constitution of 1849 to which I have referred. In that constitution they said they would come into the Union as a State; and until they should come into the Union they would govern themselves as a State. That was a piece of usurpation. My friend may smile, but he knows it is the truth.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. SPRINGER. I will yield a portion of my time to the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. JOSEPH].

Mr. JOSEPH. Mr. Speaker, the House of Representatives has passed the bill for the admission of the Territory of Wyoming as a State. The bill for the admission of Idaho now stands before the House recommended for passage. It will not be long before the final vote of the House will be taken, and it will doubtless be favorable to the bill. I do not rise to oppose the Idaho bill now under discussion. I am glad to see the recognition of the rights of both Wyoming and of Idaho, as these Territories are richly entitled to the benefits of statehood.

My object in addressing the House is to show the title of New Mexico to the same consideration and to establish by incontrovertible proofs that in all which constitutes the right to statehood New Mexico is not only equal to, but far surpasses both of the other Territories, one of which the House has already voted to admit. New Mexico is not only the oldest, but also the largest in area, population, and wealth of all the Territories still remaining outside the sisterhood of States. Her admission to statehood was promised more than forty years ago by solemn treaty obligations. The time has long since passed for the fulfillment of these, but still New Mexico is not heeded. She now applies for the fifth time to be admitted as a State. While the House voted to admit Wyoming, and, if I mistake not, is about to vote to admit Idaho, the bill for the admission of New Mexico, which I introduced at the very first opportunity in this Congress, is still awaiting the action of the Committee on Territories, although all necessary information, both to show the propriety of New Mexico's admission and to enable proper legislation to be perfected, have long been before the committee. Is New Mexico to be longer punished by this delay, which retards her development and causes her citizens to feel that Congress forgets the solemn duties and obligations which devolve upon it?

In my remarks in the House of Representatives on the 17th of January, 1889, in relation to the admission of New Mexico, I made quite elaborate statements of the resources of New Mexico as compared to those of Montana, Washington, and North and South Dakota. The bill under which these States were admitted to the Union when before the House provided also for the admission of New Mexico. I believe that I then demonstrated that on every ground of population, resources, and natural advantages, and devotion to American citizenship New Mexico was entitled to admission as well as those great and noble States whose stars have so recently adorned the national flag. But the last Congress did not see fit to include New Mexico in the group of States then admitted.

In the present Congress the rights of the Western Territories are being again considered. Idaho and Wyoming have presented their claims to admission, and I hope that before the present Congress has closed Representatives from these new States will have taken their seats in the House. Justice to these Territories and a desire for their development vigorously demand their admission. But I can not think that New Mexico should again be excluded from the benefits of statehood while the sister Territories of Wyoming and Idaho are admitted. Both of these Territories fall below New Mexico in population and present development. It would be the greatest injustice to New Mexico and Arizona if, in passing the just and proper measures for the admission of Idaho and Wyoming, New Mexico and Arizona should not also be given the benefits of statehood.

A comparison of population and resources will be made between New Mexico and Wyoming, which the House has already approved for admission to the Union. I desire to be carefully understood that the object of this comparison is not to disparage the abundant resources of Wyoming, but merely to show that New Mexico is entitled to admission to statehood upon the basis furnished by the proposition to admit the Territories of Wyoming and Idaho.

The population of Wyoming is stated by the influential and active Delegate who represents that Territory in the House at 125,000. The census of 1880 showed a population of far more than 100,000 in New Mexico at that time. There are no accurate statistics to show positively what the population of New Mexico is at the present time, but in a very conservative estimate made by the present governor he puts the population at 195,000. I believe that it reaches 225,000. There has been a very steady increase every year since 1880, and the filings at the two land offices in the Territory during the year ending June 30, 1889, amounted to 283,537 acres. Since that time two additional land offices have been opened, and the increase in filings has been very great. This increase has been largely from the farming States of Missouri, Indiana, and Illinois, and is of the very best class of settlers.

The assessed property in Wyoming in 1889 was $31,500,000; in New Mexico, for 1889, the last available figures, it was $48,690,723. It must be remembered also, in this connection, that the values of cattle and sheep have somewhat diminished during the past few years. These are two of the great sources of wealth of New Mexico. Notwithstanding the present decrease in the prices there is a constant increase in the assessed value of the property in the Territory. This increase must, as the governor well states, represent considerable increase in the real-estate values.

The tax levy of the Territory shows a total of $418,406.13, according to the table hereto annexed.

Statement of tax levy of 1889.

[Prepared by Trinidad Alarid, auditor.]

Counties.	Penitentiary interest.	Capital interest.	Penitentiary current expense.	Capital current expense.	Salary.	Court.	Sinking fund for redemption of warrants.	Provisional indebtedness.
Bernalillo	$2,851.29	$2,393.21	$6,374.59	$1,194.28	$1,363.45	$14,589.30	$2,055.02	$1,541.10
Colfax	2,446.63	2,395.16	7,720.45	1,447.58	1,054.38	17,046.74	2,481.57	2,481.57
Dona Ana	1,695.16	1,438.95	8,839.34	719.14	821.86	8,752.57	1,233.42	1,233.42
Grant	2,438.32	2,048.00	5,461.90	1,024.09	1,170.38	12,483.91	1,755.50	1,755.50
Lincoln	1,864.42	1,565.35	4,174.45	782.84	894.37	9,542.78	1,342.11	1,342.11
Mora	1,116.33	944.09	2,549.43	467.26	533.90	5,683.48	801.56	801.56
Rio Arriba	599.45	503.09	1,259.53	200.98	285.36	2,997.89	430.98	430.98
San Juan	278.82	234.20	624.55	117.10	133.83	1,427.53	200.75	200.75
San Miguel	3,728.65	3,132.06	8,352.17	1,566.03	1,789.35	19,090.68	2,684.62	2,684.62
Santa Fe	1,536.50	1,290.66	3,441.76	645.33	737.52	7,866.88	1,106.28	1,106.28
Sierra	1,059.90	890.32	2,374.13	445.16	508.72	5,426.57	763.10	763.10
Socorro	1,837.83	1,542.93	4,115.70	771.36	882.19	9,405.30	1,322.20	1,322.20
Taos	357.17	301.37	797.23	149.80	171.22	1,818.82	262.23	262.23
Valencia	1,157.94	972.67	2,503.78	496.33	555.81	5,928.64	833.71	833.71
Totals	23,968.41	20,152.26	53,719.00	10,026.34	11,502.74	122,596.00	17,253.06	16,649.34

Counties.	Miscellaneous.	Current expense interest.	Assessors.	Transportation of convicts.	Territorial institutions.	Cattle, etc.	Total, less assessors, convict institutions, and cattle indemnity.	Grand total.
Bernalillo	$5,464.56	$2,055.02	$2,557.45	$861.44	$5,700.58	$116.37	$39,883.91	$49,119.75
Colfax	6,617.52	1,861.18	3,101.61	1,033.98	6,893.26	890.79	48,252.78	60,172.77
Dona Ana	3,274.88	925.65	1,542.68	514.62	3,426.68	268.61	25,934.39	29,686.88
Grant	4,681.27	1,316.73	2,194.67	731.36	4,876.58	840.66	34,135.61	42,778.88
Lincoln	3,577.27	1,066.63	1,677.90	559.62	3,728.52	1,061.19	26,092.53	33,119.75
Mora	2,136.12	603.80	996.07	334.63	2,286.84	343.60	15,637.53	19,368.95
Rio Arriba	1,096.48	160.79	1,318.03	224.71	1,066.42	.....	8,008.53	9,332.30
San Juan	535.32	150.56	250.93	83.64	557.63	136.39	3,903.41	4,432.90
San Miguel	7,169.00	2,013.47	3,355.24	1,118.05	7,457.30	826.03	52,201.10	64,957.72
Santa Fe	2,960.08	829.71	1,382.85	460.95	3,073.00	36.16	21,514.00	25,466.95
Sierra	2,064.97	572.37	953.84	317.95	2,119.77	317.36	14,838.38	18,547.30
Socorro	3,637.11	992.15	1,633.28	550.96	3,674.43	659.04	5,718.98	32,256.74
Taos	681.03	262.23	321.92	106.47	715.64	14.07	4,991.51	6,149.61
Valencia	2,223.24	625.29	1,042.14	347.38	2,315.87	84.83	16,211.12	20,001.34
Totals	45,958.86	13,375.58	22,348.96	8,235.65	47,892.57	5,495.10	335,323.78	418,406.13

The agricultural resources of the Territory have been very fully referred to by me in my speeches of April 14 and May 28, 1888, and January 17, 1889. The last report of the governor also refers to this subject:

A SPLENDID SHOWING—OFFICIAL FIGURES ON NEW MEXICO'S AGRICULTURE—A FLATTERING FUTURE ASSURED.

Statistician Dodge, of the Government Agricultural Department, has just issued some official figures on western agriculture for 1889 which make a very gratifying exhibit for our fair yet much-maligned Territory; figures which will prove of especial interest to a large class of the New Mexican's readers, not only the friends of statehood, but also to the hundreds of people at home and abroad who are now engaged in making it possible to enlarge the cultivable area by the construction of irrigation enterprises. These figures show what New Mexico has done while handicapped in a manner that no other section of the Union has ever been called upon to fight against; they make it plain that

New Mexico will advance, despite every obstacle, and when one considers that more than $1,000,000 are now going into new irrigation companies, which will reclaim within the present year more than 200,000 acres of New Mexico valley land, some idea of New Mexico's outlook from the standpoint of horticulture and agriculture may be arrived at. Statistician Dodge's figures for the corn crop are as follows:

	Acres planted.	Bushels realized.	Value of crop.
Colorado	42,983	1,092,000	$633,372
New Mexico	56,279	1,126,000	675,468
Utah	35,175	614,000	393,650

The returns for the wheat crop are from a more extended territory, as follows:

	Acres planted.	Busheis realized.	Value of crop.
Colorado.....	87,300	1,851,000	$1,332,517
Nevada.....	18,396	335,000	251,250
Arizona.....	25,930	337,000	252,218
Idaho.....	81,427	1,440,000	.....
Montana.....	85,000	1,519,000	.....
New Mexico.....	86,295	1,096,000	800,041
Utah.....	122,878	1,880,000	1,410,025

The following are the estimates of the oat crop:

	Acres planted.	Busheis realized.	Value of crop.
Colorado.....	97,791	3,129,000	$1,251,725
Idaho.....	5,725	1,000,000	450,135
Montana.....	85,937	2,278,000	1,134,382
New Mexico.....	16,668	340,000	142,642
Utah.....	36,658	916,000	412,403

It will be seen that in quantity and value, excepting oats, of the three grains estimated, New Mexico ranks Colorado and Montana. New Mexico also raises in superabundance:

Alfalfa, per cutting tri-annually.....	tons.....	2
Potatoes, sweet.....	bushels per acre.....	75 to 100
Parsnips.....	do.....	175 to 275
Mangoes (weighing 30 to 40 pounds each).....	do.....	500 to 800
Beets.....	do.....	175 to 400
Carrots.....	do.....	175 to 300
Cabbages.....	weighing pounds per head.....	5 to 30
Tomatoes.....	weighing pounds each.....	1 to 1
Cucumbers.....	do.....	1 to 6
Squash (Hubbard).....	do.....	10 to 25
Squash (marrowfat).....	do.....	30 to 75
Pumpkins.....	do.....	10 to 25

Besides these, New Mexico valleys raise cotton, flax, hemp, tobacco, sorghum, rice, chili, egg-plant, beans, and other garden vegetables, with excellent hops; and, more yet, after harvesting her crop of wheat, oats, barley, or pease, she plows anew, and the same year secures a crop of corn, cabbage, beets, or turnips.

In fruits, her apples, pears, peaches, apricots, plums, cherries, gages, quinces, equal those of any State in the Union, while her almonds, chestnuts, English walnuts, and filberts will bear successful competition with the nut-growers of the world. Her vineyards have for ten years stood equal with any in America in product, flavor, and wine yields; her melons have, so far, met with no superior on the continent; while her small fruits, such as strawberries, gooseberries, raspberries, currants, etc., with asparagus, celery, spinach, radishes, and peanuts, are unrivaled, and your Agricultural Department will tell you her onions beat the world.

Her plains now and for years past have been dotted with profitable ranches crowded with cattle, sheep, and horses, with more favorable round-ups and less percentage of loss than any cattle country of the West can show, and with her beef, mutton, wool, and horses standing on the first grade in Chicago and Eastern marts. The most nutritious grasses cover the broad plateaus of New Mexico, which will continue for years to grow, to offer the best grazing facilities of any cattle country in the United States. The cost of beef-raising is nominal, as stock need never be housed or fed. The high and dry climate precludes almost the possibility of disease among sheep and cattle. At least half the lands of New Mexico are especially adapted to grazing purposes; and even if future improvement tempted agriculture, stock-raising would always be more profitable. So that New Mexico will forever be one of the main supplies of the beef-eaters of the world.

Governor Army said of New Mexico: "For the profitable raising of horses, mules, cattle, goats, and sheep, and on the most extensive scale, no portion of the world can rival this district. Its mild climate presents no rigors, while its mountain slopes, valleys, and plains are unlimited extents of pasturage."

Her mountains and high table-lands offer immense forests of pine and spruce, enough for ample supply of lumber to her growing population and rapidly building cities.

I might be more explicit with regard to her capacity as a wine-producing country. The Rio Grande and Pecos River valleys produce grapes in wild profusion, whose wines are ranked for table use and compare favorably with Rhine wines. Fair estimates, from practicable sources, give the value of an acre of land well set with vines at from three to five hundred dollars. As early as 1804 Baron Humboldt said of this country: "The vineyards produce excellent wines, which are preferred even to the wines of Parras and New Biscay." Almost any of the side-hills offer excellent vineyard sites, but especially wealthy in this respect is the Rio Grande valley, extending a distance of 350 miles in New Mexico.

HER MINERAL RESOURCES.

It has been stated, and I believe is true, that "the knowledge of the mineral wealth of New Mexico had caused it for a long time previous to its acquisition, in 1846, to be looked upon by the United States as a most desirable addition to the Union."

Early after 1846 rumors of its still fabulous wealth, added to the historical mineral riches it had given for years to Old Mexico, induced hardy pioneers to test its richness, and during that period (from 1846 to 1880), notwithstanding its isolation and its then total lack of transportation, notwithstanding the difficulty of obtaining tools or supplies, notwithstanding the miners had to work with arms and ammunition at hand to meet the persistent attacks of hordes of savages—in spite of such almost insurmountable obstacles, in those few years your mint statistics show that those brave delvers dug from the plethoric bowels of New Mexico $13,972,000 in ore, of which $10,350,000 was gold and $3,622,000 silver.

The succeeding five years, from 1885 to 1889, the production of the Territory was:

Years.	Gold.	Silver.	Total.
1885.....	$691,000	$1,985,000	$2,676,000
1886.....	700,000	3,375,000	4,075,000
1887.....	709,000	3,700,000	4,409,000
1888.....	911,000	4,381,000	5,292,000
1889.....	797,000	5,671,000	6,468,000
Total.....	3,808,000	19,113,000	22,921,000

The production of copper was, for the years 1888 and 1889, $10,000,000.

This does not include many valuable shipments of ore sent to other States for reduction. But the figures demonstrate that the product of the precious metals increased rapidly every year.

Gold has been found in nearly every county in the Territory, either in the river or creek beds as placers, or in the mountain ranges in veins or lodes as quartz.

Lead and smelting ores abound in nearly every portion of the Territory, comprising gold and silver ores, which, being allied to the baser metals, as lead, zinc, sulphur, etc., can not be profitably reduced except by smelting.

Silver, in the form of native, ruby, or vitreous silver, is found in richly paying quantities in many districts of the Territory. Copper has been found in many districts in largely profitable veins, but the depressed condition of that market and the high rate of railroad transportation during the past two years have prevented its extensive working.

Lead, iron, mica, cement, gypsum, fire-clay in inexhaustible amounts, excellent marble, turquoise of purest blue—but, sir, I would weary the House and myself to enumerate the extent and variety of the authentically recorded minerals of this Territory, and I close with a brief allusion to her coal, the mining of which, though in its infancy, has already become an important factor in the resources of the Territory. The United States Geological Survey report gives some instructive facts and figures, as published by your Interior Department. It says:

In New Mexico coal is found in seven counties in beds from 1 to 14 feet thick. The quality ranges through all varieties, from brown to anthracite. The most important fields yet opened are those in Colfax County, and embrace an area of 600,000 acres, the product being a lignite, which varies greatly in quality. The following analyses were made from specimens taken near the surface:

Constituents.	Top of vein.	Middle.	Bottom.
	Per cent.	Per cent.	Per cent.
Moisture.....	2.00	3.10	2.60
Volatile matter.....	37.10	35.00	34.30
Fixed carbon.....	51.60	51.50	47.50
Ash.....	9.30	10.40	15.60
Total.....	100.00	100.00	100.00

The report further says of the coal mined from the Los Cerillos beds:

The coal is hard, dense, and of a brilliant luster, and is said to be, so far as application for all practical purposes is concerned, fully equal to the best Pennsylvania anthracite.

It also gives minute reports of bituminous coal-beds in other portions of the Territory, and closes generally with the following:

The New Mexico coals compare favorably with those found farther north. The production of the Territory since 1885 has been:

	Raton.	Gallup.	Monero.	Cerillos.	San Pedro.	Total.
1885.....	91,798	33,373	12,000	3,600	16,321	157,092
1886.....	112,089	42,000	17,240	3,000	37,018	211,347
1887.....	102,513	62,802	11,203	3,000	41,039	220,557
1888.....	135,833	97,755	14,568	1,000	56,656	296,202
1889.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	271,285
Grand total.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,116,483

And continues:

Placing the value of these coals at $5 per ton (which is a fair average for the entire period), the value of the product of the Territory during the past five years is, in total, $5,832,415.

It is surely not necessary, Mr. Speaker, that this intelligent House should be burdened with further citations to prove the capacity of New Mexico for State government and her promise in native resources for enriching all the myriads of industrious people who will eventually crowd her borders, and for adding one of the most lustrous to the galaxy of States that glorify this Union.

It is enough, sir, to say that New Mexico offers population sufficient, resources adequate, wealth enough to make and keep her statehood. She has made the same offer for years, and for years she has been refused admittance as a State.

As to sheep, I can only compare the 4,328,753 sheep in New Mexico as shown by the official reports with the 1,250,000 estimated by the distinguished Delegate from Wyoming as in that Territory. In cattle, New Mexico and Wyoming, each of them with about 1,500,000, are striving in friendly rivalry for the superiority.

New Mexico has now in round figures 1,500 miles of railroad and five more roads in course of construction, which will give us 500 miles more during the present year, making the entire railway mileage 2,000.

As to banking facilities in New Mexico, the Comptroller of the Currency reports to me that there are nine national banks, with an aggregate capital of $975,000, with bonds to secure circulation aggregating $277,500, and a circulation of $249,750. Besides the national banks there are fourteen county banks, which are capitalized at an average of $50,000 each, or $700,000, making a total of $1,675,000 as the banking capital of the Territory. Wyoming shows nine national banks and eleven private banks. The capital of the national banks is $1,175,000, but that of the private banks is not stated.

In Wyoming there are ten organized counties; in New Mexico there are fourteen. In Wyoming eight of the counties have substantial court-houses and jails; in New Mexico the report of the governor shows that ten of the fourteen counties have such buildings, that one additional county has purchased land and is about to erect such a building, and that another is building a fine modern court-house whose value, with the land on which it stands and surrounding buildings, will be $70,000. All of these buildings have been erected within the past ten years, thus showing the march of public spirit in the Territory during that period.

The financial system of the Territory has been placed upon a sound basis by a recent act of the Legislature. The pleadings in the courts by another act have recently been brought into entire harmony with the best systems of the States, while constant improvements are being made by the Legislature in the laws relating to administration, the business and the control of property. Two new counties have just been established, and four important Territorial institutions—a university, an agricultural college, a school of mines, and a lunatic asylum—show the regard the people of New Mexico have for education and the care of the unfortunate.

No very definite figures have been submitted in regard to education in Wyoming. It is stated that nearly 300 teachers are employed and that good graded schools are maintained in all the towns and cities of the Territory. In the governor's report for New Mexico it is shown that 342 public schools were in active operation in the Territory on October 1, 1889, with an enrollment of 16,803 pupils. In 143 of these schools nothing but English is taught; in 93 some instruction is included in Spanish, and in 106 the instruction is in the Spanish language, but even in these latter schools the pupils, with very few exceptions, understand English. This makes a total of 236 schools under English instruction.

The instruction in Spanish is found principally in the older counties, while in the counties in which there has been the greater proportion of immigration from the East the English language is taught, to the exclusion of Spanish. In addition to the public schools there are a very large number of private educational institutions which are well attended and ably conducted. The people of New Mexico are deeply interested in the maintenance of the public-school system, and it is only a matter of a few years' continuance of the present generous support for the school system of New Mexico to be on a par with the best in the country so far as can be in a less thickly populated locality.

This review of the population and resources of New Mexico shows that New Mexico has certainly an equal title to statehood with Wyoming. Indeed, I maintained in the last Congress, and I believe that I fully established, that her title to statehood in point of population and resources was as good as that of the States recently admitted.

But in one respect New Mexico has a greater title to immediate admission to statehood than any of the recently admitted States or those now applying for admission. New Mexico is the only Territory which holds the pledge of the United States Government that it shall be admitted as a State. By the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, the provisions of which have been quoted by me heretofore, statehood was guaranteed to Mexico, but the time was left discretionary in Congress.

That discretion, however, must be exercised as a reasonable discretion, and can not lawfully be used as an excuse for indefinite delay in admission. It has now been over forty years since the date of that treaty, and yet the admission of New Mexico is denied. In 1850 Senators and a Representative were elected and the admission of New Mexico was discussed in both Houses of Congress, but failed. The people of New Mexico believed themselves entitled to admission, but on account of the excitement of the civil war and other interruptions no further action was taken until the year 1874, when an enabling act passed both Houses of Congress, but was defeated only by reason of the close of the session before questions of difference could be settled in conference. In 1876 the Senate again passed a bill for this purpose.

In the various votes, upon these occasions, upon this bill numerous distinguished gentlemen who now hold seats in both Houses of Congress voted for New Mexico's admission, among them being Messrs. CANNON, HARMER, MILLS, and O'NEILL, of the present House, and Senators ALLISON, DAWES, FARWELL, FRYE, INGALLS, MITCHELL, SAWYER, and STEWART, in the Senate. Other distinguished persons, members of the party which now dominates in both of the national legislative chambers, but who no longer hold seats in either house of Congress, also voted for the bill, among them being the late President Garfield; the late Vice-President Hannibal Hamlin; the present Secretary of the Treasury, Hon. William Windom; the Hon. John A. Logan, of Illinois; Hon. Simon Cameron, of Pennsylvania; Hon. George S. Boutwell, of Massachusetts; and Hon. John A. Kasson, of Iowa.

In the last Congress the Committee on Territories reported in favor of the admission of New Mexico, but, in order not to endanger the passage of the bill for the admission of the other States, the name of New Mexico was stricken out. Many members declared, when voting for striking out the name of New Mexico from the general bill, that they would favor the passage of a special bill for its admission, but no opportunity for this purpose came during that Congress. The honor of the United States is pledged to the redemption of the treaty obligation. A further delay would be in violation of that reasonable discretion which was granted to Congress by the terms of the treaty.

In view of the facts which I have recited, what objection can be made to the admission of New Mexico? It has been intimated to me that there has been some opposition to her admission on the ground that a large number of her inhabitants are members of the Catholic Church. I can not believe that any member of this House could permit his action to be influenced by a motive of this kind. Religion and politics must be kept separate. No doctrine is more firmly fixed in the minds of the American citizens than this. We are ready to submit to an examination as to our wealth, our education, our honor, to determine our right to statehood, but it would be foreign to our institutions to cause an investigation of our religious faith to determine whether we are qualified to exercise the full rights of citizenship. I therefore feel compelled to exclude from all consideration any possibility that the objections to the admission of New Mexico are based on religious grounds.

I have read in some of the newspapers of the country various slurs upon New Mexico upon the ground that her people are not as well educated as those of the more densely populated parts of the East. I am ready to admit that with her undeveloped resources New Mexico has not been able to give the same educational privileges as Massachusetts or New York, but I reply to this by saying that the people of New Mexico have shown their devotion to the cause of education by the establishment of an elaborate system of public schools and increased appropriations from year to year for their support, and that the gift of statehood to the people of New Mexico would do more than any other one thing to aid in the increase of schools within her borders. I may claim, too, for those citizens of New Mexico who have not had the advantages of education that they are as peaceful and law-abiding and as earnestly devoted to free institutions as the inhabitants of any part of this great country.

Finally it is asserted that the people of New Mexico are not Americans, that they speak a foreign language, and that they have no affinity with American institutions. It is true that we have a large population in New Mexico who speak the Spanish language, and that among the older persons who are descended from the original settlers of the country some still remain who are ignorant of English. But it is undoubtedly true that there are very few persons in New Mexico under thirty years of age who are unable to speak English, and that year by year the use of the English language is taking the place of Spanish. The gentle accents of the Spanish tongue will always be dear to those who are descended from the first settlers of New Mexico; they will always look with affection upon that language, and its familiar use may never be wholly eradicated. But the people of New Mexico realize that they are a part of the United States, and that the English language is the national language, and it is a fixed and definite principle among them all that the English language shall be taught to every child in New Mexico.

Can the Congress of the United States refuse admission as a State because a part of the people of the proposed State speak the Spanish language? The pledge to admit New Mexico as a State contained no condition that all the inhabitants should learn the English language. On the contrary it was known that Spanish was their tongue, and the treaty-making power was well aware that the language would not wholly disappear for years or even centuries. Yet the agreement was absolute that New Mexico should be admitted as a State within a reasonable discretion remaining in Congress as to the time and manner of admission. I therefore maintain that it would be in utter violation of the treaty pledge if the people of New Mexico should be told that they could not exercise the rights of statehood until after every inhabitant had learned to speak and write the English language.

But if we exclude entirely from our calculation as to the number of inhabitants of New Mexico the native New Mexican population, I do not doubt that we would find that over 100,000 persons—nearly equal to the whole population of Wyoming—are now living in New Mexico who came there from the Eastern States, and who have not a drop of Spanish or Mexican blood in their veins. The persons of Spanish descent in New Mexico are now in a minority, which will proportionately decrease with the constant stream of immigration from the States into New Mexico.

But it is not by blood and language that the devotion of the people of New Mexico to the United States and to republican institutions is to be measured. These are the descendants of the bold discoverers who left the monarchical institutions of Spain and came to the New World, and who, with their fellow countrymen in Old Mexico, shook off the chains of foreign domination, as did the hardy English forefathers of the Atlantic States. The devotion to republican institutions of the ancestors of our Spanish and Mexican descended inhabitants of New Mexico was not less than that of the heroes of the Revolution. When New Mexico became a part of the territory of the United States her people were living under republican institutions and devoted to them.

They were therefore fitted to exercise republican rights; they were merely transferred from one republic to another.

Since that time more than forty years have elapsed, and all during this period they have been under the protection of the United States flag. Have they any other allegiance? Can any other power ever call for their assistance? The people of New Mexico are as much citizens of the United States as the people of Ohio, Indiana, or Illinois. What we desire is that we should be admitted to the full rights of citizenship and allowed to bear our share of the burdens of the common defense and general welfare. If New Mexico becomes a State her mines will be developed, her railroads extended, her schools enlarged, and she will take upon herself a new encouragement for progress. When once the resources of New Mexico are developed the whole nation will wonder that so choice a Territory should so long have been neglected. Differing in many points from the other parts of our great Union, she will minister to the wants of the whole country.

There are no more loyal or patriotic people in the United States than the Mexican citizens of my Territory. They are by nature mild and sympathetic, their hearts are as tender as that of a child, but in the hour of peril brave as lions. For the past forty years, when necessity has required it, they have defended themselves against constantly recurring incursions of hostile Indians. History testifies that they were always the first to rally around the standard of the new country of their adoption in defense of its honor and sovereignty. They have spent during that period in their own defense over $1,000,000 on account of organized militia, and sustained losses on account of Indian depredations aggregating some $5,000,000.

During the late rebellion, true to their natural instincts, they were loyal to the Union and fought most bravely to drive out invaders, as the bleaching bones of their dead soldiers in the scorching sands of Valverde, Glorieta, and Cañoncito to this day bear unimpeachable testimony.

The bill introduced by me in the early part of this session providing for the admission of New Mexico was merely an enabling act to permit the people of the Territory to form a State constitution under which they would be admitted to the Union. A constitution for New Mexico adopted by a convention composed almost exclusively of Republican delegates has been presented to this House, and I understand that a proposition has been placed before the Committee on Territories that New Mexico should be admitted under this constitution. In opposing such a condition to the admission of New Mexico I believe that I represent not only the wishes of all the Democratic voters of the Territory, but of more than three-fourths of its Republican voters. An act was passed by the Territorial Legislature authorizing a constitutional convention, but the apportionment of delegates to this convention was characterized by the most outrageous partisanship. The following extract from a letter by ex-Governor Edwin G. Ross to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. MANSUR], of January 5, 1890, shows the partisan nature of the apportionment of delegates and the action of the Democratic voters and Democratic central committee of New Mexico:

Primarily, that refusal was based on the exceeding unfairness of the apportionment fixed in the act of the Legislature authorizing the election of the delegates to the convention. That apportionment made it impossible for the Democrats to elect anything approaching a proportionate representation in that convention. It was so fixed with the avowed purpose, by the reputed author of the convention bill, of preventing such a representation.

Including and since the election of 1882 the popular vote of the Territory for Delegate in Congress has been Democratic by more than 1,500 majority at every election, though by reason of an equally unfair apportionment for the election of members of the Legislature (which was made the basis of the apportionment for the election of the convention), the several Legislatures have uniformly been Republican.

To illustrate that unfairness a few examples will suffice. The counties of Colfax and Mora are contiguous northern counties. At the last general election they cast, respectively, 1,680 and 2,212 votes, or an aggregate of 3,892—Democratic by majorities of 168 and 700 respectively. They were each allowed four delegates in the convention, making eight. The county of Bernalillo is Republican by 430 majority. It has a voting population of 3,564, 325 less than Colfax and Mora, yet was given ten delegates, two more than were allowed the larger number of voters in Colfax and Mora.

The Democratic county of Doña Ana, with 2,015 voters, was allowed three delegates, while the Republican county of Valencia, with 2,964 voters, was allowed six.

The Democratic county of Grant, with 2,237 voters, had three delegates, while the Republican county of Socorro, with 2,324 voters, had six.

These data were before the convention, and there can be no justification of these inequalities.

These constitute one-half of the counties and more than one-half of the population of the Territory, and fairly illustrate the character of the system of apportionment that has prevailed in the election of our Legislatures and of delegates to this constitutional convention.

To have gone into that election under such conditions would have been folly and suicidal.

The Democrats were practically and intentionally disfranchised, but, unwilling to be placed in the attitude of obstructionist until all efforts for a compromise should have failed, it was determined to seek an arrangement whereby this unjust disparity could be at least partially remedied, and they permitted, without an absolute sacrifice of self-respect, to contest the election of delegates to the convention.

Accordingly a conference between the central committees of the two political parties was asked and had.

The whole number of delegates to the convention was 73. Though in a large majority on the popular vote and believing themselves entitled to and could elect, with a fair apportionment, a corresponding majority of the delegates, the Democratic committee proposed to concede to the Republicans, as the basis of an arrangement under which they would consent to go into the election, a majority of 5 in the convention.

That more than fair proposition was rejected by the Republican committee, and it was then determined to take no part in the election.

At the last election for Delegate to Congress a vote of nearly 32,000 was polled. At the election for delegates to the constitutional convention so great was the disapprobation of the people for the methods used in calling this constitutional convention, which should have been as free from partisanship as possible, that the total vote for delegates was but little in excess of 7,000.

The constitution as adopted contains numerous provisions which might be acceptable to the people of New Mexico if adopted by a convention properly representing them; but in the apportionment of the new State Legislature therein provided for the same partisanship as described in the letter of Governor Ross, just quoted, prevails. If the Territory should be admitted as a State under this constitution, the wishes of the popular majority would not be expressed by the Legislature which should be elected under this partisan apportionment. My own county of Taos is by a large proportion in excess of the adjoining county of Rio Arriba. The former has a Democratic majority and the latter a Republican. Under the system adopted by this constitutional convention the former county, although greater in population, has but two representatives in the lower house of the Legislature, while the latter, in consideration of the politics of its citizens, is given three.

The framers of this constitution knew so well that it could not receive the approbation of a majority of the voters of the Territory that they made no provision in it nor has the Legislature since made any provision for its submission to the people. A popular vote upon it would disclose that the people would not submit to having a constitution foisted upon them under which the Legislature would wholly fail to represent the popular will. Out of 32,000 voters in New Mexico, but 7,000 participated in the election of delegates to this constitutional convention. The remaining 25,000 voters had no part in the formation of this constitution.

If an enabling act be passed, the people of the Territory will be united in the election of a constitutional convention which will frame a constitution in substantial accord with the wishes of all the people. Such an enabling act should provide for an apportionment of the delegates to the constitutional convention in accordance with the number of votes cast at the last Congressional election, the largest polled at any election in the Territory. In this way the whole people of New Mexico will be represented in proportion to their numbers and the constitution adopted will be a true expression of the popular will.

Mr. SPRINGER. I now yield for five minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUCKALEW].

Mr. BUCKALEW. Mr. Speaker, disguise it as gentlemen may, this Idaho constitution, in the provision which has been debated, outlaws the Mormon membership in that Territory from suffrage, from the privilege of holding office, and from serving on juries. For it provides that any person who belongs to a church to which is imputed a doctrine holding bigamy to be permissible from a religious point of view, and any person who contributes to a church with such assumed opinion, shall be excluded from suffrage, from office, and from jury service.

If this is not in violation of the principles which we suppose were fundamental in all our constitutions from one ocean to the other, I do not know what could be.

Now, sir, the act of Congress which defined for the Territories the sentiments of the law-making power of the United States provided simply that a preliminary oath should be required from a man seeking to vote; and that oath was that he had not broken the law of Congress, that he would not break it in the future, and that he would not encourage or assist others to break it.

That was a legitimate oath, and under it the great mass of members of the Mormon church in Utah have been voters, and are now voters, accepted as such under the Constitution and laws of the United States.

It is not true, therefore, that this constitution proposed for Idaho follows the same line that Congress traveled before for the repression of bigamy in the Territories of the United States. The departure from the statute is fundamental and complete. The constitution outlaws without trial, without hearing, without judgment, all members of that odious church (odious to other churches and odious to public sentiment in general), because of its former practices which the United States undertook to correct, and which in the main, and substantially as a prospective regulation, has been accomplished by that law.

If I had time I would read what has been done in my own State. Why, sir, at the date of the Revolution there were but three States with complete religious toleration, and they were the States founded by Roger Williams and William Penn, the States of Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, and Delaware, in which there was no obligation in their civil institutions or laws resting upon the citizen to belong to a religious society or to contribute in any manner, directly or indirectly, to any religious church, an obligation which to a greater or less extent prevailed elsewhere in all the colonies. And in the State convention of 1776, when the provision in regard to holding office was proposed requiring belief in the New Testament for a seat in the General Assembly, Benjamin Franklin opposed it, but being overborne he succeeded in grafting an amendment on the provision that no other test except that for members of the Assembly should be recognized as a qualification for office.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. BUCKALEW. A moment longer.

Mr. SPRINGER. I will yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania a minute longer.

Mr. BUCKALEW. Fourteen years afterwards the Franklin doctrine went into the constitution of Pennsylvania, in condemnation of such propositions as that which the House is called upon to support in this bill.

[Here the hammer fell.]

CITATIONS ADDED.

"The revolution changed the relation of the religious denominations to the State. In New England, Congregationalism was the established religion, and every citizen was required to aid in the support of some church. In all the southern colonies the Episcopal Church was equally favored, and partially so in New York and New Jersey. Only in Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and Delaware were all the Protestant sects on an equality as to their religious rights."—Fulton's History United States, 523.

Constitution of Pennsylvania, Article I, § 3: "No human authority can, in any case whatever, control or interfere with the rights of conscience, and no preference shall ever be given to any religious establishment or modes of worship."

"§ 4. No person who acknowledges the being of a God and a future state of rewards and punishments shall, on account of his religious sentiments, be disqualified to hold any office or place of trust or profit under this Commonwealth."

Mr. SPRINGER. I yield seven minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES].

Mr. OATES. Mr. Speaker, the Edmunds-Tucker law, passed by Congress some years ago, which prescribed a test oath for suffrage in Utah, received my vote and sanction for the reason that I believed it in order to extirpate polygamy and bigamy some such strong measure was necessary, and that law has practically, as I am informed, dug up that evil by the roots.

The constitution which Idaho presents for our consideration in the provision regarding suffrage and other rights of the citizen goes a step further, and without conviction disfranchises or denies the right to vote and sit on a jury to those who will not, in addition to swearing that they are not polygamists nor believers or teachers of polygamist practices, swear that they do not belong to any church where such doctrines are taught.

It is well known that there are Mormons who do not advocate plural marriage or polygamist practices. These men belong to the same church where some others do teach and practice a different polygamy or celestial marriage, just as we know that in other denominations all over the country there are differences of opinion; and, that being true, is it quite fair and right to disfranchise those who may belong to a church where such doctrines are taught by others or where other members of such churches may be guilty of such practices? I would have them all disfranchised after conviction and would favor a test oath for registration similar to that contained in the Edmunds-Tucker law.

In the main, however, this is a good constitution, and the bill for the admission of this State is comparatively free from objection. There is one other section in the constitution to which I wish to call the attention of the House, and which I regard as very objectionable, and that is in regard to compulsory education. I refer to section 9, article 9 of the constitution, which reads:

SEC. 9. The Legislature may require by law that every child of sufficient mental and physical ability shall attend the public school throughout the period between the ages of six and eighteen years for a time equivalent to three years, unless educated by other means.

I regard this as quite objectionable. In the short time, however, at my disposal, Mr. Speaker, I can not state at length my objections to compulsory education, but I desire further to call the attention of the House just here to the fact that the elections in Milwaukee, Wis., the other day turned right on this point. The Bennett law provided for compulsory education and that English should be taught in the schools. I think it quite proper to require the English language to be taught in the public schools, but the feature making education compulsory is, in my judgment, un-American and undemocratic; it is an importation from Germany or from China, and incompatible with our free institutions, and the popular verdict the other day so declared in the case I have just cited. That feature, therefore, I regard as a most objectionable one in this Constitution, and Republican members here must take the responsibility of indorsing it. But in many respects this is a most acceptable constitution.

I have not time now to refer to the features in detail which I think are good, but I wish specially to commend the good sense of the people in the construction of the judicial department of this constitution, especially for the embodiment of a provision which strikes down the foolish distinction between law and equity and provides for a speedy determination of causes and the administration of justice to the people.

Besides the two objections I have pointed out there is the unfair advantage which the Republican side of this House takes in bringing in as a State this Territory under an apportionment contained in the constitution which will surely enable the Republicans to make their Legislature Republican and thereby add two more Senators to the majority they now have in the Senate. I do not think it fair to bring in as States the smallest Territories because they are Republican, while keeping out Utah, New Mexico, and Arizona because they are Democratic. But as I am in favor of admitting Idaho freed from the objections named, I will not vote against her, and yet I can not vote for her, and expect to withhold my vote.

Mr. SPRINGER. I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. MCADOO].

Mr. MCADOO. Mr. Speaker, I am substantially in favor of the admission of Idaho as a State. It has not, it is true, as large a population as I think a Territory ought to have to become a State of the Union, but the population is much larger than some which have been already admitted, and the Territory has many of the material advantages that go to make a successful State.

I am much opposed to the polygamist practices and the polity of the Mormons as any man can be. I believe the polygamist feature, if admitted, would undermine our entire civilization, which is based fundamentally on the union of one man and one woman, in such a relationship as makes them as a family the true unit in the state. But, Mr. Speaker, the provision of the constitution now under consideration, which discourages and discountenances Mormonism, in my opinion has gone entirely beyond the evil that it seeks to eradicate, and has invaded the domain of religious belief.

I make this point, that the best and only test of loyalty to the State is obedience to the law, not the opinion of the citizens about the law.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MCADOO. I have but five minutes, but will yield for a question.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Can a man claim to be obedient to the law while teaching a violation of the law?

Mr. MCADOO. I say the only test of loyalty to the State is obedience to the law.

Now, in the familiar passage in the New Testament where our Savior takes the coin which is handed to him, and, in response to the query whether tribute should be paid to Caesar, replies, "Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's, and unto God the things which are God's," he teaches absolute obedience to the civil authority, although at that time all the teachings of the Christian religion were opposed to the basic elements of the government of the Roman Empire. The opinions of the Savior and his teachings did not coincide with the mandates of the emperors or the customs and laws of the empire; but obedience to the law was promulgated as a fundamental tenet of Christianity.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there is one clause in this constitution to which I wish to call attention. I am loath to believe that the framers intended it to apply to anybody but the Mormons; but it is manifestly capable of a construction which would apply to other religious denominations as well as to the Mormons. I mean the provision which declares that any man who expresses the belief or encourages any organization which teaches that there is a higher law than the law of the State shall be disfranchised. One of the most memorable and historic bodies of theologians and laymen that ever met was the Westminster body of divines; and my friend from Iowa will admit what I say in regard to that. They held their session from 1643 to 1648, beginning with the regicide and continuing under the Parliament, and formulated that most memorable confession of the Christian faith of that particular sect; a body of men who, after a debate which arrested the attention of the kingdom and the Parliament and which engaged the ablest minds of that most illustrious body of scholars and divines, formulated this as their theory of the relationship of the church to the state:

The Lord Jesus Christ, as King and head of His church, has therein appointed a government in the hands of church officers, distinct from the civil magistracy.

Now, I ask my friend whether a man who belongs to a church like that—the Presbyterian Church of to-day—in this coming State is not inhibited by this constitution from casting his vote where it is distinctly set down that the church government is in its own legitimate sphere sovereign and independent of the government of the State, so far, at least, as belief is concerned.

I am sorry that this one sentence found its way into this constitution, because I am heartily in favor of the admission of new States under proper constitutions. I was in favor of the Edmunds bill, for which I voted, to exterminate the vicious and un-American features of Mormonism; but in this constitution you have gone too far. You have placed power in the hands of those who are to administer the laws of the new State that can be used for despotic purposes, and which can infringe upon the conscience and belief as well as on the action of men in this new State. It does not matter what a man's opinion of the law of the State is; but the question is, does he obey it? Why, there are gentlemen on this side of the House who think that the present tariff laws are infamous and ought not to remain on the statute-books for a moment; but they do not turn smugglers because of that. And, as I said, the test of loyalty to the law is obedience to it. We deal with overt acts, not opinions. Let us keep church and state absolutely separate. The bigotry of religious controversies is not part of our politics. We have no kings or queens who claim divine right to have dominion of affairs, spiritual as well as temporal. Religion rules by love, and not by act of Congress.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, the position of this side of the House with reference to this bill seems to be very much misunderstood by gentlemen who have addressed the House on the other side so far upon this subject. The minority of the Committee on Territories have proposed certain amendments which we will ask the House to vote upon, and in these amendments we have formulated the position which the Democratic party of this House has assumed with reference to this bill. I hope gentlemen will give attention to these amendments, so that they may understand the position that this side of the House has taken and will ask Congress to take in regard to this bill.

I have not opposed the admission of Idaho into the Union. I do not now oppose her admission into the Union under a proper constitution and in a proper way. During the last Congress I had the honor to report a bill for the admission of this Territory into the Union as a State. I regret very much that that bill did not pass at that time. If the provisions of that bill could be applied to Idaho now I would heartily support this bill; but gentlemen have seen fit to frame a bill in such a way and with such provisions as to secure partisan advantage instead of such legislation as should be enacted by Congress with a view of bringing a State into the Union.

The first amendment proposed by the minority of the Committee on Territories strikes out the first and second sections of the pending bill, which sections admit Idaho into the Union at once with the constitution already made, and provides for calling another convention by delegates elected at an election called in pursuance of an act of Congress, which will frame a constitution and submit it to the votes of the people, as was done in the cases of the two Dakotas, Washington, and Montana by the last Congress.

I do not need to state to the House, for the fact is well understood, that there was no law of Congress or of the Territorial Legislature which authorized the calling of a constitutional convention in the Territory of Idaho. The governor, upon his own motion, issued a proclamation calling for an election of delegates to a constitutional convention and divided the Territory into certain districts. This convention was held without any authority of law, and any one could have voted at that time without having been subject to any penalty or punishment for illegal voting. Any fraud could have been committed and nobody prosecuted for it. There is, as I said on the Wyoming bill, no precedent in the legislation of this country for a case of this kind, and there being no precedent for it, there being no good reason for such a course, the minority of the committee insist that there should be another convention held there, and that that convention should be held in pursuance of law.

Now, what are the qualifications of the delegates in that convention by the amendment which we propose? They are such as are required of members of the Territorial Legislature of Idaho. Gentlemen upon the other side have said that we desire to admit bigamists and polygamists to the exercise of the elective franchise and to hold office. On the contrary, this amendment provides that the laws of Idaho shall govern as to the qualifications of the voter and of the officials; and gentlemen know what these laws provide. I will call attention to that subsequently. They not only prohibit bigamy and polygamy and polygamous cohabitation, but they prohibit belonging to or contributing to any organization that encourages such practices. But there is incorporated in the amendment a provision which is contained in the Edmunds act passed by the Forty-seventh Congress, and the oath prescribed by the Tucker-Edmunds act passed in the Forty-ninth Congress. When those acts passed this House I voted for them, and I stand by that vote to-day, and I only ask gentlemen that they shall apply those laws to Idaho.

What is that provision? If you will turn to the Tucker-Edmunds act you will find in the twenty-fourth section the oath prescribed there applied only to Utah. But these amendments we propose shall apply to the voters in Idaho as well, the principle having been laid down by Congress. The act of March 3, 1887, provides that as a condition precedent to the right to vote at any election in the Territory of Utah every male person of twenty-one years of age shall take and subscribe to an oath or affirmation before the registering officer of each precinct that he is of proper age, etc. And, further, in such oath or affirmation he shall state his full name and place of business; his status, whether single or married, and, if married, the name of his lawful wife, and that he will support the Constitution of the United States, faithfully obey the laws, and especially to obey the law of Congress approved March 22, 1882, entitled "An act to amend section 5352 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in reference to bigamy, and for other purposes."

The voter in Idaho is to take the same oath under the amendment which this committee proposes that was prescribed by Congress for the Mormons in Utah.

Mr. STRUBLE. I beg the gentleman's pardon. Does not that act contain a provision applying it to all the Territories?

Mr. SPRINGER. The act prescribing the oath does not.

Mr. STRUBLE. But the act.

Mr. SPRINGER. The Edmunds act was to apply to all the Territories. That was passed on the 22d day of March, 1882.

Mr. STRUBLE. That is the one I had in mind.

Mr. SPRINGER. That act applied to all the Territories; and section 8 of the Edmunds act, approved March 22, 1882, provides—

That no polygamist, bigamist, or any person cohabiting with more than one woman, and no woman cohabiting with any of the persons described as aforesaid in this section, in any Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, shall be entitled to vote at any election held in any such Territory or other place, or be eligible for election or appointment to or be entitled to hold any office or place of public trust, honor, or emolument in, under, or for any such Territory or place, or under the United States.

That was the law passed in 1882, known as the Edmunds act, and that is the law which applies to all the Territories. I call the attention of gentlemen now to the proviso in the ninth section of that act, which applies to Utah only, which says that—

Said board—

The board of registration, composed of five persons—shall not exclude any person, otherwise eligible to vote, from the polls on account of any opinion such person may entertain on the subject of bigamy or polygamy, nor shall they refuse to count any such vote on account of the opinion of the person casting it on the subject of bigamy or polygamy.

Thus it will be seen that by the Edmunds act itself the exclusion of persons from voting because of their opinions on the subject of bigamy or polygamy was expressly prohibited.

In 1887, on the 3d of March, Congress passed what is known as the Tucker-Edmunds act, in which was prescribed the oath to which I have already called attention. Therein the voter was required to swear that he would obey this act "in respect to the crimes by said act defined" and that he would not aid or abet, counsel or advise any other person to commit any of said crimes. That is the oath prescribed by this amendment, and the distinction between the oath prescribed in the amendment submitted by the minority of the committee and the provision of the Idaho constitution is this: By the Tucker-Edmunds act this oath which we have made applicable to future elections in the Territory relates to acts committed, and not to opinions; while under the Idaho constitution, as avowed by its friends and supporters upon this floor, every person who belongs to the Mormon Church, every person whether he belongs to that church or not, if he contributes to its support, is excluded from voting. He may be a Gentile, but if he contributes to the support of that church in any way, even by dropping a nickel in the contribution box, he is disfranchised.

That is the difference, a difference which amounts in practice to this: that, while the Tucker-Edmunds law is enforced in Utah, 90 per cent. of the adult members of the Mormon Church vote at every election in the Territory, but under this provision of the Idaho constitution not one of the members of the Mormon Church in Idaho will be allowed to vote. The Tucker-Edmunds act does not disfranchise 10 per cent. of the voters in Utah; the Idaho constitution would disfranchise 100 per cent. of the Mormon voters in Idaho, the entire vote. Yet gentlemen say they can not see any difference between the two. The gentleman from Vermont [Mr. STEWART] says they seem to be about the same thing, and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PERKINS] could scarcely see any difference between them, but thought they were in the same line and had the same object in view. The difference is in the practical point to which I have called the attention of the House, and practical results are what gentlemen are looking to, or ought to be looking to, in legislating here.

By the Idaho constitution you disfranchise every Mormon in that Territory, while by the Tucker-Edmunds act, I repeat, not to exceed 10 per cent. of the Mormons in Utah, the Territory to which that act applied, were disfranchised. So much for the first amendment which we propose. That amendment requires that this Tucker-Edmunds oath shall be taken by every person who is to vote for delegates or for the ratification of the constitution. When the constitution is framed in pursuance of that law, then it is to be submitted to a vote of the people, and, if ratified, Idaho will come into the Union; and, under the operation of this amendment, Idaho could be here at the next session of Congress with her two Senators and her Representative upon this floor.

Mr. MOREY. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SPRINGER. For a question, but not for a speech.

Mr. MOREY. I wish to ask the gentleman to give the language of the proposed amendment which would require the taking of the Tucker-Edmunds test oath.

Mr. SPRINGER. If the gentleman will turn to page 2996 of the RECORD he will find it. It is this:

Provided, That if any elector in said Territory who may offer to register as a voter or to vote at said election shall be challenged on the ground that he is a bigamist or a polygamist, or is living in what is known as patriarchal, plural, or celestial marriage, or in violation of any law of Idaho or of the United States forbidding any such crime, or who, in any manner, teaches, advises, counsels, aids, or encourages any person to enter into bigamy, polygamy, or such patriarchal, plural, or celestial marriage, or to live in violation of any such law, or to commit any such crime, or who is a member of or contributes to the support, aid, or encouragement of any order, organization, association, corporation, or society which teaches, advises, counsels, encourages, or aids any person to enter into bigamy, polygamy, or such patriarchal or plural marriage, or which teaches or advises that the laws of Idaho prescribing rules of civil conduct are not the supreme law of the Territory, it shall be the duty of one of the judges of the registration or of the election, where such elector is challenged, to tender him the oath prescribed in section 24 of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1867, known as the anti-polygamy act, with such modification only as is necessary in order to comply with the laws of the Territory of Idaho in respect to his residence therein; and if such elector shall take and subscribe said oath so modified, his vote shall be received and counted at such election.

Mr. MOREY. Is that in the minority report?

Mr. SPRINGER. It is in the amendment submitted by the minority, but not in the pamphlet which the gentleman holds in his hand.

Mr. STRUBLE. It is an amendment submitted since the views of the minority were filed, I understand.

Mr. SPRINGER. Yes, sir. Now, if that amendment should be voted down and if gentlemen refuse to have a convention called in pursuance of law in the manner I have pointed out, another amendment is suggested which provides that this constitution itself, which has been framed by the Idaho convention, shall be submitted for ratification or rejection by the people of that Territory, and that at such election the same oath shall be prescribed to which I have called attention. So that there is no effort here to keep Idaho out of the Union. The object is simply to treat Idaho the same as we have treated the other Territories.

Another amendment goes further than either of these and prescribes that the Territorial Legislature shall accept the principle that no person shall be deprived of the right to vote on account of crime, unless conviction has preceded the disfranchisement, except where conviction prior to election would be impossible. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PERKINS] assumes that because in a case of polygamy or bigamy we insist upon conviction prior to disfranchisement therefore we are in favor of polygamy and bigamy. For the same reason the gentleman from Kansas is in favor of treason and murder and felony and bribery. This constitution of Idaho provides in section 3 that—

No person is permitted to vote, serve as a juror, or hold any civil office who is under guardianship, idiotic, or insane, or who has at any place been convicted of treason, felony, subornation of the public funds, bartering or selling or offering to barter or sell his vote, or purchasing or offering to purchase the vote of another, or other infamous crime, and who has not been restored to the rights of citizenship.

So that in regard to treason, which is the highest crime known to the law, you do not, under this Idaho constitution, undertake to disfranchise a man until he has been convicted of the crime. That is the provision of this constitution, and that is the law in nearly every State in the Union, that conviction for an infamous offense must precede disfranchisement on account of that offense. Now, under this constitution of Idaho, if a man has been arrested for murder, or for arson, or for the most heinous offense known to the law, he may at any time prior to conviction, even while he is out under bail, go to the polls and vote. No crime is too heinous to prevent a man from going to the polls and voting under such circumstances prior to conviction, but, if he is even suspected of belonging to the Mormon Church or of contributing to its support, then he is to be disfranchised without being convicted!

Gentlemen assume that it is a very difficult matter to convict a person of the crime of bigamy or polygamy. Why, gentlemen, these are the easiest crimes in the world to be proven. A man may conceal stolen money or other property, but he can not conceal his wife; he can not conceal his children.

Mr. STRUBLE. He may have so many wives that he can not get around very often so as to be identified with the cohabitation. [Laughter.]

Mr. SPRINGER. He will not have so many wives that the officers of the law will not find them. If a United States marshal in Idaho is so blind that he can not find a Mormon's wives or his children when the fees are tempting him to institute prosecutions all along the line, he certainly can not be very much in favor of the enforcement of the law. With public sentiment condemning these offenses and the offenses themselves the easiest thing in the world to be proved, it is not unreasonable to insist that you must convict a man before, on the ground of such offenses, you deprive him of so sacred a right as the elective franchise.

So much for these amendments. I desire now to call attention to the partisan character of this Idaho constitution. As soon as it was known to the country that the Republican party had elected a majority in both branches of Congress and also the President of the United States, the party leaders began to make arrangements for increasing their representation in the Senate, and this movement in Wyoming and in Idaho was started for the purpose of securing two Republican Senators from each of these States, so that they may be already installed when the Democratic party shall again come into power, as it will in the next Congress, and when it shall, as I believe it will, carry the next Presidential election. It will then desire to repeal some of the laws that have been passed by this Republican Congress, to reduce the tariff, to monetize silver, to respond to the wishes of the people in putting down "trusts" and other monopolies; but according to the scheme adopted by the Republican party the monopolists will then be entrenched in the Senate so that the Democrats will be unable to pass their measures.

Mr. STRUBLE. Have you not recently had six years for that kind of work?

Mr. SPRINGER. No, sir; there has never been a time since the war when the Democratic party has been in power in both branches of Congress and has at the same time had the President of the United States.

Mr. STRUBLE. You had a very good opportunity in this House, but you did not do very much in those lines.

Mr. SPRINGER. You were obstructionists then and would not let us do anything. [Laughter.]

Mr. BREWER. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him two questions?

Mr. SPRINGER. I can not yield now.

Mr. BREWER. They shall be direct questions.

Mr. SPRINGER. Very well; direct them.

Mr. BREWER. The only objection you have to the admission of Idaho, as I understand, is on account of this clause relating to the disfranchisement of Mormons?

Mr. SPRINGER. Oh, no; I have a great many objections; if the gentleman will permit me I will at once state another.

Mr. BREWER. Let me ask the other question.

Mr. SPRINGER. I prefer the gentleman should wait.

Mr. BREWER. If the admission of this Territory had been brought here in connection with the admission of New Mexico and Arizona in an "omnibus bill," such as the gentleman desired, would he not have waived all the objections he now urges?

Mr. SPRINGER. If the omnibus bill were such as I have proposed, I would favor the passage of the bill. But I should oppose the admission of New Mexico with any such provision in her constitution as this Idaho constitution contains.

I desire to call attention to some other provisions of this constitution.

This statehood movement was controlled, as I have said, in the interest of perpetuating the power of the Republican party in the Senate of the United States.

I ask gentlemen to look at this Idaho constitution and see the apportionment that has been made for the election of the first Legislature. I have seen a great many apportionment bills which were denominated "gerrymanders;" but this one is the most stupendous fraud of the kind that I have ever seen. Gentlemen will scarcely believe the facts; but I have the figures here to prove the truth of what I will state.

The following is the official vote of Idaho by counties, taken from Spofford's Almanac of 1889, page 208 (the county of Alturas has, since November, 1888, been divided into three counties, as stated below):

Idaho.—Official vote for Delegate, November, 1888.

Counties.	Dubois (Republican).	Hawley (Democrat).	Buck (Independent).
Ada .....	1,008	661
Alturas .....
Logan .....	1,613	1,133
Elmore .....
Bear Lake .....	82	532
Bingham .....	781	635
Boise .....	478	371
Cassia .....	201	213
Custer .....	563	234
Idaho .....	255	365	58
Kootenai .....	269	278	66
Latah .....	341	267	864
Lemhi .....	494	269
Nez Percé .....	494	155	631
Oneida .....	253	87
Owyhee .....	301	171
Shoshone .....	1,833	737	35
Washington .....	433	326	4
Totals .....	8,151	6,404	1,458

The following is the population of the Territory of Idaho, 1880, as estimated in the report of the governor to the Secretary of the Interior:

Population of Idaho, 1889.

Counties.	Population.	Counties.	Population.
Ada .....	11,275	Latah .....	11,250
Alturas .....	3,300	Lemhi .....	5,500
Bear Lake .....	5,900	Logan .....	6,300
Bingham .....	14,773	Nez Percé .....	5,200
Boisé .....	4,900	Oneida .....	6,900
Cassia .....	4,500	Owyhee .....	4,000
Custer .....	4,900	Shoshone .....	9,500
Elmore .....	4,500	Washington .....	5,700
Idaho .....	2,879
Kootenai .....	2,500	Total .....	113,777

The following is the provision of the Idaho constitution under which the first Legislature is to be elected, and subsequent Legislatures until otherwise provided:

ARTICLE XIX.

Apportionment.

SECTION 1. Until otherwise provided by law the apportionment of the two houses of the Legislature shall be as follows:

The first senatorial district shall consist of the county of Shoshone, and shall elect two senators.

The second shall consist of the counties of Kootenai and Latah, and shall elect one senator.

The third shall consist of the counties of Nez Percé and Idaho, and shall elect one senator.

The fourth shall consist of the counties of Nez Percé and Latah, and shall elect one senator.

The fifth shall consist of the county of Latah, and shall elect one senator.

The sixth shall consist of the county of Boise, and shall elect one senator.

The seventh shall consist of the county of Custer, and shall elect one senator.

The eighth shall consist of the county of Lemhi, and shall elect one senator.

The ninth shall consist of the county of Logan, and shall elect one senator.

The tenth shall consist of the county of Bingham, and shall elect one senator.

The eleventh shall consist of the counties of Bear Lake, Oneida, and Bingham, and shall elect one senator.

The twelfth shall consist of the counties of Owyhee and Cassia, and shall elect one senator.

The thirteenth shall consist of the county of Elmore, and shall elect one senator.

The fourteenth shall consist of the county of Alturas, and shall elect one senator.

The fifteenth shall consist of the county of Ada, and shall elect two senators.

The sixteenth shall consist of the county of Washington, and shall elect one senator.

SEC. 2. The several counties shall elect the following members of the house of representatives:

The county of Ada, three members.
The counties of Ada and Elmore, one member.
The county of Alturas, two members.
The county of Boise, two members.
The county of Bear Lake, one member.
The county of Bingham, three members.
The county of Cassia, one member.
The county of Custer, two members.
The county of Elmore, one member.
The county of Idaho, one member.
The counties of Idaho and Nez Percé, one member.
The county of Kootenai, one member.
The county of Latah, two members.
The counties of Kootenai and Latah, one member.
The county of Logan, two members.
The county of Lemhi, two members.
The county of Nez Percé, one member.
The county of Oneida, one member.
The county of Owyhee, one member.
The county of Shoshone, four members.
The county of Washington, two members.
The counties of Bingham, Logan, and Alturas, one member.

In this constitution the Republican leaders have so gerrymandered the districts for the senate and house of representatives of Idaho as to perpetuate the power of the Republican party in that State indefinitely. I will show how this is done. According to this apportionment, based upon the vote for Delegate in 1888, which I will print in the RECORD, the senate of Idaho at its first session will consist of 15 Republicans and 3 Democrats. That is the State senate. I will print in the RECORD the representation of each county under this apportionment, both for the senate and house of representatives:

Senate of Idaho as it will stand at the first election under the constitution, according to the vote for Delegate in 1888.

Districts.	Counties.	Republican.	Democratic.
First .....	Shoshone .....	2
Second .....	Kootenai and Latah .....	1
Third .....	Nez Percé and Idaho .....		1
Fourth .....	Nez Percé and Latah .....		1
Fifth .....	Latah .....	1
Sixth .....	Boisé .....	1
Seventh .....	Custer .....	1
Eighth .....	Lemhi .....	1
Ninth .....	Logan .....	1
Tenth .....	Bingham .....	1
Eleventh .....	Bear Lake, Oneida, and Bingham .....		1
Twelfth .....	Owyhee and Cassia .....	1

Senate of Idaho as it will stand at the first election, etc.—Continued.

Districts.	Counties.	Republican.	Democratic.
Thirteenth .....	Elmore .....	1
Fourteenth .....	Alturas .....	1
Fifteenth .....	Ada .....	2
Sixteenth .....	Washington .....	1
		15	3

* By 2 majority—864 votes were cast for Buck in Latah. This district is therefore doubtful.

House of Representatives.

Districts.	Counties.	Republican.	Democratic.
First .....	Ada .....	3
Second .....	Ada and Elmore .....	1
Third .....	Alturas .....	2
Fourth .....	Boisé .....	2
Fifth .....	Bear Lake .....		1
Sixth .....	Bingham .....	3
Seventh .....	Cassia .....		1
Eighth .....	Custer .....	2
Ninth .....	Elmore .....	1
Tenth .....	Idaho .....		1
Eleventh .....	Idaho and Nez Percé .....		1
Twelfth .....	Kootenai .....		1
Thirteenth .....	Latah .....	2
Fourteenth .....	Kootenai and Latah .....	1
Fifteenth .....	Logan .....	2
Sixteenth .....	Lemhi .....	2
Seventeenth .....	Nez Percé .....	1
Eighteenth .....	Oneida .....	1
Nineteenth .....	Owyhee .....	1
Twentieth .....	Shoshone .....	4
Twenty-first .....	Washington .....	2
Twenty-second .....	Bingham, Logan, and Alturas .....	1
	Total house .....	31	5
	Total senate .....	15	3
	Total on joint ballot .....	46	8

The house of representatives, under this apportionment based upon the vote for delegates in 1888, will consist, as will be seen, of 31 Republicans and 5 Democrats. On joint ballot the Republicans will have 46 members and the Democrats 8.

Mr. STRUBLE. Does not that result from the scarcity of Democrats, rather than from any inequality in the arrangement of the districts?

Mr. SPRINGER. No, sir; it results from the ingenuity with which this apportionment has been drawn. See how cunningly these districts have been divided. It is provided, for instance, that in the second senatorial district the counties of Kootenai and Latah shall elect one senator. The fourth district consists of the counties of Nez Percé and Latah; the fifth consists of the county of Latah by itself. All through, as will be seen, these counties are interwoven with each other, dovetailed together, so as to make them almost unanimously Republican.

Let me call attention to another fact. It will require 1,280 Democrats to secure one member of the house of representatives in Idaho under this constitution and 2,168 Democrats to elect one senator; while 263 Republicans will be able to elect one representative and 543 to elect one senator. There were 8,151 votes cast for the republican candidate for Delegate in 1888 and 6,404 votes for the Democratic candidate. The 8,151 Republican votes will be represented in the senate by fifteen senators, one senator for every 543 Republican votes; and every 263 Republican votes will be represented by one representative.

But the 6,404 voters will be represented by only three senators and five representatives; that is, it will require 2,165 Democrats to elect one senator and 1,280 Democrats to elect one representative. In other words, in the election of State senators 543 Republicans will equal 2,168 Democrats, and in the election of members of the lower house of the Legislature 263 Republicans will equal 1,280 Democrats, or in constituting the senate of Idaho one Republican equals four Democrats, and in the house of representatives one Republican equals nearly five Democrats.

I will give some example to show how this was brought about. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. STRUBLE] suggests that it was the scarcity of Democrats. The figures do not support that assertion. In Shoshone County, which is Republican, with a population of 9,500, four members are allowed by this apportionment in the house of representatives. In Democratic Bear Lake, with 5,900 population, only one member is allowed. In Democratic Cassia, with a population of 4,500, only one member is allowed or two members for a Democratic population of 10,400, while Shoshone County with 9,500, or 900 less, has four representatives in the Legislature. That was not due to scarcity of Democrats, but to a plentiful supply of Republican ingenuity and gerrymandering skill. And in Republican Custer, with a population of 4,900, two members are allowed, while in Democratic Bear Lake, with 5,900, only one member is allowed. Although Bear Lake has a thousand more population than Republican Custer it has only one representative in the Legislature. Republican Lemhi, with a population of 5,500, has two members. It has a population of 400 less than Democratic Bear Lake, and yet it has one representative more in the Legislature.

Thus we see by the ingenuity of the Republican bosses who formulated this constitution they have not only suppressed votes of 4,500 Mormons, who it is alleged would vote the Democratic ticket, but they have suppressed by a constitutional gerrymander more than half the Democratic party of the Territory who are Gentiles and were never even suspected of being in sympathy with Mormons.

Mr. DORSEY. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. SPRINGER. I will yield to a question.

Mr. DORSEY. Has any Gentile Democrat of Idaho complained of this constitution?

Mr. SPRINGER. No, sir; not that I know of.

Mr. DORSEY. Any made objection to it?

Mr. SPRINGER. No, sir; not to me.

Mr. DORSEY. Are not the Democrats in Idaho rather in favor of this constitution?

Mr. SPRINGER. I believe they are. I believe they are in favor of it because they would rather live in a Republican State than in a Republican Territory. That is the only difference with them. I want to acquit the Democrats of that Territory, however, from any responsibility for this legislative apportionment.

Mr. STRUBLE. It does not seem to have troubled them much.

Mr. SPRINGER. They will thank me for exposing these provisions by which half of their votes have been suppressed under this iniquitous apportionment.

Years ago the Republican party dismembered Virginia and created two States out of the Old Dominion. But the State of Virginia is now represented in the Senate by Democrats, and has been from that day up to this, with the exception of a very few years.

Mr. STRUBLE. But they have been coming to the Republican column all the time.

Mr. SPRINGER. I want to remind you gentlemen on the other side of the fact that you "but teach bloody instructions, which, being taught, will return to plague the inventors." This Idaho disfranchisement and partisan apportionment will return to plague you in the future. You will be required to confront these measures hereafter; and I want to predict now that those you disfranchise in Idaho will qualify under this constitution and demand the right of voting; and I believe you concede that if these people vote they will vote the Democratic ticket and the Democrats will, if they should qualify, carry the State. The Legislature, of course, is absolutely hopeless unless there should be a political revolution in Idaho. You have put that under the control of the Republican party beyond question.

But this gerrymandering conspiracy is not confined to Idaho alone. Since this bill for the admission of Idaho has been under consideration I have taken occasion to examine the provisions of the bill as to the apportionment in Wyoming, for the reason that remarkable features of this Idaho apportionment induced me to examine that of Wyoming also to see whether the same line of policy had been pursued there. I have gone over the Wyoming apportionment and find that the Wyoming apportionment is a part of the same scheme. In Wyoming the State senate, under the constitutional apportionment, will contain 14 Republican senators and 2 Democrats; the house of representatives will contain 29 Republicans and 4 Democrats, or 43 Republicans on joint ballot and 6 Democrats. So much for Wyoming.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Why did they not take them all? [Laughter.]

Mr. SPRINGER. Why did not they take them all? my friend says. Well, they might as well have done so. That reminds me of an incident that occurred in Crook County in the so-called election in Wyoming for the constitution, where three men were committing fraud on the ballot-box, which in that case was in a cigar-box, and had put in 300 votes in favor of the constitution, when one remarked that he was getting tired all the time voting for one man, and he was going to put in a few votes "for the other fellow," and then voted 7 against the constitution. It was thought in this case, I suppose, that it would be too plain and palpable to deny any Democrat a right to a seat, so four were allowed to slip in.

Mr. CAREY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPRINGER. No, sir; not now.

Mr. CAREY. I only want the gentleman to yield long enough for me to state that that whole story is manufactured out of the whole cloth. There is not a word of truth in it.

Mr. SPRINGER. If you refer to the cigar-box ballot fraud, I refer you to the editor of the Sundance Gazette, upon whose authority the statement is made. But if you refer to the Wyoming apportionment, every word I have stated is the truth and I will show the record in support of it; and it was done for the purpose of securing votes enough in the Legislature to elect the gentleman to the United States Senate, and now he is trying to deny responsibility for it. [Laughter.]

Mr. CAREY. I am much obliged to the gentleman. I say it is not true, that is all.

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman may deny the truth of the cigar-box fraud—that I know nothing about, except what I find in a Wyoming newspaper. I refer him to the editor of that paper. But he will not deny what I said in reference to the Wyoming legislative apportionment. I will give the facts. The following is the official result of the election for Delegate in Wyoming, November, 1888, taken from the Albany Evening Journal Almanac for 1889:

Wyoming.—Official vote for Delegate, November, 1888.

Counties.	Carey, Republican.		Organ, Democrat.
Albany.....	1,584		1,024
Carbon.....	1,701		932
Converse.....	696		610
Crook.....	650		590
Fremont.....	499		586
Johnson.....	362		554
Laramie.....	1,928		1,767
Sheridan.....	489		386
Sweetwater.....	1,153		594
Uinta.....	1,437		690
Total.....	10,451		7,567

The following is the legislative apportionment contained in the Wyoming constitution:

Sec. 4. Until an apportionment of senators and representatives as otherwise provided by law they shall be divided among the several counties of the State in the following manner:

Albany County, two senators and five representatives.
Carbon County, two senators and five representatives.
Converse County, one senator and three representatives.
Crook County, one senator and two representatives.
Fremont County, one senator and two representatives.
Laramie County, three senators and six representatives.
Johnson County, one senator and two representatives.
Sheridan County, one senator and two representatives.
Sweetwater County, two senators and three representatives.
Uinta County, two senators and three representatives.

I have been unable to procure a statement of the estimated population of Wyoming at this time by counties, nor have I been able to procure a statement of the vote by counties on the ratification of the constitution.

Under this apportionment, based upon the vote of 1888, the senate and house of representatives of Wyoming will be constituted as follows at the first Legislature:

Apportionment of senate and house of representatives of Wyoming.

Counties.	Senate.		House.
	Rep.	Dem.	Rep.	Dem.
Albany.....	2		5
Carbon.....	2		5
Converse.....	1		3
Crook.....	1		2
Fremont.....		1		2
Laramie.....	3		6
Johnson.....		1		2
Sheridan.....	1		2
Sweetwater.....	2		3
Uintah.....	2		3
Total.....	14	2	29	4

Or, on joint ballot, 43 Republicans and 6 Democrats.

I base my calculation on the figures of the vote given at the election in 1888, when the Delegate from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY] was elected a member of this House. Now, I have no objection to the gentleman being returned as a Republican Senator, if the Republicans are to have the Senators, but I do not understand why he wanted it by such a large majority. [Laughter.] Why not let a few Democrats in?

Mr. WASHINGTON. Why not make the race interesting?

Mr. SPRINGER. Yes, as my friend here says, why not make the race interesting? Here are the figures by counties, showing how many delegates will be elected in Wyoming, and I will put them all in the RECORD. So much for that apportionment.

The gentleman from Kansas and the Delegate from Idaho desired to know whom the minority on this side represented. They said we did not represent the Democrats of Idaho and certainly that we did not represent the Republicans. We do not claim it. But we do claim to represent the people of the United States who sent us here. We represent the 5,500,000 Democrats who voted for Cleveland at the time we were elected members of this body. [Applause on the Democratic side.] And I desire to remind the gentleman that at that election 95,000 more votes were cast for Cleveland than for Harrison. [Renewed applause.] So we represent the majority of the people of the United States in protesting against this constitution. [Applause on the Democratic side.] And it seems from the returns coming from Chicago, Springfield, and other cities in Illinois, and Milwaukee—

A MEMBER. And Rochester.

Mr. SPRINGER. Yes; and Rochester, and Schenectady, that the Democratic party is not losing any ground from what it held in that election.

Mr. STRUBLE. And the Ohio gerrymandering? [Laughter.]

Mr. SPRINGER. Yes, and Ohio will help elect the Democratic ticket in 1892; and the district that the gentleman represents has gone Democratic since he was elected to the House, I believe. We represent the majority of the American people, and that majority is increasing every day, and by the time November, 1892, comes around we will be able to elect a President of the United States, who will represent the people of the country as against the minority man now representing trusts and monopolies.

Mr. PERKINS. They will be ready to do penance then for their votes now. [Laughter.]

Mr. SPRINGER. You will have to do penance. It will be for you to do penance.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman in the course of his remarks stated that the Idaho constitution only went a little further than the Tucker-Edmunds act—a little further. I have already pointed out how much further it went. It went far enough to disfranchise every man in Idaho who belonged to the Mormon Church, although he might have been a monogamist all of his life and opposed to polygamy just as much as any man on this floor, while the Tucker-Edmunds act only affected those who were actually polygamists.

The gentleman from Kansas, whom I am now glad to see in his seat, dwelt upon the word "convicted," as if the requirement of conviction in advance of disfranchisement repealed the law which prohibited polygamists from voting. Nothing of the kind. The laws stand that were passed in 1882 and 1887 on this subject, and apply to all of the Territories. We do not interfere with them. We do not propose to interfere with them; and that is the position of the Democratic side of the House on that question.

One point further, Mr. Speaker. The gentlemen on the other side of the Chamber do not claim that the Mormons in Idaho are sufficiently numerous to give them control, even if they did vote. They are not, therefore, afraid of Mormon domination. If the Mormons should vote, the Democratic party would probably secure their votes, and that party would, in that event, be able to secure a majority in the new State. The Democrats, who are allowed to vote in Idaho, it is conceded by gentlemen on the other side, are Gentiles, and have no sympathy with the Mormon Church or its doctrines. If Mormons should vote, therefore, it would not result in Mormon domination, but in Democratic rule. It is Democratic rule, then, that gentlemen on the other side are so anxious to prevent. If the Mormons in Idaho would only vote the Republican ticket there would be no provision in the Idaho constitution to disfranchise them. In Wyoming the male Mormons and their wives and daughters are allowed to vote by the constitution, which the Republicans in this House approved only a few days ago by voting for the bill to admit Wyoming into the Union as a State. The Mormons in Wyoming vote the Republican ticket. From this it appears that Mormon Democrats only are to be disfranchised. Mormonism is therefore only the pretext for disfranchisement. The real reason for disfranchisement is that the persons disfranchised are Democrats. This view is supported by the fact that I have already made clear by showing the suppression of at least half of the Gentile Democratic vote in Idaho by means of an iniquitous partisan gerrymander. If Democrats can not be disfranchised in one way they are to be suppressed in another. If Idaho can not be brought into the Union as a Republican State the Republican majority in Congress would oppose her admission and keep her in a Territorial condition indefinitely.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PAYSON). The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SPRINGER. I believe I am entitled to more time on this side.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The present occupant of the chair was advised that the gentleman had forty-three minutes; and that time has been occupied.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. Speaker, the only issue upon this bill is joined by the reports made by the majority and minority. It is upon the one question affecting the political status of the Mormons in Idaho. The contested question to be determined by the passage of the bill is whether we shall nullify in Idaho the provisions of the Edmunds bill passed in the Forty-seventh Congress and the Edmunds-Tucker bill, which passed in the Forty-ninth Congress. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] has posed as the leader of the Democratic party upon the question of admitting States into the Union. He assumes to be their leader in prescribing what shall be voted for in this and similar bills and as to what shall constitute wise legislation; he lays down the question for consideration by the House and dictates the vote of his colleagues upon the Democratic side; but therein he has utterly failed to voice the sentiment of the Democratic party in the case of any State recently admitted, certainly in the cases of Wyoming and Idaho, as I shall show by extracts from leading Democratic journals and from the evidence in the Idaho case.

The gentleman says that he represents the Democratic party. Now, everybody knows from the history of former Congresses that he misrepresented the Democratic party in all the contests prior to the admission of the two Dakotas, Montana, and Washington. I am prepared to demonstrate by very high Democratic authority that he misrepresented the Democrats of Wyoming when he opposed the bill for the admission of that State the other day. To-day he is opposing the admission of Idaho, and in every word, in every sentence, he misrepresents the views of the Democratic party of the country, and Democratic Representatives blindly follow him. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I feel it my duty to protest in the name of the great Democratic party of the country. [Laughter.]

The Democratic party does seem to have no representative here. Now, I have asserted, and will presently prove by evidence fresh from Democratic journals in the new State of Wyoming, that my distinguished friend from Illinois has misrepresented them here.

Mr. SPRINGER. Why, Mr. Speaker, he has been repudiated by the Republicans of his district since the election.

Mr. BAKER. I propose to back it up by Democratic authority, the truth of the assertions just made by me, and will quote first from the Rawlins Journal, published by John C. Friend, a Democratic official in Wyoming during the administration of President Cleveland, who writes:

A special to a Denver paper says Congressman SPRINGER is antagonizing the bill for Wyoming's admission on account of the woman suffrage or universal suffrage clause in the constitution. Mr. SPRINGER professes to be a Democrat, but unless he and other Democrats in Congress adhere to the principles of the party Wyoming, instead of being a doubtful quantity, will come in as a solid Republican State when admitted.

Now, that is the condition as to the leader of the Democratic party, and that is Democratic testimony from a high official under the late Democratic President, Mr. Cleveland. [Laughter.]

The same journal says:

There is not a Democrat in Wyoming who does not condemn the captious opposition to the statehood bill by the Democratic members of the House.

[Laughter.]

More Democratic testimony illustrating the misrepresentation and bad leadership of my kindly friend from Illinois. [Laughter.]

The Leader, the principal Democratic paper, of March 29 (and it is printed on red paper, so that it may be read even by my esteemed friend from Illinois) says:

THE PARTY VOTE.

The Leader has no apologies to offer for the Democratic members of Congress who voted against the Wyoming admission bill in the House yesterday. The Democrats of Wyoming left no stone unturned to bring about the result which was yesterday reached, and they had the best of reasons to believe that a large portion of the Democratic minority would earnestly support the measure. There is no Democrat in Wyoming who has any sympathy with the Democratic action in the House yesterday. Forced upon them, though it undoubtedly was, their action was purely partisan, and as such it deserves hearty condemnation. Wyoming people to-day, irrespective of party and purely as citizens, rejoice over their assured enfranchisement, and, thanking the General Government for past favors, hope to merit a continuance of the same.

[Laughter.]

I suppose if they have any foundation on which to build their hopes for future favors they will naturally look to the Republican party.

[Laughter.]

Mr. TURNER, of New York. They will lean on a broken reed.

Mr. BAKER. Judge Corn, an Illinois man, serving in Wyoming as judge of the supreme court, was in Washington recently, and interviewed Mr. SPRINGER. I will call attention to what he said:

The Cheyenne Leader has interviewed Judge Corn, who has recently returned from Washington, upon the subject of statehood. The judge is reported as follows:

He thinks the story of Democratic opposition to the bill is nothing but mere bluff, and feels altogether sanguine that the Wyoming enabling act will be passed. In an interview with SPRINGER, of Illinois, who was said to be opposed to the bill, Judge Corn was pleasantly disappointed to find that the matter has been misunderstood or misrepresented. Mr. SPRINGER said that two years ago he had made a favorable report from the Committee on Territories upon the admission of Wyoming, and saw no reason now why he should work against us. While he made no absolute statement that he would favor the bill, he left the impression that he certainly would do nothing to keep Wyoming out.

I admit that the gentleman did nothing to keep her out, but at the same time he tried to.

Judge Corn feels the greatest confidence that Wyoming will receive recognition at the present session of Congress.

[Laughter.]

I have also a letter from a woman in Wyoming. It is an open letter to Mr. SPRINGER, published in a leading Western journal, and ought to be spread on the record. It is as follows:

OPEN LETTER TO CONGRESSMAN SPRINGER FROM LADIES OF WYOMING.

DEAR SIR: While we have not the pleasure of your acquaintance, you assume to know us very well; but we think you have formed a wrong estimate of us in your opposition to the suffrage clause in our constitution. It is not too late before that fateful next Tuesday. We want your attention a moment. Please remember that it is by the moderation and good sense that our 1 dies have shown in this matter that we have retained the right of suffrage for over twenty years. There has been no stump-speaking, crusades, or "boodle" giving. Then when our constitutional convention met they had the chivalry and justice to seek to insure it to us under the blessings of statehood. If our own men stand by us so nobly, I can not see how it is any one else's affair. Your fear that women would be so interested in temperance as to have undue influence in the State affairs is not troubling the Wyoming German Republicans one-half so much as it is the Illinois Democrats.

Out West we believe temperance to be a moral question that should be kept out of politics.

Right is might and sure to prevail, whether women vote or not. Cheyenne and Wyoming generally boast of as good citizens among the Germans as any other nationality, and they are proud to have their rosy fräuleins stand beside them. I feel like telling Mr. SPRINGER to "Speak for yours if, John," as pretty Priscilla told John Aiden, for it looks to a disinterested observer as if you were speaking one word for the Chicago Republicans and two for yourself.

But we will let that pass and only ask you to let us try it for ourselves. If it brings disaster, we will blame only ourselves. If it proves a blessing to the Commonwealth, we can depend upon the fairness and generosity of the rest of the world to approve.

A WYOMING WOMAN.

[Laughter and applause.]

Now, then, let it be understood that not a single Democratic voice has come from Idaho against the passage of this bill. No resolution, no action from any Democratic authority, but they unanimously ask for the passage of this bill and for the approval of this constitution which they have adopted without a dissenting voice in either branch of the Idaho Legislature. These are facts which have not been disputed. So I say that my distinguished friend from Illinois as a Democratic leader is not a safe leader. You, my Democratic friends, made a mistake in voting against Wyoming. You made a mistake in voting against Montana, Washington, and the Dakotas. Do not make the mistake of voting against Idaho; because every Democrat from Idaho demands with one voice that you vote it in as we did Wyoming in spite of Democratic opposition. [Applause.]

Mr. DORSEY. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY].

Mr. CAREY. Mr. Speaker, I had supposed when the debate closed a few days ago that the Wyoming question was disposed of in this House, but the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] has taken especial delight in reading, on two different occasions, extracts from a paper published in Northeastern Wyoming, where a contest has been going on between two rival towns as to whether the county of Crook should be divided or not, and I desire to say to the gentleman that what is stated is absolutely false. I stated a few days ago, but he has reasserted it to-day. Both political parties in Wyoming are satisfied with the constitution and the manner in which it was submitted and adopted.

Mr. SPRINGER. I stated that I had taken it from the Sundance Gazette, a paper published in your Territory, and that I knew nothing about it except what was in that paper. If you want to get up a question of veracity, get it up with the editor of that paper, and not with me.

Mr. CAREY. Please give me the benefit of my two minutes.

Mr. SPRINGER. I will give the gentleman that and more, too.

Mr. CAREY. I want to recall the attention of the gentleman from Illinois now to the fact that he himself reported a bill last spring for the admission of my Territory as a State. I want to say to him further that the Democratic party in Wyoming Territory is unanimously in favor of Wyoming's admission under the constitution submitted. They are satisfied with the apportionment, they are satisfied with the suffrage clause, they are satisfied with its every provision, and nobody appears to be dissatisfied except the gentleman from Illinois.

I want to say to him, further, that he must never accuse me of bad faith in this matter, in view of his own action and conduct with reference to the Wyoming bill. It took six weeks to find out whether he proposed to file a minority report, and he did not file that report until after the bill had been under consideration in this House. I want to say to him, further, that one of his backers in his own district has sent me a telegram congratulating me on the success of the Wyoming bill in the House, a gentleman who has large interests in the West.

Mr. SPRINGER. What is his name?

Mr. CAREY. I mean De Witt Smith, one of the most honorable Democrats in your district or State. [Applause on the Republican side.] I want to say to the gentleman, further, that the people of the entire West believe that Wyoming should be relieved from its condition of vassalage, and among the letters I have received upon that subject one of the warmest and strongest has come from a gentleman by the name of Joseph K. Toole [applause], governor of Montana. Does the gentleman from Illinois know who he is?

Mr. SPRINGER. A good man.

Mr. CAREY. All the Democrats of the great West are for us. I want to say to the gentleman, further, that the monstrosity known as "minority representation," which he forced into the omnibus bill against the wishes of the new States, which put the apportionment of Montana Territory into the hands of three Democratic office-holders, two of them non-residents of Montana, has brought about all the trouble that has come upon that Territory. The apportionment of the Territory in delegate districts for the constitutional convention was no better than a piece of juggling.

Mr. SPRINGER. The Republican governor of the Territory fixed that apportionment up.

Mr. CAREY. A Republican governor had nothing to do with it.

Mr. DORSEY. I yield eight minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MOREY].

Mr. MOREY. Mr. Speaker, the right of every Territory, when it appeals for admission as a State into the Federal Union, to fix the qualifications of its voters is a conceded right. The Democratic minority of the Committee on Territories have opposed the admission of the Territory of Wyoming as a State of the Union on the ground of their opposition to the laws granting suffrage to the women of that Territory. In that Territory that right had been exercised by the women for a period of more than twenty years; so that Wyoming came here with a constitution embracing in its provisions a right which had existed there for twenty years and encountered the stern opposition of the Democratic minority of the Committee on Territories. In the case of Idaho, which is now under consideration, the provisions of the constitution in relation to suffrage have been in existence in the law of that Territory for many years, and again the opposition of that minority is encountered to the incorporation of that provision into the organic law of this proposed new State. In the one case the Democratic minority have opposed the continuance of woman suffrage, and in the other case they come here and try to strike down a provision which excludes from political power that un-American, that un-Christian system and practice of polygamy which has stood as a menace to this Government in its Territories for more than a quarter of a century.

The same provisions that are found in this constitution of Idaho have been a part of the general Federal law for many years. It has been claimed, and erroneously claimed, in the objections that have been made to this provision of the constitution of Idaho, that there is an attempt to disfranchise the Mormon people on the ground of their religious belief, and I noticed that some of my colleagues on this side of the House through inadvertence fell into an admission of the correctness of that erroneous statement. Under the provisions of the Edmunds law all bigamists and polygamists were disqualified from voting, and by the test oath which was provided under the subsequent act every person desiring to vote was required to take an oath that he was not a bigamist or a polygamist, and that he would not aid or abet any one to commit those offenses or either of them. In the Idaho constitution that practice is scrupulously adhered to. In that constitution it is provided, first, that bigamists and polygamists shall be disqualified to vote; that all who counsel, aid, or encourage others to commit those offenses shall be disqualified to vote; that all who belong to any organization or order which counsels, aids, or procures others to commit these crimes shall be disqualified to vote.

There is no departure in the constitution of Idaho from the principles of the Federal law. It is simply extended so as to include not only those who commit those crimes, but those who aid and abet them. The constitutionality of this provision has been settled by the highest court of our land in a test case brought up from the Territory of Idaho.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. DORSEY. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE].

Mr. LODGE. Mr. Speaker, the question submitted to the House in connection with this bill is an extremely plain one. No one, so far as I know, has attempted to argue that by her resources, her population, and all the qualities that entitle a community to admission into the Union Idaho is not fit for statehood. The whole debate has turned on the single point as to the clause in the proposed constitution which disfranchises in the new State the people known as Mormons, and on this point the Democratic minority of the committee have argued that it is neither right nor legal nor constitutional to disfranchise a man for a crime of which he has not been convicted. That position, Mr. Speaker, is begging the question. This is not a question of dealing with a specific crime on the part of a particular individual; it is a question of dealing with a system which propagates and organizes and gives a religious sanction to that which is declared a crime under the laws of the United States.

Still less, Mr. Speaker, is this a question involving religious liberty. The American doctrine is that of absolute religious toleration: "a free church in a free state." That doctrine was first established in all its breadth in this country by the founder of Pennsylvania, William Penn; and since his day it has become the accepted doctrine and practice of every State in the Union. If the secular power should attempt to cross the border line and interfere with a man's religious opinion, it deserves and would receive the reprobation of every right-thinking American. But, on the other hand, when a religious organization crosses the same line in the opposite direction and sets itself in open defiance of the laws of the United States, then it becomes the duty of the United States to refuse recognition to the people who thus defy its laws. They make themselves, by their own creed and by their own action, outlaws; and they deserve to be treated as outlaws by the United States.

From the beginning of their history the Mormons have defied the laws of the United States and of every State in the Union; they have outraged and made war upon all that in one direction the people of the United States believed to make for good morals, for decent government, and for pure homes. Guarded by their remoteness, they have maintained that attitude until the present day. Now the great tide of American civilization and American population is rising around them on every side, and their church, with its vicious and illegal doctrines of marriage, is threatened with destruction. Their effort now, therefore, is to get themselves recognized as citizens of a State—to have the United States and the State of Idaho confer upon them the most precious rights of citizenship, so that perhaps they can find immunity, if not protection, by offering their support to one or the other political party. That support, improbable as it might seem, Mr. Speaker, they have already found at the hands of the Democratic minority of this committee. If we may believe my ever accurate friend from Illinois, the minority of the committee have in this the support also of 5,500,000 Democrats throughout the country. [Laughter and applause on the Republican side.]

The minority of the committee is against polygamy and bigamy, but in favor of the bigamist and polygamist; they are against the crime, but would make the criminal a voter, and, if we may believe my friend from Illinois, that is the view of the Democratic party, and the Democrats of the committee and the country now demand that we should confer on these men the most sacred rights of American citizenship. Instead of that, it is the duty of the United States, as it is the duty of the State of Idaho, to shut them out from those privileges until in the marriage relation at least they live in conformity with the laws of the United States. This is not a question of constitutional or legal technicality; it is a question of decency, of good morals, and of national self-respect. If the State of Idaho had failed to shut out these people she would not deserve statehood at the hands of this House.

[Here the hammer fell.]

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced disagreement to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2284) for the organization, improvement, and maintenance of the National Zoological Park, asked a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and had appointed as conferees on its part Mr. MORRILL, Mr. SPOONER, and Mr. VEST.

It also announced the passage of the bill (S. 2897) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend the statutes in relation to immediate transportation of dutiable goods, and for other purposes," approved June 10, A. D. 1887; in which concurrence was requested.

It also announced as follows:

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, April 3, 1890.

Ordered, That the Secretary inform the House of Representatives that the Senate has elected JOHN J. INGALLS, a Senator from the State of Kansas, President of the Senate pro tempore, to hold and exercise the office in the absence of the Vice-President from time to time during the pleasure of the Senate, in accordance with the terms of its resolution passed March 12, 1890, as follows:

"Resolved, That it is competent for the Senate to elect a President pro tempore, who shall hold the office during the pleasure of the Senate and until another is elected, and shall execute the duties thereof during all future absences of the Vice-President until the Senate shall otherwise order."

ADMISSION OF IDAHO.

Mr. DORSEY. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HENDERSON].

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, this is a familiar sight to the country. It is the Democratic party behind its old shield—a constitution of its own making, not the one made by the fathers. No political organization ever cried "Constitution" more and obeyed it less. What is this battle? It is the Democratic party in the old breeching, pulling back, back, back, when the civilized world says, "Forward and onward!" That is the issue.

Why, sir, the Democratic party is a polygamist. You have had [addressing the Democratic side of the House] a whole batch of wives. Some of them, thank God, are dead and damned.

Mr. TURNER, of New York. We never had but one name.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. That is so; you never had but one name, but you had a plurality of wives; and what were they? Slavery was one of them; slave territory; treason. [Derisive cries on the Democratic side.] Oh, you recognize them, boys; you know your names when you hear them. Now you have polygamy for one of your wives; a polluted ballot-box is one of them, and antagonism to education is one; free trade is one of your pets and free whisky is one of your darlings. And let me tell you this: you have been true to every one of them. [Applause and laughter on the Republican side.] You never left their bed or board for a single minute—not once. I like your loyalty to them.

But do not come sneaking behind with your so-called constitutional shields to cover up your purposes. You never consented to the admission of any State into the Union as a free State until you could weigh it down with slave States, too.

This country has carved four States, the two Dakotas, Montana, and Washington, out of the Territorial lands, and made them free States without you, without your aid and in spite of your opposition. If the Democratic party had had the power to prevent this from being done not one of these four States would now be in the Union of States. The Republican party, aided by a few Democrats who dared not face Heaven and their own people, enabled us to bring them into the Union; and now, gentlemen, when the little Territory of Idaho has set an example in intelligence, an example in integrity and in morality that should appeal to this legislative body, you bring in your subtlest logicians with fine-spun constitutional shields and try to fight under that flag in opposition. But the gentlemen on this side have uncovered your guns and the people know where you are and who you are. Stick to your women, gentlemen; we will help Idaho and stick to the principles she has announced. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. McMILLIN. You had better go and try to carry your own State, which has slipped its moorings and gone into the Democratic port.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Iowa will take care of herself and help to take care of your ballot-box-stuffers, too.

Mr. DORSEY. I yield now one minute to the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS].

Mr. DUBOIS. Mr. Speaker, I desire simply to make a correction. The RECORD inadvertently had me state on yesterday that in Idaho we disfranchise those who believe in polygamy. As a matter of fact we do nothing of the sort. We disfranchise those only who uphold and practice this crime, offensive to every one.

Mr. DORSEY. I now yield the remainder of the time to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. STRUBLE], the chairman of the Committee on the Territories.

[Mr. STRUBLE withholds his remarks for revision. See Appendix.]

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. MOORE, of New Hampshire, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled a bill to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes; when the Speaker signed the same.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, Mr. LEHLBACH, Mr. STUMP, and Mr. OWEN of Indiana obtained indefinite leave of absence, on account of their duties in connection with the immigration investigation ordered by concurrent resolution of the two Houses.

CHANGES OF REFERENCE.

The SPEAKER. House bills numbered 8245 and 8295 have been placed on the Calendar of the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union. The Chair thinks they should be placed for the present upon the House Calendar. Of course the point of order can be made at any time in the future—

Mr. ROGERS. What are the bills?

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the titles.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 823) to provide for the disposal of the abandoned military reservations in Wyoming Territory.

A bill (H. R. 826) to authorize the purchase of certain public lands by the city of Buffalo, Wyo., and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Of course the point can be made at any time—

Mr. ROGERS. What Calendar are they now sent to?

The SPEAKER. The House Calendar.

Mr. ROGERS. I will reserve the point.

The SPEAKER. The point of order can be taken at any time prior to consideration of the bills. The Chair thinks that, subject to whatever may appear in argument hereafter, the bills should now go to the House Calendar. Something may be developed later to indicate the propriety of a different judgment.

ADMISSION OF IDAHO.

The SPEAKER. The time having arrived, under the order of the House, for voting upon the bill for the admission of Idaho, the question is now upon the amendment submitted by the minority of the Committee on Territories. The Clerk will read the first amendment submitted by the minority.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out sections 1 and 2 and in lieu thereof insert the following sections, and change the numbers of the other sections accordingly:

"SECTION 1. That the inhabitants of all that part of the area of the United States now constituting the Territory of Idaho, as at present described, may become the State of Idaho, as hereinafter provided.

"SEC. 2. That all persons who shall have resided within the limits of said proposed State for sixty days, and are otherwise qualified by the laws of said Territory to vote for representatives to the Legislative Assembly thereof, are hereby authorized to vote for and choose delegates to form a convention in said Territory; and the qualifications for delegates to such convention shall be such as, by the laws of said Territory, persons are required to possess to be eligible to the Legislative Assembly thereof; and the aforesaid delegates to form said convention shall be apportioned among the several counties within the limits of the proposed State in proportion to the aggregate number of votes in each of said counties for Delegate in Congress at the election held in said Territory on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November, 1888. One delegate shall be allowed for every 300 votes cast in each county, and one delegate for any fraction of 150 votes cast in each county. That said apportionment shall be made by the governor, the chief-justice, and the United States attorney of said Territory; and the governor of said Territory shall, by proclamation, order an election of the delegates aforesaid in said Territory to be held on the Tuesday after the first Monday in June, 1890, which proclamation shall be issued within thirty days after the passage of this act; and such election shall be conducted, the returns made, the result ascertained, and the certificates to persons elected to such convention issued in the same manner as is prescribed by the laws of the said Territory regulating elections therein for Delegates to Congress. All persons resident in said proposed State who are qualified voters of said Territory, as herein provided, shall be entitled to vote upon the election of delegates and upon the ratification or rejection of the constitution, under such rules and regulations as said convention may prescribe, not in conflict with this act. Provided, That if any elector in said Territory who may offer to register as a voter or to vote at either of said elections shall be challenged on the ground that he is a bigamist or polygamist, or is living in what is known as patriarchal, plural, or celestial marriage, or in violation of any law of Idaho or of the United States forbidding any such crime; or who in any manner teaches, advises, counsels, aids, or encourages any person to enter into bigamy, polygamy, or such patriarchal, plural, or celestial marriage, or to live in violation of any such law or to commit any such crime, or who is a member of or contributes to the support, aid, or encouragement of any order, organization, association, corporation, or society which teaches, advises, counsels, encourages, or aids any person to enter into bigamy, polygamy, or such patriarchal or plural marriage, or which teaches or advises that the laws of Idaho prescribing rules of civil conduct are not the supreme law of the Territory, it shall be the duty of one of the judges of the registration or of the election, where such elector is challenged, to tender him the oath prescribed in section 24 of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1877, known as the anti-polygamy act, with such modification only as is necessary in order to comply with the laws of the Territory of Idaho in respect to his residence therein; and if such elector shall take and subscribe said oath so modified, his vote shall be received and counted at such elections. But if said elector shall swear falsely in taking such oath, he shall, on conviction, be deemed guilty of perjury, and he shall be punished accordingly.

"SEC. 3. That the delegates to the convention thus elected shall meet at the seat of government of said Territory on the 4th day of July, 1890, and after organization shall declare, on behalf of the people of said proposed State, that they adopt the Constitution of the United States; whereupon the said convention shall be, and is hereby authorized to form a constitution and State government for said proposed State. The constitution shall be republican in form, and make no distinction in civil or political rights on account of race or color, except as to Indians not taxed, and not be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States and the principles of the Declaration of Independence. And said convention shall provide, by ordinance irrevocable without the consent of the United States and the people of said State:

"First, that perfect toleration of religious sentiment shall be secured, and that no inhabitant of said State shall ever be molested in person or property on account of his or her mode of religious worship;

"Second, that the people inhabiting the said proposed State do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title to the unappropriated public lands lying within the boundaries thereof, and to all lands lying within said limits owned or held by any Indian or Indian tribes; and that until the title thereto shall have been extinguished by the United States the same shall be and remain subject to the disposition of the United States, and said Indian lands shall remain under the absolute jurisdiction and control of the Congress of the United States; that the lands belonging to citizens of the United States residing without the State shall never be taxed at a higher rate than the lands belonging to residents thereof; that no taxes shall be imposed by the State on lands or property therein belonging to or which may hereafter be purchased by the United States or reserved for its use; but nothing herein or in the ordinance herein provided for shall preclude the said State from taxing, as other lands are taxed, any lands owned or held by any Indian who has severed his tribal relations and has obtained from the United States or from any person a title thereto by patent or other grant, save and except such lands as have been or may be granted to any Indian or Indians under any act of Congress containing a provision exempting the lands thus granted from taxation; but said ordinance shall provide that all such lands shall be exempt from taxation by said State so long and to such an extent as such act of Congress may prescribe;

"Third, that the debts and liabilities of said Territory shall be assumed and paid by the State; and

"Fourth, that provision shall be made for the establishment and maintenance of a system of public schools which shall be open to all the children of said State and free from sectarian control.

"SEC. 4. That, in case a constitution and State government shall be formed in compliance with the provisions of this act, the convention forming the same shall provide by ordinance for submitting said constitution to the people of said State for their ratification or rejection at an election to be held in said Territory on the Tuesday after the first Monday of October, 1890, at which election the qualified voters of said proposed State shall vote directly for or against the proposed constitution and for or against any provisions separately submitted. The returns of said election shall be made to the secretary of said Territory, who, with the governor and chief justice thereof, or any two of them, shall canvass the same; and if a majority of the legal votes cast on that question shall be for the constitution, the governor shall certify the result to the President of the United States, together with a statement of the votes cast thereon, and upon separate articles or propositions, and a copy of said constitution, articles, propositions, and ordinances; and if the constitution and government of said proposed State are republican in form and if all the provisions of this act have been complied with in the formation thereof, it shall be the duty of the President of the United States to issue his proclamation announcing the result of said election; and thereupon the proposed State of Idaho shall be deemed admitted by Congress into the Union under and by virtue of this act on an equal footing with the original States from and after the date of said proclamation."

The SPEAKER. The question is upon agreeing to the amendment just read. [The question was put.] The yeas seem to have it.

Mr. SPRINGER. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 112, nays 125, not voting 91; as follows:

YEAS—112.

Abbott,	Cooper, Ind.	Lanham,	Rogers,
Allen, Miss.	Cowles,	Lawler,	Rowland,
Anderson, Miss.	Crain,	Lee,	Rusk,
Andrew,	Crisp,	Lester, Va.	Sayers,
Bankhead,	Dangan,	Lewis,	Seney,
Barnes,	Davidson,	Maish,	Skinner,
Barwig,	Dibble,	Mansur,	Springer,
Blanchard,	Dockery,	Martin, Ind.	Stewart, Ga.
Bland,	Edmunds,	Martin, Tex.	Stewart, Tex.
Blount,	Elliott,	McAdoo,	Stockdale,
Boatner,	Ellis,	McClammy,	Stone, Mo.
Breckinridge, Ky.	Enloe,	McCreary,	Stump,
Brickner,	Fithian,	McMillin,	Tarsney,
Brookshire,	Flower,	McRae,	Tillman,
Brown, J. B.	Forney,	Montgomery,	Tucker,
Buchanan, Va.	Fowler,	Morgan,	Turner, Ga.
Buckalew,	Gibson,	Mitchler,	Turner, N. Y.
Bunn,	Goodnight,	Oates,	Turnin,
Bynum,	Grimes,	O'Ferrall,	Walker, Mo.
Campbell,	Hare,	Outhwaite,	Washington,
Carlton,	Hatch,	Owens, Ohio	Wheeler, Ala.
Caruth,	Haynes,	Parrott,	Whiting,
Catchings,	Hemphill,	Paynter,	Wike,
Chipman,	Herbert,	Peel,	Wilkinson,
Clancy,	Holman,	Penington,	Willcox,
Clarke, Ala.	Kerr, Pa.	Pierce,	Williams, Ill.
Clements,	Kilgore,	Quinn,	Wilson, Mo.
Cobb,	Lane,	Kelly,	Wise,

NAYS—125.

Adams,	Cutcheon,	Lodge,	Rockwell,
Allen, Mich.	Dalzell,	Mason,	Rowell,
Anderson, Kans.	De Haven,	McComas,	Sanford,
Baker,	Dingley,	McCord,	Seranton,
Banks,	Dolliver,	McCormick,	Seull,
Bartine,	Dorsey,	McKenna,	Simonds,
Belknap,	Farquhar,	McKinley,	Smith, Ill.
Bergen,	Featherston,	Milliken,	Smith, W. Va.
Bingham,	Flick,	Moffitt,	Smoyer,
Biss,	Frank,	Moore, N. H.	Stewart, Vt.
Boothman,	Funston,	Morey,	Stockbridge,
Boutelle,	Gear,	Morrill,	Struble,
Bowden,	Gest,	Morse,	Stromey,
Brewer,	Greenhalge,	Mudd,	Taylor, E. B.
Buchanan, N. J.	Grosvenor,	Nute,	Taylor, Ill.
Burrows,	Hall,	O'Donnell,	Thomas,
Burton,	Hansbrough,	O'Neill, Pa.	Thompson,
Butterworth,	Harmer,	Osborne,	Townsend, Colo.
Caldwell,	Haugen,	Payne,	Townsend, Pa.
Cannon,	Henderson, Ill.	Payson,	Turner, Kans.
Carter,	Henderson, Iowa	Perkins,	Vandever,
Caswell,	Hermann,	Peters,	Van Schaick,
Cheadle,	Hitt,	Pickler,	Walker, Mass.
Cheatham,	Houk,	Post,	Wheeler, Mich.
Clark, Wis.	Kelley,	Pugsley,	Wickham,
Coleman,	Kerr, Iowa	Raines,	Williams, Ohio
Comstock,	Ketcham,	Randall, Mass.	Wilson, Ky.
Conger,	Lacey,	Ray,	Wilson, Wash.
Connell,	La Follette,	Reed, Iowa	Wright,
Cooper, Ohio	Laidlaw,	Reynburn,
Craig,	Laws,	Rife,
Culbertson, Pa.

NOT VOTING—91.

Alderson,	Cummings,	Lehbach,	Sherman,
Arnold,	Darlington,	Lester, Ga.	Shively,
Atkinson, Pa.	De Lano,	Lind,	Snider,
Atkinson, W. Va.	Dunne,	Magner,	Spinola,
Bayne,	Dunphy,	McCarthy,	Spooner,
Beckwith,	Evans,	McClellan,	Stahlnecker,
Belden,	Ewart,	Miles,	Stephenson,
Biggs,	Finley,	Mills,	Stivers,
Breckinridge, Ark.	Fitch,	Moore, Tex.	Stone, Ky.
Broslus,	Flood,	Morrow,	Taylor, J. D.
Brower,	Forman,	Norton,	Taylor, Tenn.
Browne, T. M.	Geissenhainer,	O'Neill, Ind.	Tracey,
Browne, Va.	Gifford,	O'Neill, Mass.	Venable,
Brunner,	Grout,	Owen, Ind.	Wade,
Bullock,	Hayes,	Perry,	Wallace, Mass.
Candler, Ga.	Heard,	Phelan,	Wallace, N. Y.
Candler, Mass.	Henderson, N. C.	Price,	Watson,
Carlisle,	Hooker,	Quackenbush,	Whitthorne,
Cumie,	Hopkins,	Randall, Pa.	Wiley,
Cogswell,	Kennedy,	Richardson,	Wilson, W. Va.
Cothran,	Kinsey,	Robertson,	Yardley,
Covert,	Knapp,	Russell,	Yoder,
Culbertson, Tex.	Lansing,	Sawyer,

So the amendment was disagreed to.

During the roll-call the following additional pairs were announced:

For the rest of the day:

Mr. COGSWELL with Mr. O'NEIL, of Massachusetts.

Mr. WATSON with Mr. BULLOCK.

Mr. BROWER with Mr. BLANCHARD.

Mr. KINSEY with Mr. ROBERTSON.

Mr. CANDLER, of Massachusetts, with Mr. CARLISLE.

Mr. OWEN, of Indiana, with Mr. HOOKER.

Mr. MORROW with Mr. BIGGS.

Mr. GROUT with Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas.

Mr. BAYNE with Mr. MILLS.

Mr. LIND with Mr. SHIVELY.

Mr. SPOONER with Mr. CLUNIE.

Mr. EWART with Mr. CUMMINGS.

Mr. LANSING with Mr. COVERT.

Mr. MILES with Mr. SPINOLA.

Mr. HOPKINS with Mr. PRICE; on this vote Mr. HOPKINS would vote against it and Mr. PRICE for it.

Mr. BECKWITH with Mr. GEISSENHAINER.

Mr. LEHLBACH with Mr. BRUNNER, until further notice.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

Add as a proviso to the first section:

"Provided, That this constitution shall not take effect until the same shall have been submitted to a vote of the people of the Territory of Idaho. That for the purpose of such submission the governor of Idaho shall issue his proclamation calling upon the voters of said Territory to assemble at their respective places for voting, on the — day of —, A. D. 1890, then and there to cast their ballots for or against the adoption of such constitution; and the said governor may prescribe such form of ballot as shall be used at the said election; and the said election shall be conducted in the manner and by the officers as now provided by the laws of the said Territory; and returns thereof shall be made, and the same shall be canvassed, in the same manner as is required by the laws of the said Territory in case of an election of Delegate to the Congress; and if the majority shall vote in favor of the adoption of the said constitution, the governor shall issue his proclamation thereof: Provided, That no person otherwise qualified shall be denied the right to vote at said election because of alleged crime for which the punishment embraces disfranchisement as a part of the penalty therefor, except where he has been duly convicted thereof by a court of competent jurisdiction."

The question was put, and the Speaker declared the yeas seemed to have it.

Mr. SPRINGER. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 104, nays 121, not voting 103; as follows:

YEAS—104.

Abbott,	Davidson,	Lewis,	Senev,
Allen, Miss.	Dockery,	Maish,	Skinner,
Anderson, Miss.	Edmunds,	Mansur,	Springer,
Andrew,	Elliott,	Martin, Ind.	Stewart, Ga.
Bankhead,	Ellis,	Martin, Tex.	Stewart, Tex.
Barnes,	Enloe,	McAdoo,	Stockdale,
Barwig,	Fithian,	McClammy,	Stone, Ky.
Bland,	Flower,	McClellan,	Stone, Mo.
Boatner,	Forney,	McCreary,	Stump,
Breckinridge, Ky.	Fowler,	McMillin,	Tarsney,
Brickner,	Goodnight,	McRee,	Tillman,
Brookshire,	Grimes,	Montgomery,	Tucker,
Brown, J. B.	Hare,	Morgan,	Turner, Ga.
Buchanan, Va.	Hatch,	Mutcher,	Turner, N. Y.
Bu n,	Haynes,	Oates,	Turpin,
Bynum,	Hemphill,	O'Ferrall,	Walker, Mo.
Campbell,	Herbert,	Owens, Ohio	Washington,
Carlton,	Holman,	Parrett,	Wheeler, Ala.
Caruth,	Kerr, Pa.	Peel,	Whiting,
Chipman,	Kilgore,	Pennington,	Wike,
Clancy,	Lane,	Pierce,	Wiley,
Clarke, Ala.	Lanham,	Quinn,	Wilkinson,
Clements,	Lawler,	Reilly,	Willcox,
Cobb,	Lee,	Rogers,	Williams, Ill.
Cooper, Ind.	Lester, Ga.	Row and,	Wilson, Mo.
Cowles,	Lester, Va.	Sayers,	Wise,

NAYS—121.

Adams,	Culbertson, Pa.	Lacey,	Rife,
Allen, Mich.	Cutcheon,	La Follette,	Rowell,
Anderson, Kans.	Dalzell,	Laidlaw,	Sanford,
Baker,	De Haven,	Laws,	Scranton,
Banks,	Dingley,	Lodge,	Scull,
Bartine,	Dolliver,	McComas,	Simonds,
Belknap,	Dorsey,	McCord,	Smith, Ill.
Bliss,	Farquhar,	McCormick,	Smith, W. Va.
Boothman,	Featherston,	McKenna,	Smyser,
Boutelle,	Flick,	McKinley,	Stewart, Vt.
Bowden,	Frank,	Milliken,	Stockbridge,
Brewer,	Funston,	Moffitt,	Struble,
Buchanan, N. J.	G. ar,	Moore, N. H.	Sweeney,
Buckalew,	Gest,	Morey,	Taylor, E. B.
Burrows,	Greenhalge,	Morrill,	Thomas,
Burton,	Grosvenor,	Morse,	Thompson,
Butterworth,	Groat,	Nute,	Townsend, Colo.
Caldwell,	Hall,	O'Donnell,	Townsend, Pa.
Cannon,	Hansbrough,	O'Neill, Pa.	Turner, Kans.
Carter,	Harmer,	Osborne,	Vandever,
Caswell,	Haugen,	Payne,	Van Schaick,
Cheadle,	Henderson, Ill.	Payson,	Walker, Mass.
Cheatham,	Henderson, Iowa	Perkins,	Wheeler, Mich.
Clark, Wis.	Hermann,	Peters,	Wickham,
Coleman,	Hill,	Pickler,	Williams, Ohio
Conger,	Hitt,	Post,	Wilson, Ky.
Connell,	Hopkins,	Pugsley,	Wilson, Wash.
Cooper, Ohio	Houk,	Raines,	Wright,
Craig,	Kelley,	Randall, Mass.
Culbertson, Tex.	Kerr, Iowa	Reed, Iowa
	Ketcham,	Reyburn,

NOT VOTING—103.

Alderson,	Covert,	Lansing,	Rockwell,
Arnold,	Crain,	Lehibach,	Rusk,
Atkinson, Pa.	Crisp,	Lind,	Russell,
Atkinson, W. Va.	Cummings,	Magnus,	Sawyer,
Bayne,	Dargan,	Mason,	Sherman,
Beckwith,	Darlington,	McCarthy,	Shively,
Belden,	De Lano,	Miles,	Snider,
Biggs,	Dibble,	Mills,	Spinoia,
Bingham,	Dunnell,	Moore, Tex.	Spooner,
Blanchard,	Dunphy,	Morrow,	Stahlnecker,
Blount,	Evans,	Mudd,	Stephenson,
Breckinridge, Ark.	Ewart,	Niedringhaus,	Stivers,
Brosius,	Finley,	Norton,	Taylor, Ill.
Brower,	Fitch,	O'Neill, Ind.	Taylor, J. D.
Browne, T. M.	Flood,	O'Neill, Mass.	Taylor, Tenn.
Browne, Va.	Forman,	Outhwaite,	Tracey,
Brunner,	Geissenhainer,	Owen, Ind.	Venable,
Bullock,	Gibson,	Paynter,	Wade,
Candler, Ga.	Gifford,	Perry,	Wallace, Mass.
Candler, Mass.	Hayes,	Phelan,	Wallace, N. Y.
Carlisle,	Heard,	Price,	Watson,
Catchings,	Henderson, N. C.	Quackenbush,	Whitthorne,
Clunie,	Hooker,	Randall, Pa.	Wilson, W. Va.
Cogswell,	Kennedy,	Ray,	Yardley,
Comstock,	Kinsey,	Richardson,	Yoder,
Cothran,	Knapp,	Robertson,

So the amendment was rejected.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. TAYLOR, of Illinois, with Mr. CRAIN, on all political questions, for the rest of the day.

Mr. COMSTOCK with Mr. PRICE, on this vote.

Mr. BINGHAM with Mr. BLOUNT, on all political questions, for the rest of the day.

On motion of Mr. DORSEY, by unanimous consent, the reading of the names was dispensed with.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will now read the third amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add to section 1 of the bill the following:

Provided, This act shall not take effect except upon the fundamental condition that within the said State of Idaho there shall be no denial of the right of suffrage, or of the right to hold office, or to serve on juries because of crime, except after conviction thereof by a court of competent jurisdiction: Provided, That the right of suffrage may be denied prior to conviction for a crime committed in connection with a pending election and in violation of the election laws where conviction would be impossible prior to such election; but in case an elector is challenged on account of such crime he may deny under oath that he is guilty thereof; and after taking such oath his vote shall be received; but if he swears falsely in taking such oath he shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and, on conviction thereof, he shall be punished accordingly; and upon the further condition that the Legislature of said State shall, by a solemn public act, declare the assent of said State to the said condition, and shall transmit to the President of the United States an authenticated copy of said act, upon receipt whereof the President, by proclamation, shall forthwith announce the fact, whereupon said condition shall be held as a part of the organic law of the State, irrevocable without the consent of Congress; and thereupon, and without any further proceeding on the part of Congress the admission of said State in the Union shall be considered as complete. Said State Legislature shall be convened by the governor of Idaho within thirty days after he shall take his office, to act upon the conditions submitted herein."

The amendment was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

Mr. SPRINGER. There is an amendment in regard to the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections, which, I believe, the gentleman from Idaho is to offer.

The SPEAKER. But the previous question has been ordered.

Mr. DORSEY. I ask a vote on the bill.

Mr. SPRINGER. There was an amendment in regard to the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections of land. I supposed the gentleman from Idaho would offer it to the fourth section of the bill. This would make it conform to the other bills passed on this subject, and we were informed in the Committee on Territories that it would be made to conform exactly in that respect. It relates to the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections in permanent reservations—

Mr. PAYSON. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

Mr. SPRINGER. I understood the amendments were to be offered.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time.

Mr. SPRINGER. On the passage of the bill I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 129, nay 1, not voting 198; as follows:

YEAS—129.

Adams,	De Haven,	Lewis,	Rife,
Allen, Mich.	Dingley,	Lodge,	Rockwell,
Anderson, Kans.	Dolliver,	Mason,	Rowell,
Baker,	Dorsey,	McComas,	Sanford,
Banks,	Farquhar,	McCord,	Scranton,
Bartine,	Featherston,	McCormick,	Scull,
Belknap,	Flick,	McKenna,	Simonds,
Bergen,	Frank,	McKinley,	Smith, Ill.
Bliss,	Funston,	Milliken,	Smith, W. Va.
Boothman,	Gear,	Moffitt,	Smyser,
Boutelle,	Gest,	Moore, N. H.	Stewart, Vt.
Bowden,	Greenhalge,	Morey,	Stockbridge,
Brewer,	Grosvenor,	Morrill,	Struble,
Buchanan, N. J.	Groat,	Morrow,	Sweeney,
Burrows,	Hall,	Morse,	Taylor, E. B.
Burton,	Hansbrough,	Mudd,	Taylor, Ill.
Caldwell,	Harmer,	Niedringhaus,	Thomas,
Cannon,	Hangen,	Nute,	Thompson,
Carter,	Henderson, Ill.	O'Donnell,	Townsend, Colo.
Caswell,	Henderson, Iowa	O'Neill, Pa.	Townsend, Pa.
Cheadle,	Hermann,	Osborne,	Turner, Kans.
Cheatham,	Hill,	Payne,	Vandever,
Clark, Wis.	Hitt,	Payson,	Van Schaick,
Coleman,	Hopkins,	Perkins,	Walker, Mass.
Comstock,	Houk,	Peters,	Wheeler, Mich.
Conger,	Kelley,	Pickler,	Wickham,
Connell,	Kerr, Iowa	Post,	Williams, Ohio
Cooper, Ohio	Ketcham,	Pugsley,	Wilson, Ky.
Craig,	Kinsey,	Raines,	Wilson, Wash.
Culbertson, Pa.	Lacey,	Randall, Mass.	Wright,
Cutcheon,	La Follette,	Ray,
Dalzell,	Laidlaw,	Reed, Iowa
	Laws,	Reyburn,

NAY—1.

Buckalew.

NOT VOTING—198.

Abbott,	Brosius,	Cooper, Ind.	Fithian,
Alderson,	Brower,	Cothran,	Flood,
Allen, Miss.	Brown, J. B.	Covert,	Flower,
Anderson, Miss.	Browne, T. M.	Cowles,	Forman,
Andrew,	Browne, Va.	Crain,	Forney,
Arnold,	Brunner,	Crisp,	Fowler,
Atkinson, Pa.	Buchanan, Va.	Culbertson, Tex.	Geissenhainer,
Atkinson, W. Va.	Bullock,	Cummings,	Gibson,
Bankhead,	Bunn,	Dargan,	Gifford,
Barnes,	Butterworth,	Darlington,	Goodnight,
Barwig,	Bynum,	Davidson,	Grimes,
Bayne,	Campbell,	De Lano,	Hare,
Beckwith,	Candler, Ga.	Dibble,	Hatch,
Belden,	Candler, Mass.	Dockery,	Hayes,
Biggs,	Carlisle,	Dunnell,	Haynes,
Bingham,	Carlton,	Dunphy,	Heard,
Blanchard,	Caruth,	Edmunds,	Hemphill,
Bland,	Catchings,	Elliott,	Henderson, N. C.
Blount,	Chipman,	Ellis,	Herbert,
Boatner,	Clancy,	Enloe,	Holman,
Breckinridge, Ark.	Clarke, Ala.	Evans,	Hooker,
Brickner,	Clements,	Ewart,	Kennedy,
Brookshire,	Cobb,	Fitch,	Kilgore,

Knapp,
Lane,
Lanham,
Lansing,
Lawler,
Lee,
Leibach,
Lester, Ga.
Lester, Va.
Lind,
Lind,
Magnier,
Maish,
Mausur,
Martin, Ind.
Martin, Tex.
McAdoo,
McCarthy,
McClammy,
McClellan,
McCreary,
McMillin,
McRae,
Miles,
Mills,
Montgomery,
Moore, Tex.

Morgan,
Mutchler,
Norton,
Oates,
O'Ferrall,
O'Neill, Ind.
O'Neill, Mass.
Outhwaite,
Owen, Ind.
Owens, Ohio
Parrett, Paynter,
Peel,
Pennington,
Perry,
Pichler,
Pi rce,
Price,
Quackenbush,
Quinn,
Randall, Pa.
Reilly,
Richardson,
Robertson,
Rogers,
Rowland,

Rusk,
Russell,
Sawyer,
Sayera,
Seney,
Sherman,
Shively,
Skinner,
Snider,
Spinola,
Spoonier,
Springer,
Stahneck,
Stephenson,
Stewart, Ga.
Stewart, Tex.
Stivers,
Stockdale,
Stone, Ky.
Stone, Mo.
Stump,
Tarsney,
Taylor, Tenn.
Taylor, J. D.
Tillman, Tracey,

Tucker,
Turner, Ga.
Turner, N. Y.
Turpin,
Venable,
Wade,
Walker, Mo.
Wallace, Mass.
Wallace, N. Y.
Washington,
Watson,
Wheeler, Ala.
Whiting,
Whithorne,
Wike,
Wiley,
Wilkinson,
Willcox,
Williams, Ill.
Wilson, Mo.
Wilson, W. Va.
Wise,
Yardley,
Yoder.

The Clerk recapitulated the names of those voting.

During the roll-call,

Mr. GROUT said: I am paired with the gentleman from Arkansas, but not to break a quorum, and voted "ay."

Mr. TAYLOR, of Illinois. I was paired with a live man, but as the Democrats are all dead I voted "ay." [Laughter.]

The following additional pair was announced:

Mr. BOATNER with Mr. ANDREW, on this vote. Mr. BOATNER would vote for and Mr. ANDREW against the bill.

Mr. MORROW. I am paired with my colleague, Mr. BIGGS, reserving, however, the right to vote to make a quorum, and have accordingly voted.

Mr. COGSWELL. I am paired with Mr. O'NEIL, of Massachusetts, but voted to make a quorum.

Mr. MAISH. I voted under a misapprehension, and withdraw my vote.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the names of members present and refusing to vote.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. ALLEN of Mississippi, Mr. BARNES, Mr. BLAND, Mr. BOATNER, Mr. BRECKINRIDGE of Kentucky, Mr. J. B. BROWN, Mr. BYNUM, Mr. CARUTH, Mr. CLARKE of Alabama, Mr. CLEMENTS, Mr. COVERT, Mr. COWLES, Mr. CRISP, Mr. CULBERTSON of Texas, Mr. CUMMINGS, Mr. DAVIDSON, Mr. DOCKERY, Mr. EDMUNDS, Mr. ENLOE, Mr. FITHIAN, Mr. FORNEY, Mr. GEISSENHAINER, Mr. GIBSON, Mr. GOODNIGHT, Mr. HARE, Mr. HATCH, Mr. HAYNES, Mr. HENPHILL, Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina, Mr. HOLMAN, Mr. KERR of Pennsylvania, Mr. LAKE, Mr. LANHAM, Mr. LAWLER, Mr. LEE, Mr. MAISH, Mr. MANSUR, Mr. MARTIN of Indiana, Mr. MARTIN of Texas, Mr. MCADDOO, Mr. MCCREARY, Mr. MCRAE, Mr. MORGAN, Mr. MUTCHLER, Mr. OATES, Mr. OWENS of Ohio, Mr. PENNINGTON, Mr. PIERCE, Mr. QUINN, Mr. ROGERS, Mr. ROWLAND, Mr. SAYERS, Mr. SPRINGER, Mr. STEWART of Georgia, Mr. STEWART of Texas, Mr. STOCKDALE, Mr. STONE of Missouri, Mr. STUMP, Mr. TILLMAN, Mr. TUCKER, Mr. TURNER of Georgia, Mr. WALKER of Missouri, Mr. WASHINGTON, Mr. WHEELER of Alabama, Mr. WIKE, Mr. WILLIAMS of Illinois, and Mr. WISE.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk reports the names of 67 members present and refusing to vote. On this vote the yeas recorded are 129, the nays 1, and, there being a constitutional quorum present to do business, the Chair declares the bill to be passed.

Mr. DORSEY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BOATNER. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. BOUTELLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Calendar of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union the Senate joint resolution No. 46—

Mr. BOATNER. I rise to a question of personal privilege.

Mr. BOUTELLE. The gentleman can rise to a question of privilege at any time hereafter. I ask unanimous consent—

Mr. BOATNER. I object.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not understand a word the gentleman from Louisiana says.

Mr. BOATNER. I addressed the Chair twice.

The SPEAKER. But the Chair can not understand the purpose of the gentleman in rising.

Mr. BOATNER. I rose to a question of privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BOATNER. I am reported by the Chair as being present and refusing to vote. I did not vote because I was paired on the bill. I was present all the time.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not think that makes any difference as far as the question of order is concerned. A pair is a matter between the gentleman and the one with whom he pairs. His duty as a member under the rules of the House is very plain. It is not a reflection upon him unless—unless it is. [Laughter.]

Mr. BOUTELLE. I trust there will be no objection to the consideration of this resolution. It is a matter of very great importance.

A MEMBER. What is it?

Mr. BOUTELLE. It is a Senate joint resolution providing for the transfer of the naval powder magazine from Ellis Island, New York Harbor, to a safer place; and also authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to provide at Ellis Island for an immigrant station.

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. COVERT] desires to be heard on this bill.

Mr. BOUTELLE. The gentleman from New York [Mr. COVERT] understands all about it. The gentleman is here, understands it, and desires it to be taken up.

Mr. McMILLIN. Is that all it embraces?

Mr. BOUTELLE. It provides for the removal of the powder magazine from this island and for fitting up Ellis Island as an immigrant station.

Mr. LANHAM. Has any House committee acted upon it?

Mr. BOUTELLE. It has passed the Senate, it has been unanimously reported by the Committee on Naval Affairs, and is recommended by a majority vote of the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. MCCREARY. I would like to hear the resolution read.

Mr. BLOUNT. Does the gentleman say it has been unanimously reported by the Committee on Immigration?

Mr. BOUTELLE. I say that it has been unanimously reported by the Committee on Naval Affairs and it has been recommended by a majority of the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Speaker, I understand from the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES] that the Committee on Immigration, of which he is a member, have had it in charge and have not agreed.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Yes; they have agreed.

Mr. OATES. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. MCADDOO. I will say to the gentleman from Georgia that it is a matter involving the question of human life in the harbor of New York.

Mr. MCCREARY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that we can not tell whether we will object or not until the resolution is read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's point of order is a perfectly good one; but the Chair will state, however, that the resolution has been read once or twice, and supposed that the House was informed as to its purpose.

Mr. MCCREARY. But it has not been read this evening.

The SPEAKER. It has not been read this evening, and the Clerk will read the resolution.

Mr. BOUTELLE. It is urgently recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a suggestion to my friend from Maine. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES] will object to this matter unless it is debated.

Mr. BOUTELLE. There is no objection to debate.

Mr. BLOUNT. Other gentlemen also want to speak; and I suggest that it had better come up to-morrow morning, so that gentlemen who want to debate it will have an opportunity to do so.

Mr. BOUTELLE. If I can have unanimous consent that it shall come up to-morrow morning immediately after the reading of the Journal, I desire to meet the wishes of the House as far as possible for reasonable debate.

Mr. McMILLIN. That will be the time for the gentleman to ask permission for the consideration of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maine, that this resolution be taken up for consideration to-morrow morning, immediately after the reading of the Journal?

Mr. MCCREARY. I shall object until I know what is in the resolution.

The SPEAKER. Then the Clerk will read the resolution; and the House will be in order to hear what is in the resolution.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to take immediate measures for the removal of the naval magazine from Ellis Island, in the harbor of New York.

Sec. 2. That the sum of $75,000, or so much thereof as may be found necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to purchase, or to obtain by condemnation, a site for, and for the erection of, a naval magazine; and that the Secretary of the Navy shall select a site at a safe distance from populous cities and from the shipping of the harbor of New York. And the further sum of $75,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to improve said Ellis Island for immigration purposes.

Mr. OATES. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a statement before the question is put asking unanimous consent, as a member of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. The two committees of the House and Senate visited New York, and since their return, after an inspection of this island and looking into the question of the removal of the landing station for immigrants, have come to a vote on the question of adopting Ellis Island. The majority of the committee voted in favor of that proposition. I voted against it, for reasons that I desire to give the House at the proper time. I will not object, however, to the consideration of the resolution. I think it is a matter that ought to be considered very soon and disposed of. The gentleman from New York [Mr. COVERT] desires to be heard in opposition to it; but I think, however, that it ought to go over until to-morrow morning, so that we can have a brief discussion on the question. I can, when it comes up, give in a very few minutes the reasons for my opposition.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I will state that there is no desire on the part of any one to prevent a reasonable and proper discussion of this matter. It is, as the gentleman from Alabama says, important that this matter should be determined as early as possible, and I ask unanimous consent that it may be brought up to-morrow morning immediately after the reading of the Journal.

Mr. BLOUNT. Does that request preclude consideration in Committee of the Whole?

Mr. BOUTELLE. We can consider it in the House as in Committee of the Whole, if necessary.

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope the gentleman will not insist on that. Mr. Speaker, I ask if this request will preclude the idea of considering it in Committee of the Whole?

Mr. BOUTELLE. I should hope that it might be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BLOUNT. There is some objection to that. I think it could be disposed of in a short time.

Mr. KILGORE. I demand the regular order.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I only ask to have it disposed of promptly.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas demands the regular order.

Mr. DORSEY. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hopes the gentleman will withdraw that motion for a moment.

Mr. DORSEY. I withdraw it.

DEATH OF HON. S. S. COX.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, so many Representatives desire to pay tribute to the memory of Hon. Samuel Sullivan Cox, late a member of this House, that I wish to ask unanimous consent to postpone the special order from this evening until 1 o'clock of April 19. There is not time enough to allow those who desire to speak in the evening session.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and that order will be made.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a short protest against what is known as the compound-lard bill, without the names.

Mr. BUCHANAN, of New Jersey. But the regular order has been demanded by the gentleman from Texas, and until it is withdrawn these requests for unanimous consent can not be entertained.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas demands the regular order, which is the motion to adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 14 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until 12 o'clock m. to-morrow.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bills of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

The bill (S. 3131) for the registry or enrollment of the barges Herdis and Agostino C.—to the Committee on Commerce.

The bill (S. 339) granting pensions to soldiers and sailors who are incapacitated for the performance of labor, and providing for pensions to widows, minor children, and dependent parents—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk and disposed of as follows:

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky, in behalf of the minority of the Committee on the Public Lands, submitted their views in writing on the bill of the House (H. R. 8919) to declare a forfeiture of certain lands heretofore granted to aid in the construction of railroads, and for other purposes; which was ordered to be printed as part of Report No. 1176.

Mr. BOOTHMAN, from the Committee on Claims, reported favorably the following bills; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

A bill of the House (H. R. 2351) for the relief of Asa Ellis, collector of internal revenue for the first collection district of California; and

A bill of the Senate (S. 5) for the relief of Bessie S. Gilmore.

Mr. ROWELL, from the Committee on Elections, to which was referred the contested-election case of Henry Bowen vs. John A. Buchanan, from the Ninth Congressional district of the State of Virginia, submitted a report, accompanied by the following resolutions:

Resolved, That John A. Buchanan was duly elected to the Fifty-first Congress from the Ninth Congressional district of Virginia, and is entitled to retain his seat.

Resolved, That Henry Bowen was not elected a Representative to the Fifty-first Congress from the Ninth Congressional district of Virginia, and is not entitled to the seat.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Ohio, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 8109) to provide for the purchase of land for a military post at Eagle Pass, Tex., reported, as a substitute therefor, a bill (H. R. 8977) to provide for the purchase of land for a military post at Eagle Pass, Tex.; which was read twice, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

He also, from the same committee, reported with amendment the bill of the House (H. R. 671) for the erection of additional quarters and a hospital at Columbus barracks, in the State of Ohio—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. PICKLER, from the Committee on the Public Lands, reported favorably the bill of the House (H. R. 8247) to authorize entry of the public lands by incorporating cities and towns for cemetery and park purposes—to the House Calendar.

Mr. FUNSTON, from the Committee on Agriculture, reported favorably the bill of the House (H. R. 4323) to erect a laboratory building for the use of the Department of Agriculture in Washington, D. C.—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BERGEN, from the Committee on Elections, to which was referred the contested-election case of Francis B. Posey vs. William F. Parrett, from the First Congressional district of the State of Indiana, submitted a report, accompanied by the following resolutions:

Resolved, That Francis B. Posey is not entitled to a seat in the Fifty-first Congress as Representative from the First Congressional district of Indiana.

Resolved, That William F. Parrett is entitled to a seat in the Fifty-first Congress as Representative from the First Congressional district in Indiana.

Mr. CASWELL, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the bill of the House (H. R. 785) to extend the time for the redemption of school farms in Beaufort County, South Carolina—to the House Calendar.

Mr. DAVIDSON, from the Committee on Commerce, reported favorably the bill of the House (H. R. 8203) authorizing the construction of a new steam-tender for service in the sixth light-house district—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills of the following titles were introduced, severally read twice, and referred as follows:

By Mr. VANDEVER: A bill (H. R. 8974) to provide for the conservation and use of natural water supplies upon certain portions of the public lands of the United States, and for other purposes—to the Select Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands in the United States.

By Mr. LAWLER: A bill (H. R. 8975) to test and try the science of spelling and to provide for establishing one hundred schools for this purpose—to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. SWENEY: A bill (H. R. 8976) amending section 3893 of the Revised Statutes, relating to excluding obscene and immoral literature from the mails—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. JASON R. BROWN: A bill (H. R. 8978) to appropriate the sum of $60,000 to aid in the ornamentation of the soldiers' and sailors' monument now being constructed at Indianapolis, Ind., under the authority of said State—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. HANSBROUGH: A bill (H. R. 8979) authorizing and directing the Secretary of Agriculture to cause to be made all necessary field examinations, surveys, and experiments for the purpose of demonstrating the extent, etc., with reference to irrigation of the underflow waters between the ninety-seventh degree of west longitude and the foot-hills of the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains, and making an appropriation therefor—to the Select Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands in the United States.

By Mr. CULBERSON, of Texas: A bill (H. R. 8980) for the prevention of trusts—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MUDD: A bill (H. R. 8981) providing for the purchase or condemnation of a lot of ground in the city of Annapolis, Md., for the extension of King George's street to the Naval Academy grounds—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR: A bill (H. R. 8982) for the relief of sane persons confined in insane asylums in the District of Columbia, the forts and arsenals, and the Territories of the United States, by placing the inmates of insane asylums under the protection of the laws, by securing to them their postal rights—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8983) to change the common law of marriage to the customs of modern civilization in the District of Columbia and the forts and arsenals of the United States—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. WALKER, of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 8984) to tax incomes and to free certain articles of great necessity from further taxation—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. OSBORNE (by request): A bill (H. R. 8985) to invalidate wills made in the District of Columbia under certain conditions—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. McCREARY: A bill (H. R. 8986) to erect a public building at Shelbyville, Ky.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. HANSBROUGH: A bill (H. R. 8987) to amend certain sections of the Revised Statutes relating to lotteries, and for other purposes—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. TUCKER: A bill (H. R. 8988) to construct a road from Appomattox station (on the line of the Norfolk and Western Railroad) to Appomattox Court-House, in the county of Appomattox, State of Virginia—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as indicated below:

By Mr. BELKNAP: A bill (H. R. 8989) granting a pension to Johana Judge, widow—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 8990) for the relief of C. W. Threlkeld—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CANDLER, of Massachusetts: A bill (H. R. 8991) granting a pension to Elijah T. Weatherbee—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CANNON: A bill (H. R. 8992) for the relief of the honorably discharged soldiers Thomas Wright and John Lamb—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CHEADLE: A bill (H. R. 8993) granting a pension to Julia A. Bailey, widow of Alfred Bailey, Company D, Thirty-third Regiment Indiana Volunteers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FITCH: A bill (H. R. 8994) granting an additional invalid pension to George W. Farnum—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GROUT: A bill (H. R. 8995) to provide for the remission of taxes on the property of the Eastern Presbyterian Church, of Washington, D. C.—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. HILL: A bill (H. R. 8996) for the relief of Charles L. Eastergreen, sole surviving heir and legal representative of Sarah M. Eastergreen, deceased—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8997) granting a pension to Charlotte B. Nutting—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8998) granting a pension to Isabel Wallace, daughter of General W. H. L. Wallace—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MASON: A bill (H. R. 8999) for the relief of William L. Orr—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. McCORMICK: A bill (H. R. 9000) granting a pension to Mary Karstetter—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 9001) granting a pension to Margarette Mayer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MORRILL: A bill (H. R. 9002) to amend the military record of George Miller, late captain Company F, Fifty-seventh United States Colored Troops—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. PETERS: A bill (H. R. 9003) granting a pension to William J. Scarbrough—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ROGERS: A bill (H. R. 9004) for the relief of the heirs or legal representatives of Lewis Moore, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ROWELL: A bill (H. R. 9005) for the relief of John P. Drennan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SMITH, of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 9006) for the relief of William R. Crain, of Villa Ridge, in Pulaski County, Illinois—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR: A bill (H. R. 9007) granting an increase of pension to George W. Montgomery—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TURPIN: A bill (H. R. 9008) to increase the pension of Zo S. Cook, of Wilcox County, Alabama—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WRIGHT: A bill (H. R. 9009) to pension Eri P. Jackson, of Company G, One hundred and forty-third Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. YODER: A bill (H. R. 9010) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary A. Winder—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

CHANGES OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, the following changes of reference were made:

A bill (H. R. 4913) to pay to Daniel T. Hedges and Edward B. Spaulding, executors of Charles E. Hedges, deceased, the amount found due them by the Court of Claims—Committee on Claims discharged, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

A bill (H. R. 2218) to increase the pension of Mrs. Mary L. Scott, of Lincoln County, Kentucky—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 5028) to place the name of Jacob L. Tussey on the pension-roll—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. ADAMS: Two protests from citizens of Chicago against H. R. 8278—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. BELKNAP: Papers in the case of the legal representatives of Joshua Hill, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BLAND: Petition of John J. Hughes, for relief—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BROOKSHIRE: A paper signed by B. V. Marshall and 19 others, of Terre Haute, Ind., with reference to H. R. 8278—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. BROWER: Resolutions of the Royal Templars of Temperance, in favor of universal suffrage without regard to sex—to the Select Committee on the Election of President, Vice-President, and Representatives in Congress.

By Mr. CHEADLE: Petition of Nathaniel Craigmile and 20 others, citizens of La Fayette, Ind., against the passage of House bill 8278, Fifty-first Congress—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, petition of H. W. Moon and 19 others, citizens of same city, for same purpose—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, petition for granting a pension to Julia A. Bailey, widow of Alfred Bailey, late of Company D, Thirty-third Indiana Volunteers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CHEATHAM: Protest of citizens of Wake County, North Carolina, producers of cotton seed, against the passage of H. R. 283, relative to the manufacture of compound lard—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition for the relief of Alfred Hollowell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CHIPMAN: Petition of vessel-owners and navigators of Bay City, Mich., for deepening the west channel of Detroit River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of vessel-owners of Buffalo, N. Y., for same purpose—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. CLUNIE: Memorial by mayor of San Francisco, asking for an appropriation to pay for improving streets in front of Government property in San Francisco—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. COGSWELL: Protest of Gardner Bros. and others, of Massachusetts, manufacturers of leather and shoes, against putting hides and skins upon the dutiable list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, protest of Hamilton Brown Shoe Company and others, of Massachusetts, manufacturers of boots and shoes and clothing, against any increased duty on flax—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, protest of James Fairfield and others, of Massachusetts, against any increased duty on imported lime—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CONGER: Memorial of Farmers' Alliance, at Knoxville, Iowa, in favor of Butterworth bill—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, memorial of Randolph Post, Grand Army of the Republic, Indianola, Iowa, in favor of widows' pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, memorial of State Business Men's Association, of Iowa, in favor of Torrey bankrupt bill—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, memorial of Farmers' Alliance, of Joy, Polk County, Iowa, in favor of the Butterworth bill—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. CONNELL: Petition of the mayor and council of Lincoln, Nebr., favoring the appropriation of $6,200,000 with which to construct a deep-water harbor at Galveston, Tex.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of Bricklayers' Protective Union No. 1, Omaha, Nebr., to amend existing laws relating to Government work so that none but citizens of the United States shall be employed thereon—to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petition of Bricklayers' Union No. 2, Lincoln, Nebr., praying for same relief—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. ENLOE: Papers in the case of C. M. Kennedy—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. FARQUHAR: Petition of Woman's Christian Temperance Union, etc., of Thirty-second district of New York against sale of fermented liquors in military and naval institutions—to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. FITCH: Petition of George W. Farnum, late of Battery E, First Regiment Vermont Heavy Artillery, for additional invalid pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FITHIAN: Resolution of Miehle Lodge, No. 1948, F. M. B. A., Jasper County, Illinois, against the ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. FUNSTON: Petition of citizens of Fort Scott, Kans., remonstrating against H. R. 8278, a bill to regulate commerce—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. GEAR: Petition of H. E. Wing and 40 others, citizens of Iowa, asking Congress to prohibit the carrying of obscene literature in the United States mails—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. GROUT: Petition of S. Newton and others, that commutation money paid on account of the draft be refunded—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa: Paper from the Board of Trade of Burlington, Iowa, indorsing the Torrey bankrupt bill—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, resolutions of Alliance of Farmers, No. 1023, Owasa, Hardin County, Iowa, favoring the Butterworth bill against gambling in farm produce—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, resolutions of Defense Alliance of Farmers, No. 1288, Greene, Butler County, Iowa, for same purpose—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. HOUK: Petition of A. L. Anderson, asking Congress to refer his quartermaster claim to the Court of Claims, under the so-called Bowman act—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, the petition of heirs and representatives of Mrs. Nancy Havron, asking Congress to refer her quartermaster claim to the Court of Claims, under the so-called Bowman act—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. KELLEY: Petition of old soldiers of Gray County, Kansas, asking for the repeal of the arrears act and for the passage of a service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Antietam Post, No. 64, Grand Army of the Republic, Parsons, Kans., asking for the appropriation of $5,000 to improve the soldiers' cemetery at Parsons, Kans.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. KINSEY: A protest of 321 employes of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain, and Southern Railroad, residing in Carondelet (St. Louis), Mo., against the passage of the Conger bill taxing compound lard, declaring that such legislation taxes the food of the laboring man—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, protest of 87 employes of St. Louis Cotton Conference, against placing a tax on compound lard and declaring that the Conger bill is class legislation—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, a memorial of 62 employes of the Ganahl Lumber Company, declaring that compound lard is a cheap, wholesome, and popular substitute for hog lard, and protesting against the passage of the Conger bill—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, a protest of 104 employes of the Shicke, Harrison & Howard Iron Company, against same measure—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. LANSING: Petition of citizens against passage of H. R. 8278—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. MARTIN, of Indiana: Petition of the Service-Pension Association of Wells County, Indiana, and of James B. Plessinger, William E. Kinert, and 300 others, Union ex-soldiers, for the passage of the service-pension, "arrears," and "equalization" bills recommended by the Twenty-second National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, Columbus, Ohio—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition and resolution of Jacob Stahl Post, No. 227, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Indiana, for the enactment of the service-pension bill formulated by the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at Columbus, Ohio, in 1883, and by L. O. Edson and others, ex-soldiers of Blackford County, Indiana—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Edward Hayon, Nelson D. Clouser, and others, Union ex-soldiers of Hartford City, Ind., for the enactment of the Indiana-Kansas service-pension law—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of T. A. Howell, S. W. Turner, and others, Union ex-soldiers of Blackford County, Indiana, for the enactment of the Indiana-Kansas service-pension law—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Daniel Bonye and 50 others, Union ex-soldiers of Blackford County, Indiana, for the enactment of the Indiana-Kansas pension law—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of John Bronstetter, Thomas J. Cartwright, and 100 others, Union ex-soldiers of Jay County, Indiana, for the enactment of the service-pension bill proposed by the Indiana Service-Pension Association—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of B. R. Dunn Post, No. 440, Grand Army of the Republic, H. M. Davis, adjutant, Department of Indiana, for the enactment of a service-pension law—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Alexander Trimble Post, No. 213, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Indiana, and of T. A. Baker and others, Union ex-soldiers of Red Key, Ind., for the enactment of a service-pension law and the repeal of the limitations of arrears—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, memorial of E. B. Lightfoot, a Union ex-soldier of Grant County, Indiana, for more liberal pension laws—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, memorial of the Indiana State Service-Pension Association and of the Kansas State Service-Pension Association, for the enactment of the Indiana-Kansas service pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Enoch Beals, John Ink, and 50 others, Union ex-soldiers of Grant County, Indiana, for the repeal of the limitation of the arrears of pensions—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. NIEDRINGHAUS: Protest of 697 citizens of St. Louis, members of the St. Louis Furniture Association, against the passage of the Conger bill taxing compound lard, declaring it will deprive thousands of laborers of employment if passed and will tax a healthy food product—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, protest of 118 members of the St. Louis Board of Trade, against the Conger bill, which imposes a tax on cotton-seed lard, which, if passed, will create a monopoly in behalf of the large packers of hogs—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, protest of 21 employes of the Wiggins Ferry Company, of St. Louis, Mo., against the passage of the Conger bill, which places a tax on compound lard—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, a protest of 15 citizens of St. Louis, Mo., and employes of the Flanagan Milling Company, against the same measure—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. O'DONNELL: Petition of 70 manufacturers and merchants of Battle Creek, Mich., asking the passage of the Torrey bankrupt bill—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. PETERS: Resolutions of the Board of Trade of Newton, Kans., for free ore from Mexico—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PUGSLEY: Petition from 49 voters of Scioto County, Ohio, for passage of service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RAINES: Petition of residents of Steuben County, New York, for free coinage of silver—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. SANFORD: Petition of 23 officers and members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Quaker Springs, Saratoga County, New York, praying for a law prohibiting the sale of fermented liquors within soldiers' homes, arsenals, recruiting stations, navy-yards, forts, and barracks—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of 122 farmers and others, residents of the Twentieth Congressional district of New York, for legislation to increase the duty on hay from $2 to $4 per ton—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of 79 residents of Quaker Street, Schenectady County, New York, for same relief—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SMITH, of Illinois: Memorial of Lodge 307, Farmers' Mutual Benefit Association, Pinckneyville, Ill., for abolition of national banks, remonetization of silver, etc.—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. STEPHENSON: Resolutions of the Pacific Board of Commerce, relative to Chinese immigration, to pass such laws as will prevent it—to the Select Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. STONE, of Missouri: Petition of Subordinate Union No. 6, Nevada, Mo., of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, asking that the laws be so amended that none but citizens of the United States be employed on Government work—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. STRUBLE: Resolutions of Farmers' Alliance No. 1305, Spencer, Clay County, Iowa, urging the passage of House bill 5353—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, resolutions adopted by William Baker Post, No. 298, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Iowa, urging the extension of the pension laws to include the widows and children of all Union soldiers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SWENEY: Remonstrance of J. H. Kuerzel and 24 others, citizens of Clayton County, Iowa, against the enactment of laws materially restricting immigration—to the Select Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, a petition of K. Tousey and 29 others, citizens of Nordness, Winneshiek County, Iowa, praying for an amendment to the Constitution of the United States requiring the election of United Senators and postmasters by the people—to the Select Committee on Reform in the Civil Service.

Also, petition of Amos O. Rowley, E. C. Stebbins, and 120 others, men and women of Chickasaw County, Iowa, praying for the enactment of more stringent laws against sending obscene or immoral books, papers, or pictures through the mails—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR: Petition of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Bellaire, Ohio, in favor of the passage of a law to prevent aliens from being employed on public works—to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petition of William McCreary and 193 others, citizens of Guernsey County, Ohio, in favor of the passage of an equitable service-pension law—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of William Soldert and 59 others, soldiers of Guernsey County, Ohio, praying for the passage of a service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of 30 citizens of Steubenville, Ohio, in favor of the restoration of silver with the same right of coinage as is now accorded to gold—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

Also, petition of Monthly Meeting of Friends of Harrison County, Ohio, officially signed, praying for the rejection of the bill to increase naval expenditures—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, petition of J. W. Smith and 111 others, citizens of Jefferson County, Ohio, praying for the passage of H. R. 5956, in favor of the appointment of a commission to investigate the alcoholic liquor traffic—to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, petition of J. W. R. Smith and 34 others, citizens of Jefferson County, Ohio, praying for the passage of H. R. 5978, to prohibit the transportation of liquors from any State or Territory or the District of Columbia into another State, contrary to the law—to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, petition of G. W. Lyett and 180 others, citizens of Jefferson County, Ohio, in favor of restricting foreign immigration into the United States—to the Select Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Hon. Thomas S. Lussock and 202 others, citizens of Guernsey County, Ohio, praying for the restoration of silver to its constitutional place as a money metal, with the same rights of coinage and legal tender as existed prior to 1873—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

Also, petition of A. G. Kaufman and 160 others, citizens of Jefferson County, Ohio, for restriction of foreign immigration into the United States—to the Select Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolutions of various posts of the Grand Army of the Republic, approving and indorsing an appeal to the loyal people of the United States and their Representatives in Congress, by Alvin P. Hovey, president of the Service-Pension Association of the United States of America, and praying the Fifty-first Congress of the United States to pass an act giving to every soldier, sailor, and marine who served in the Army or Navy of the United States between April, 1861, and July, 1865, for the period of sixty days or more, a service pension of $8 per month, and to all who served a period of exceeding eight hundred days an additional amount of 1 cent per day for each day's service exceeding that period, in accordance with the resolutions of the Grand Army of the Republic passed at Columbus, Ohio, in September, 1888, and Milwaukee, Wis., 1889—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. THOMPSON: Petition of 47 ex-Union soldiers of Scioto County, Ohio, for the passage of a service-pension law—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of 145 ex-Union soldiers of Jefferson County, Pennsylvania, for the passage of the per diem pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WILLIAMS, of Illinois: Petition of Captain Utt, on behalf of John H. Vincent's claim—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WILLIAMS, of Ohio: Memorial of Charles E. Louis and 42 others, in opposition to the passage of House bill 8278—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. WILSON, of Missouri: Petition of A. C. White, C. D. De Armond, George N. Dragoo, and 112 others, citizens of Fairfax, Mo., praying for the restoration of silver to its constitutional place as a money metal, with the same rights of coinage and legal tender as accorded to gold—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

Also, petition of Burroak Alliance, No. 88, Nodaway County, Missouri, earnestly asking for the passage of the Butterworth bill defining options and futures, the same being H. R. 5353—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. YODER: Petition of citizens of Allen County, Ohio, against the passage of House bill 8278, to amend an act to regulate commerce—to the Committee on Commerce.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, April 4, 1890.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I am instructed by the Committee on Rivers and Harbors to report the resolution which I send to the desk and ask its passage. It is a resolution of inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed that the previous question has been ordered upon certain pension bills, which must first be taken up. The Clerk will read the first bill.

CATLENA LYMAN.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 5206) granting an increase of pension to Catlena Lyman.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Catlena Lyman, widow of William C. Lyman, late surgeon, United States Navy, at the rate of $60 per month, in lieu of pension now allowed her.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman desire to discuss this bill?

Mr. KILGORE. I desire to make a statement in relation to it. There are four or five bills that have come over under the order of the House to be disposed of this morning.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that it was agreed that this bill should be debated for fifteen minutes on each side or that fifteen minutes on each side should be allowed for the discussion of this bill.

Mr. KILGORE. That is correct, but I am not insisting now on pursuing that order as far as I am concerned. Several other bills have come over under the same order. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. STONE] has charge of some of those bills. An order was made for two hours' debate upon those bills, one hour for each side, and he desires, I presume, to consume the time which is to be allowed to him, which I suppose will be one hour. Now, I am willing that these four or five bills shall all be taken up under the order of the House and that the time allowed for their discussion shall be given to the bills controlled by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. STONE]; and in view of that I have nothing to say myself upon this bill at this time.

Mr. LANE. Mr. Speaker, I wish to say, in reply to what the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] has stated, that there is nothing in common between this case and the other four bills to which he refers. He states that there were five bills brought over from last Friday evening under the order of the House, to be disposed of this morning, and he intimates that all those bills are of the same class and are to be considered together. I wish to say that this claims to be separate from the other four. They turn upon an entirely different question, and there is no reason why this one should be considered with them. This is the case of an increase for a widow. The ground of the increase is, namely, that her husband served in one capacity while he held rank in another, and when he died the widow drew the pension for the lower rank when, as a matter of fact, she should have drawn a pension for the service which her husband had actually rendered. This bill passed the Senate at last session and was reported favorably by the House committee and placed on the Calendar, but failed to be reached. In view of these facts, unless some gentleman wishes to discuss this particular case I ask that it be now put upon its passage.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Does this bill provide for a pension at the same rate that would have been allowed had the husband's commission been for the service he performed?

Mr. LANE. Not exactly. The regular pension for the service he was performing would have been $30 a month, but on account of the extraordinary services which he rendered it is proposed to grant the widow a pension of $50 a month, an increase of $20 a month above what she should have received under the law. Under the law she would be entitled to draw $30 a month, but in fact she has been drawing only $25 when she was entitled to $30; so that the Government will really lose nothing by this proposed increase.

Mr. FARQUHAR. What is the rank for which this widow has been drawing a pension?

Mr. LANE. The rank was "passed assistant surgeon," when it should have been surgeon.

Mr. FARQUHAR. What was the character of the service rendered?

Mr. LANE. This man was on the flag-ship with Admiral Farragut, which had yellow fever aboard, and he performed extraordinary services there. Admiral Farragut presented him a set of instruments in recognition of his meritorious services.

Mr. KILGORE. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LANE] insist upon the consideration of this bill separately?

Mr. LANE. Yes, sir. This bill has nothing at all to do with the other four. It rests upon a different principle entirely.

Mr. KILGORE. Well, I have no objection to its being considered separately. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. CHEADLE rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Indiana rise?

Mr. CHEADLE. I rise for the purpose of submitting some remarks on the pending measure.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LANE] has the floor.

Mr. LANE. I will yield the floor if any gentleman desires to discuss the bill. I thought there was no desire to debate the bill, as it has no connection whatever with the other four, but if any gentleman wishes to discuss it I will yield for that purpose.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understood that the arrangement was that fifteen minutes on each side should be allowed for debate upon this bill if desired, and that the other three bills should be discussed together for one hour.

Mr. LANE. The arrangement was that an hour on each side should be allowed for the discussion of the other four bills, and that on this bill there might be fifteen minutes' debate on each side. Nobody wishes to oppose this bill, as I understand.

Mr. LAWLER. There was no point made on this bill in the Committee of the Whole. The point was made on the others.

The SPEAKER. The arrangement seems to have been for one hour of debate on each side upon the four bills.

Mr. LANE. Yes, sir; but this is not one of the four.

The SPEAKER. And fifteen minutes on each side upon this bill?

Mr. LANE. Yes. Now, if any one wishes to oppose this bill I am willing to yield the floor; but nobody does, so far as I know.

The SPEAKER. If no one wishes to oppose it, the question is on ordering the bill to be engrossed and read a third time.

other fifteen. Brevity is said to be the soul of wit, and perhaps I ought not to speak of that feature of the testimony, and I would not if, in being brief, he had also been more specific and not so general in his statements. One of the affidavits is as follows:

Michael Shea was insane most of the time since he had brain fever, while a soldier in the late war. I treated him when he was home on furlough. His mother took the best care of him. It is my opinion he came to his death from disease contracted while serving as a soldier in the late war.

That is the whole of that affidavit. The doctor was mistaken in his opinion as to the cause of death, for it was afterwards ascertained by officers of the Pension Department that Mr. Shea was crushed or suffocated in a snow-slide. The other affidavit of this doctor is substantially to the same effect, except he says:

Michael wandered away and got killed while suffering from a disease of the mind caused from a fever he contracted after one of the battles during the war.

Now, that is the entire testimony by which this claim is supported. If there is any other, I could not find it. There are three or four other affidavits among the papers made by the neighbors of Mrs. Shea, but they relate wholly to other matters, such as the marriage of the parents, the birth of the soldier, his residence with the mother both before and after the war, and to things of that sort.

There is also a petition signed by thirty-nine ex-soldiers, asking that a pension be granted this lady. But not one of them, neighbor or soldier, has testified that Mr. Shea was insane or of unsound mind. The whole case rests on the vague, brief, unsatisfactory statements of Dr. Bullock. It is remarkable that no comrade of this man could be found to say a word in support of this case. Where are the regimental surgeons? Where are all his officers and comrades, that not one can be found to speak? Where are all the neighbors, that no one could be found to give a full and complete statement of this case? The attorney who filed Mrs. Shea's application was Louis K. Gillson, of Chicago. On October 28, 1884, he wrote the Commissioner of Pensions, withdrawing from the case, stating that he had begun it under a misapprehension of the facts. He said that he did not know when he filed the application that the soldier's death was due to a snow-slide, in which "upwards of a dozen other persons who are admitted to have been of sound mind were overwhelmed with him."

Mr. Gillson concludes his letter as follows:

I regret that I have been instrumental in causing such a case to be placed on file, but can say that my present knowledge, obtained by correspondence with a gentleman who was at the place when the soldier lost his life, is quite different from that derived from the statement made to me by the claimant and her friends. I think Mrs. Shea honestly believes herself entitled to a pension, and I do not charge that she sought to pervert the facts, but she took a peculiar view of them.

Now, Mr. Speaker, here is a man with anything but a reputable record as a soldier. Here is a claim based upon his service. The theory is that he became insane from disease contracted in the Army, and wandered away in a demented condition and lost his life in the mountains of Colorado. I would not like to say that going to Colorado is an evidence of insanity, for there were sane men there with this soldier who likewise lost their lives by the same disaster. Besides, there are gentlemen in Congress who think Colorado is a pretty good place to go to. The evidence supporting the claim is exceedingly unsatisfactory. It can be allowed arbitrarily, but no just theory upon which pensions should be granted can justify it. Unreflecting and ill-considered sentiment is the only basis for such a claim.

There are some pathetic letters among the files from Mrs. Shea. She is poor and growing old. In one of her letters, dated March 30, 1885, she says she lost two sons in the war—William and Michael. She says both boarded with her before the war, one paying $3, and the other $1 per week, thus contributing to her support. Of Michael she says he "was more or less insane until his death one year ago. He wandered away and got killed in one of his spells."

Of the other son, she says:

My son William was wounded in the ankle and one day his foot caught in the stairs. He fell down and broke his neck. So you see I lost two sons by the war.

Mr. Speaker, it is against the passage of such bills as these I enter my protest. Nearly all these thousands of claims coming into Congress have been rejected by the Department specially charged with investigating them as being without merit. These rejected claimants get the ears of Representatives in Congress, and bills are slipped through by wholesale. It is unjust to the soldier, the deserving claimant, and the tax-payer. And right here, Mr. Speaker, I desire to address some general observations to the House on this subject of pensions.

It is a question about which politicians generally, and members of Congress especially, are oversensitive, and I fear my utterances on this occasion will not, in their judgment, be in accord with the admonitions of prudent politics. But I can not help that; I do not intend longer to be coerced by men whose judgment or whose personal interests would carry me along a line of action which they themselves place on no higher grounds than that of mere prudential policy. I think the time has come when the truth should be known or rather when the truth already known should be proclaimed from these Halls. I think the time has come when the visionary theories of impractical sentimentalists, when the artful dogmatism of demagogues, and the pathetic appeals of political trimmers, when the insatiable greed of selfish monopoly, and the aggressive arrogance of the Treasury looter should cease to dominate the Congress of the United States or longer to suppress the independent and self-respecting members of this body.

I give it as my deliberate judgment, I state it as a fact, that no people on earth, since governments were instituted among men, have been so despoiled and plundered in the name of patriotism and under the guise of pension laws as have been the people of the United States.

Mr. Speaker, it is the duty of every man of proper age and physical ability to render military service to his Government when an emergency demands it. I state this as true in a general way, without reference to possible exceptions, in the sense in which it should be applied to our conditions in this country. Patriotism inspires a prompt and voluntary performance of this service, but in the absence of willing hands to grasp the sword the Government has the right when occasion demands to exact even a reluctant performance of this public duty. The Government has the right to offer such rewards and inducements as it may deem expedient to secure voluntary enlistments into its military service, and whatever it promises on this account, being in the nature of a contract, should be kept with scrupulous fidelity. Whatever it offers in the way of wages, bounties, pensions, or whatever else, should be paid to the uttermost farthing. That much the soldier has an undoubted right to demand. But beyond that he has no legal right. The Government is obliged, in the exercise of good faith, to go to the utmost limit of its promise, and the soldier has the right to demand that the Government shall do so. But at that point the question of legal obligation upon the one hand and the question of legal right upon the other are exhausted. I do not say that the Government should stop there; I do not say it should not go further in voluntary beneficence. My statement is that when the Government has performed its express promises it has discharged its legal obligations, and the men to whom those promises were made have no lawful claims beyond them.

Promises of the kind I speak of made by the Government, however, are voluntary; they are not necessary. For, as I have said, the Government has the right to command the service of its citizens when there exists a public need for it, and it is the duty of the citizen to render it. I hold it to be the duty of the citizen in times of desperate emergency to respond to the call of his Government, even without immediate regard to the question of compensation. Certainly he has a right to be compensated for any service, but where the emergency is imminent and the necessity immediate and pressing, the question of compensation may be deferred even until after the service has been completed. In such a case the citizen has a right afterwards to demand ample compensation for his service according to its nature. In such a case there may be legitimate controversy between the individual and the public as to the extent of the compensation to be awarded. But when compensation has been made the subject of antecedent contract, where it has been previously agreed upon, there is no ground for controversy. When the measure of compensation is fixed by prior agreement, the public obligation is discharged and the individual claim is satisfied by the execution of the contract.

I have said this much because there seems to be an idea abroad that those who have served in the armies of the United States, especially during the war of the rebellion, have some right or claim against the Government beyond and in excess of any promise or agreement made by the Government at the time and as the basis of enlistment and as the consideration for the service, a right or claim which it would be bad faith on the part of the Government not to recognize. I utterly repudiate and deny the existence in legal contemplation of any such right or claim.

Waiving any abstract question of duty, the fact is that every man who enlisted in the armies of the United States during our civil war did so under a contract with the Government. The Government proposed to pay certain wages, to furnish certain rations, to pay certain bounties, and in given contingencies to pay certain pensions to those who should volunteer to render service in its armies, and as the consideration for that service. So far as the Government proposed or agreed, by any form of action recognized as binding, to pay any pension to any volunteer or his dependents, it is the solemn duty of the Government to observe and execute that agreement in every particular. But I repeat, what I have already said, that when that is done the Government is discharged of its legal obligations. If the Government does not see proper to stop short at that point and close the books, if it feels that it ought under the circumstances to go further and do more than it promised, well and good. I do not complain that it has seen proper to go further and do more than it promised; I heartily approve it. I believe there is a moral obligation upon the Government, as binding in conscience as if it were expressed in contract, to care for those who have been disabled in bearing its arms. I believe it would be a public shame if the Government refused or neglected to provide with reasonable liberality for the support of those who suffered permanent and serious injury while engaged in its military service or for the needy dependents of those who perished in its defense. I should have felt humiliated if the Government had refused to act with noble generosity in this behalf. Still it must not be forgotten that whatever the Government—that is, the people of the United States—may do or shall do along this line in excess of the original contract is a mere voluntary beneficence, and the recipient must accept it, not as the fruit of legal right, but as the generous gift of an appreciative patriotism.

How far the Government should go in this direction, how far it should extend these voluntary gifts beyond the obligations of its contract, is a question of public policy to be determined by the disposition and the will of the people. For one I think we have gone far enough. That there are minor inequalities and inequities in the existing laws which should be adjusted, I have no doubt; that there are administrative defects in the existing system which should be removed, I am certain; but I am equally without doubt and equally certain that we should call a sharp and peremptory halt on the galloping gait at which we have been riding this pension horse in recent years. I think every consideration of personal patriotism, of national pride, of decent regard for the interests of the great toiling masses who bear this enormous burden without at all sharing its benefits, requires of us that we should not dishonor generosity by excess nor make noble charity an excuse for public plunder.

Mr. Speaker, before we determine what more we should do, it would be well to recall what we have done. During the war, in 1861 and 1863, a comprehensive and liberal system of pension laws was enacted. Since the termination of the war, since the great armies called into the field to prosecute it have been disbanded and returned to the walks of civil life, a great mass of additional legislation has been enacted, always increasing in scope and liberality. For instance, pensions for the loss of both hands have been increased from $25 to $100 per month; for the loss of both feet from $20 to $72; for the loss of both eyes, or of one eye, the other having been previously destroyed, from $25 to $72; for the loss or total disability of one hand and one foot from $20 to $36; for deafness from $13 to $30, and so on ad infinitum. I can not discuss the acts in detail. Pensions are provided for almost every possible disability, serious or inconsequential, whether the result of wounds or disease, and ranging in amounts from $2 to $100 per month. The laws are as liberal with respect to the persons they embrace as in the sums they give.

Pensions are not only provided for soldiers who suffer a disability while living, but also for their widows and minor children under sixteen years of age, and for dependent fathers, mothers, minors, brothers, and sisters of soldiers who fell in battle or have died during or since the war of wounds received or disease contracted while on duty. The only important limitation fixed by the law is that the death or disability must have been the result of the soldier's legitimate service while in line of duty. And that one limitation in the administration of the law has been most liberally construed. It has been held that an infantryman who shot himself with a pistol, a species of arms not authorized in that branch of the service, while out on a foraging expedition in pursuit of a farmer's hog, was wounded in line of duty. It has been held that a man injured in a wrestling match was disabled in line of duty, on the theory that he was taking necessary exercise.

It has been held that a man shot at a dancing frolic, while two of his companions, rivals no doubt for the smiles of some nymph of the night, were engaged in combat, was wounded in line of duty. It has been held that a man who deserted the Confederate army, doffed the gray and put on the blue, was entitled to a pension, notwithstanding a necessary doubt as to which master he served when the germ of disease was contracted. It has been held likewise that a man who deserted his own flag, the flag of the Union, and abandoned dishonorably the cause he was sworn to defend, was entitled to share in this indiscriminate distribution of public money. I assert on the authority of General Black's report while Commissioner of Pensions that in no other country on earth can an instance be found where a pension is allowed for services dishonorably terminated or marked by a disreputable record.

Oh, yes, Mr. Speaker, these liberal laws are most liberally construed. And they are liberally administered. We have a great department devoted exclusively to the business of auditing and settling claims for pensions. It employs a force of more than 1,500 persons, who are directly engaged in the settlement of claims. In addition to these there are distributing agents located at convenient points throughout the country, and more than 2,500 surgeons stationed in all sections of the country, whose duty it is to examine applicants and aid them and the Department in adjusting claims as speedily as possible. The Government maintains this enormous establishment, employing a force exceeding 4,000 people, at an annual expense of more than three and one-quarter millions of dollars. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, the Government expended through the Pension Department alone $89,131,968.44, which was one-third of the total public expenditures for that year. This year the expenditures will amount to more than $100,000,000.

Up to June 30, 1889, the Government had paid in the aggregate on account of pensions the enormous sum of $1,134,993,775.63. In addition to maintaining this vast establishment for the consideration and adjustment of pension claims, the doors of Congress are always open, wide open, to those who have been denied at the Department and come here in search of special relief.

Besides all this it should be remembered that there are laws upon the statute-books which give to ex-soldiers who have been disabled a preference over all other citizens in appointments to the civil service of the Government. Again, by existing laws preferences and great advantages are given to ex-soldiers, their widows, and minor orphans in entering homesteads upon the public lands of the United States. They are authorized to make homestead entries in person or by agent on any of the public lands of the United States, including reserved sections along the lines of land-grant railroads or adjacent to any public work of the United States. The law provides that the time which the soldier who makes an entry, or in whose name it is made, served in the Army shall be deducted from the time generally required to perfect title, or, if discharged on account of any disability incurred in the line of duty, then the whole term of enlistment shall be deducted, without reference to the time actually served.

Mr. Speaker, the generosity shown by the people of the United States to those who have served in their armies is unexampled in the annals of mankind. It is not only without a parallel, but there is nothing in history which approaches it.

Still the cry is for more. There is a class of people in this country dominating one of our great political parties who are interested in having high taxation. In order to maintain high taxation, that there may be an excuse for it, they are forced to create occasion for large expenditures. They found the ex-soldiers of the country in condition to be approached. The Grand Army of the Republic had been organized for social and benevolent purposes, and hundreds of thousands of men who had borne our arms were connected with it. Here was an opportunity. They were approached by cunning artifice and misled by deceptive sophistry. Cautiously and gradually the poison of selfish desire has been breathed upon this benevolent organization until it has become permeated by it. They have been led step by step to make this demand and that growing bolder and more aggressive from year to year, until the Grand Army of the Republic has degenerated into a great military-political organization, whose chief object now seems to be to extort pensions from the Government.

The plutocrat has locked hands with the pretorian. One desires exorbitant taxation in order that monopoly may be created or maintained and tribute wrung from the hand of industry; the other desires exorbitant taxation in order that redundant revenues may be raised for gratuitous distribution. They dictate the nomination of candidates and dominate the policy of parties. Weak men are intimidated, timid men are overawed, and demagogues crook the pliant hinges of the knee that the thrift of office may follow personal fawning. Public men of all degrees and of all parties are flattered or driven into acquiescence. Some demands are evaded or delayed by subterfuge, but scarcely a man in public life can be found bold enough openly to oppose them.

The Presidency is put up and sold to the highest bidder. Thank God, there was one grand man who declined to bid for it. [Applause.] He turned proudly from the temptation, no matter whether the bribe was offered to him by the velvet hand of the plutocrat or the mailed hand of the pretorian. He stood for the people and the right, and, though he fell, he went down bearing the deathless reputation of wise and incorruptible statesmanship and enjoying the respect of every honest man in America. [Applause on the Democratic side.] Mr. Speaker, Didius Julianus bought the Roman crown from the pretorian cohorts of that ancient empire and paid for it in glittering gold. Benjamin Harrison is the Didius Julianus of this century. He bought the Presidency. He paid so much in cash, raised by Wanamaker and Quay and distributed through men like Dudley to one class of people; the remainder he promised to pay in largess to another class. It was a princely promise he made. If he keeps faith the scruples of the apothecary must not be used when the demands of the Grand Army are weighed on the scales of the Treasury.

I know he shrinks now from the responsibilities of his promise. I know that all sorts of flimsy subterfuges are being resorted to to evade it. And no wonder. It would be a rare thing for a man who keeps public office to keep faith with those who sell it. But there is no escape. The President and his party must keep their promises or break them without excuse. He has both Houses of Congress at his back, rules have been adopted which prevent obstruction, and there is no reason why every promise made should not be kept. It will not do to keep one or two and break the rest. If you are honest men, if you did not mean to deceive, you must perform your whole contract, and not merely a part of it. What is it you promised to do? What are the extraordinary promises you held out to seduce the Grand Army of the Republic and with which you obtained its support in the great struggle of 1888? What are the promises you made which that organization has a right to exact of you the complete performance of? What are the demands it has the right, by virtue of solemn contract, to make upon you? Those demands have been formulated and presented to you here without any diplomacy of manner and with abundant emphasis of expression. What are they? Here are some of them:

1. The minimum pension now granted is $2 per month. You are required to raise the minimum to $4 per month. It is estimated by the present Commissioner of Pensions that a statute of that kind will add $668,000 to the public burden.

2. You are required to pass a bill granting pensions to all ex-prisoners of war, and in addition to pay them the sum of $2 per day each during the entire period of their respective imprisonments. It is estimated by the present Commissioner of Pensions that such a law would require the immediate expenditure of $7,500,000 to pay the per diem of $2 during imprisonment, and would thereafter entail an annual burden of $3,768,600. This bill, I am informed, has been already favorably reported by the House Committee on Invalid Pensions.

3. You are required to pass the dependent parents and widows bills and other dependent bills. The present Commissioner of Pensions intimates that such laws would entail an additional public burden of $35,670,000.

4. There is an existing statute which provides that arrears should not be allowed on claims filed after July 1, 1880, but that the pension on such claims, when allowed, should run from the date of the application instead of from the date of the alleged incurrence of the disability. It was supposed by the authors of that measure, passed years ago, that every soldier who left the Army conscious of a disability would have his application filed by 1880, and as abuses of the arrears act were growing with alarming rapidity it was deemed absolutely necessary to fix some limitation upon the granting of arrears. Hence the law to which I have referred was passed. But that was before the Grand Army of the Republic became a great political factor. Now that organization comes and demands of you, Mr. President Harrison and gentlemen of this Republican Congress, that you repeal that limitation act and grant arrears to all who have had pensions allowed them since 1880 or whose pensions may be allowed hereafter, without regard to the date of application. The present Commissioner of Pensions estimates that such a law would require the expenditure of $471,000,000.

5. Not only do they demand that the minimum pension be raised from $2 to $4; not only do they demand the ex-prisoners bill; not only do they demand the dependent parents and widows bill; not only do they demand the repeal of the limitation-of-arrears act, but they come also and demand that you pass a service-pension bill. Such a bill, the present Commissioner of Pensions estimates, would entail an additional public burden of $144,000,000 per year.

These are the demands made by the Grand Army of the Republic as the conditions upon which it offered its support in the memorable contest of 1888, and these are the demands accepted and agreed to by Mr. Harrison and his party associates. It was an immense obligation to assume, but it was assumed, and it remains to be seen how faithfully you will keep it.

That is your business. For myself I made no such promises. I followed down to defeat the banner of a man who refused to accede to any such demands and declined to make any such promises. I speak upon this question from the high ground of untrammelled independence. I have no campaign promises to keep, no election debts to pay. I shall be influenced in my speech and conduct alone by my sense of justice and my conception of public duty. Above all things I desire to be just—just not only to the soldier and sailor who have served their country in any of its wars, but just likewise to those hard-pressed and toiling millions who bear the heavy burdens of the nation, and who also serve their country in those industrial pursuits which develop it and make it great. I believe in generous pensions; I advocate them. But I believe we have been generous enough already. Under the laws as they exist to-day every soldier who suffered a disability in the line of duty can obtain a pension. Under the laws as they exist to-day the dependent relatives of every soldier who has died from wounds or disease incurred in the line of duty can obtain a pension.

The pensions granted are liberal. The machinery provided and employed for administering the law is ample. The facilities furnished for prosecuting claims are complete. Speaking for myself alone, without authority to speak for any one else, and speaking I know against the judgment of many of my party associates, I declare that I have gone as far in this direction as I intend to go; and I represent one of the largest ex-Union soldier districts represented upon this floor.

Mr. Speaker, as I have heretofore said, I believe that this Government has been already generous to the verge of fault. But to hear the pension agents talk—these pension lawyers to whom the Commissioner says he pays in fees for collecting claims more than $1,500,000 per year; to hear the extravagant claims put forth by the ex-soldier organizations and by their official organs; to hear the florid and ill-considered declarations uttered by many gentlemen upon this floor, often with a multitude of dramatic contortions, one unacquainted with the facts would suppose that this was the closest and stingiest nation on the earth. Such an one would suppose that there is a great army of ex-soldiers, lame, halt, and sick, without the means to live or the ability to earn them, limping about ignored and neglected by an ungrateful people. Such an one would suppose that at the beginning of the war men, inspired alone by patriotic motives, rushed to the front with impetuous haste, filling the ranks of our armies with buoyant life and rosy health, while at the end of the war there was nothing left but grave-yards and hospitals. But who familiar with the facts does not know that these pictures are extravagant and overdrawn. They are painted by those who deal in exaggerated metaphor. They are pathetic, but unreliable.

Certain it is that our military history is replete with shining examples of heroic effort and daring exploit, the story of which recounted stirs the blood like a bugle blast; but it is not true that every man who bore our arms was a hero or put on the uniform of a soldier purely from the impulse of patriotism. Certain it is that much was endured and much suffered on the march, in bivouac, and on the red field of battle; but it is not true that every man who bore our arms suffered grievously in person or estate.

I desire in this connection before I close to put in the record a few statistics which may prove interesting and possibly instructive. In the report of the Commissioner of Pensions for the year 1888 I find a mass of statistics compiled by James S. Cowden and James D. Holman, special statisticians, under the direction of the Commissioner himself. I have compared a large part of these statistics with those compiled from official sources in the War Department by Mr. Spofford, the Librarian of Congress, and find that they substantially agree. From these statistics I learn that the total number of men furnished by all the States to the Union armies during the war from 1861 to 1865, for all purposes, was 2,778,304. This entire number, however, did not bear arms. By analyzing the statistics I make it out that the men under arms, that is the fighting force, exclusive of the regular Army, numbered 2,514,670. The remainder were otherwise employed. Now, of these 2,514,670 men, 1,776,995 are set down in the tables as "bounty men." These bounties were of two kinds, those paid by the Government and those paid by the local authorities.

The United States paid in bounties $300,223,500 and the local authorities paid $285,941,030, making the total bounties $586,164,530. I also find from the reports that the average service of pension soldiers was two years and three months, and I take it that that will not be far from the general average. If any one is curious to know how much of this bounty each man received on the average and how much the share of each would amount to per month during the term of his service, he can discover it by resorting to very simple mathematical processes. Whatever it was, it was in addition to the regular compensation of the soldier.

There is another curious fact. In this Army of 2,514,670 men there were 123,190 substitutes, that is, men hired to enter the service. As I understand it, these are exclusive of substitutes hired to take the place of drafted men. Now it appears from a table prepared by Mr. Spofford in 1889 that there were 119,954 men who were put into the service as drafted men or as their substitutes. Add the 123,190 substitutes to the 119,954 drafted men, and we have 243,144 men of those two classes. Now, whether they are included in the 1,776,995 "bounty men," I do not know. If they are not and we should add them to the "bounty men" we would have a total of 2,019,139 men who received either public or private bounties as an inducement to enter the service or else were drafted. Subtract the 2,019,139 men from the whole fighting force of 2,514,670 men and we will have left 495,531 men who entered the Army without pecuniary inducement. This latter number would be increased, of course, if the 243,144 substitutes and drafted men are included among those designated in the tables as "bounty men." It also appears that 199,105 men deserted.

These tables support my statement that although a wild wave of patriotic excitement swept the country when the call to arms was sounded, and tens of thousands sprang instantly into line, still every man who shouldered a musket did not do so from purely patriotic motives. And I will venture the assertion that drafted men, that hired substitutes, that men who thought more of the bounty than of the flag, will not be the last to apply for a pension nor the least importunate in urging their claims. I do not mean to say that every man to whom a bounty was offered and who accepted it enlisted alone for the sake of the bounty. I have no doubt that thousands who received bounties would have enlisted just as promptly if none had ever been offered; but I feel equally sure that there were other thousands who would never have enlisted at all except for the bounty. But when we come to consider these new claims put forth on behalf of soldiers and when, in that connection, we come to consider what has been already paid to them, it is immaterial whether a particular soldier belongs to one of the classes referred to or the other. It is important simply to know that these bounties were paid.

In the tables of Mr. Spofford for 1889 I also find some interesting statistics on the casualties of the war. From those statistics I learn that during the war 61,362 men were killed in battle and 34,727 died of wounds received. Treat all these as killed, add them, and the death loss in battle will aggregate 96,089. That represents the number of men slain during the war.

The same tables also show that during the war 183,287 men died of disease. Add those to the number killed, and the total death loss from all causes amounts to 279,376.

I take it that all these did not have wives or dependent relatives entitled to pensions on their account. I personally knew of some who did not. I venture to say that not over 200,000 of that number had wives or dependent relatives, and that pensions have not been granted to the relatives of more than that number of those who lost their lives during their service.

But there is another and still larger class entitled to pensions, namely, those who were wounded or disabled, but did not die. I have had no means of ascertaining with certainty the number either so wounded or diseased. Statistics of that character have not been preserved with reference to the civil war. But I can approximate it by comparison. There are such statistics with reference to other wars. From the records of the War Department Mr. Spofford has compiled a table relative to the war of 1812, from which it appears that our military force in that war consisted of 471,622 men. The number killed during the war was 1,877 and the number wounded was 3,737. He has also prepared a similar table for the Mexican war, from which it appears that the number killed and dying of wounds was 2,501 and the number wounded was 5,522. It will be observed that the number wounded was about double the number killed. Applying the same ratio to the civil war, that is two wounded to one killed, the number wounded, who survived their injuries, would be 192,178.

Adopting the same basis for estimates with reference to those who left the Army diseased, that is, two for every one who died, we will have 376,574 men accredited to that account.

Now, taking these figures as a basis upon which to calculate the probable number killed, wounded, and diseased in any degree during the war, the account may be thus stated:

Killed.....	96,089
Died of disease.....	183,287
Left the Army wounded.....	192,178
Left the Army diseased.....	376,574
Total.....	848,128

That constitutes one-third of the entire Army, of all lines and of all lengths of service, from beginning to end. Many wounds were slight and many were entirely cured. Many who left the Army with diseases of a temporary nature shook them off and were restored to health. Many of the dead left no wives or dependent relatives. But let that pass. I desire to present these estimates upon a liberal scale.

One step further. By reference to the last report of the Commissioner of Pensions, I find that up to June 30, 1889, applications for pensions have been filed as follows:

By ex-soldiers of the late war.....	730,642
By widows and dependent relatives.....	407,943
Total.....	1,138,585

By reference to the same report I find that pensions have been allowed on these applications as follows:

To ex-soldiers.....	440,097
To widows, etc.....	263,392
Total.....	703,489

Now, I submit that, if my estimates as to the number wounded and diseased are approximately correct and keeping in view the facts that many who died left no dependents and many who were wounded and diseased have since recovered, it must follow that the number of pensions already granted equals the number entitled to pensions under the theory of our laws.

But to-day there are in the Pension Department something like half a million of unsettled claims, and every day that number is augmented by new applications. There seems to be no apparent end to it. Hundreds of claims are being allowed every day. During the last fiscal year 145,298 pension certificates were issued. But as one goes out adjusted another comes in for adjudication. The further we get from the war the more burdensome it becomes. Twenty-five years have elapsed since the war was ended. One would suppose that nearly every man who left the Army with a pensionable wound or disease, and nearly every dependent relative of those who lost their lives, would have filed an application by 1890, during the first fifteen years after the termination of the war.

On December 7, 1876, General James A. Garfield, then a Representative from the State of Ohio, while discussing the pension appropriation bill for the ensuing fiscal year, then pending before the House, made this statement:

My idea is, that we have reached and perhaps passed the summit of appropriations for this object; and it took a number of years to develop, to get through with the regular form of laws to admit to the rolls the persons entitled to pensions, and that the time must necessarily come when we shall pass the climax and begin to go downward. I suppose we have already passed the maximum.

That bill carried $28,533,000, which was less than the bill for the preceding year. General Garfield then thought the summit had been passed.

But the fact is that the applications filed since 1880, during the last ten years, exceed those filed during the fifteen years preceding 1880 by more than a quarter of a million, and vastly more claims have been allowed since 1880 than were allowed prior thereto. The number of pensioners on the rolls to-day is more than double the number on the rolls in 1880, notwithstanding the fact that during these years since the war 300,000 names have been dropped from the rolls by reason of death or other causes.

The total disbursements made through the Pension Office during the fiscal year ending in 1879 were $33,780,526.19. The total disbursements made during the last fiscal year were $89,131,968.44, showing an increase of about 133 per cent. in ten years. The enormous annual increase in the public burden on account of pensions may be illustrated by reference to the expenditures made during the last three or four years. In 1886 the expenditures amounted to $64,584,270.45, in 1887 to $74,815,486.85, in 1888 to $79,646,146.37, in 1889 to $89,131,968.44, and this year we will appropriate $100,000,000. Still the applications pour in; still the pension-rolls lengthen; and still the expense increases from year to year by millions.

Mr. Speaker, I can not tell with certainty the amounts expended for pensions in other countries. I have found one table, prepared by Mr. Spofford in 1879, from which it appears that the aggregate sum then being paid for pensions by five European countries, namely, Great Britain, France, Germany, Austria, and Belgium, was $31,002,050. I have no doubt that the United States is to-day paying more for pensions than all the other nations of the earth combined.

We hear much about the enormous and almost insupportable burdens imposed upon the peoples of Europe in the maintenance of their great standing armies. Austria maintains a standing army of 271,596 men at an annual cost of $55,116,248. France maintains a standing army of 541,472 men at an annual cost of $111,689,400. Great Britain maintains a regular army of 149,667 men at an annual cost of $83,515,640. Russia maintains a standing army of 871,764 men at an annual cost of $131,649,250.

Now, our regular Army costs us $38,522,436. Add that to our pension expenditures, and what may be termed the military establishment of the United States will cost us from $135,000,000 to $140,000,000 for the current year. I do not see wherein we have occasion to congratulate ourselves or bemoan the unhappy fate of others.

Mr. Speaker, I shall not longer detain the House. My chief purpose has been to enter my protest in unmistakable language against what I conceive to be indefensible extravagances in the distribution of public gratuities. I repeat at the close what I said at the beginning, that I favor a liberal system of pension laws, and I desire that they should be liberally administered. But when I reflect that nearly $600,000,000 in bounties were distributed among those who bore our arms at the beginning of their service; when I reflect that they are given preference in appointments to the civil service by express enactment of law; when I reflect that they are given extraordinary advantages in acquiring titles to the public lands of the United States; when I reflect that under the laws as they exist every soldier who suffered a disability in the service, and every widow, minor child, and dependent relative of a soldier whose death can be traced to his service, is already entitled to a liberal pension; when I reflect that more than $1,000,000,000 have been paid out in pensions in less than twenty-five years and that our annual expenditures on this account have already reached $100,000,000 and continue still to increase from year to year, I think it is time some one should call a halt and say to those who come clamoring with fresh demands that we have done enough.

I favor liberality, but I am unalterably opposed to any form of extravagance or excess. I have a large soldier constituency, but soldiers are not the only people I represent. There are others to be remembered, others towards whom I must be just, others whose interests I must not forget. I do not complain of laws already upon the statute-books, but when you are asked to vote additional gratuities I call upon you to remember and have some regard for the tax-payers of the country who bear these enormous burdens. I ask you to remember that the great industrial classes are under thick shadows, which bode nothing but evil to them. [Applause.] I ask you to remember that labor is poorly paid and greatly distressed. I ask you to remember the mortgages piled mountain high on the homes of our Western farmers, who are to-day, in many sections, burning their gathered crops for lack of a market and because they are without means to purchase other fuel.

I ask you to remember these things as you go along. Ay, more, I turn from the President and the legislator, from demagogues of all complexions in public place who vie with each other for mastery, to the soldier himself. From the hired substitute, from the deserter, from the bounty-jumper, from those who were unworthy, I expect no generous response. I do not appeal to such. I appeal to the real soldier, to those of high courage, whose valorous deeds have made glorious the pages of our military history. I appeal to those who, if they had lived in France during the sanguinary years of the first empire, would have made history in the ranks of the Old Guard, or, if they had been at Balaklava, would have ridden smiling down into the red valley of death singing the war song of the immortal Six Hundred. I appeal to them to illustrate by their example the true character of the American soldiery. A good soldier must be a good citizen. A hero in war should be a patriot in peace. A brave man can not be mercenary. It is hard to believe that those whose fearless hands bore the flag on perilous fields can degenerate into an unreasoning rabble of pension-mongers. I appeal to them to stand in the way and preserve the honor of the American soldier as a precious heritage to the children of the Republic. I appeal to them to see to it that the splendor of their achievements shall not be dimmed by the ignoble vice of sordid selfishness.

Turn from the glittering bribe thy scornful eye,
Nor sell for gold what gold should never buy.

[Prolonged applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MORRILL. Mr. Speaker, I have no desire at this time to enter into a general discussion of the pension question, but it seems to me it is only proper that I should say a word in defense of the Committee on Invalid Pensions, whose action has been attacked by the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. BUCHANAN, of New Jersey. I rise to a question of order. The congratulations being extended by the gentleman's party on the other side on the sentiments just uttered disturb the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BURROWS in the chair). The House will be in order.

Mr. MORRILL. It must be evident to every member of this House that it would be a matter of utter impossibility to so frame a general pension law as to meet all of the meritorious cases which would naturally arise under it. Cases arise and are presented daily of every conceivable shape; they come in every possible form—cases that are isolated, that are different in their character from any other cases that can come up or that have ever been considered by the Pension Department; and it is for this purpose alone, for the purpose of making enactments to meet such cases, that special bills are brought before Congress, and that thousands upon thousands of such bills are presented at each session of Congress to the Committees on Invalid Pensions of the House and Senate.

These cases are carefully examined by the committee, and the merits of the case are set forth in reports as briefly as possible, and each individual case is decided upon its own merits. The committee exerts, in the consideration of such cases, its best judgment and gives to each all the time possible. But I know, Mr. Speaker, that there are occasionally cases which pass through the committee without merit, though from my own long experience on the committee I am satisfied that not more than one in ten is an improper case, or, in fact, is a case without great merit. Nine-tenths of all of the claims reported by the committee, I am satisfied, ought to be allowed; and it is a fact, and all of the old members of the House are aware of it, that the House has again and again, not only ratified the action of the committee, but has even gone beyond the recommendations of the committee in granting liberal pensions in such cases.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the cases referred to by the gentleman from Missouri, and selected by him as sample cases, will be considered in detail by the House. In the cases to which the gentleman refers, and which he has thus selected, it seems to me he has been singularly unfortunate. The case of Esther G. Bryant is a case where the husband of the claimant died in the hospital while in the service. She afterwards contracted an unfortunate marriage, and subsequently secured a divorce from her second husband on grounds which are fully set forth in the report of the committee. Under the circumstances in this case the committee deemed it entirely proper that she should be restored to the pension-rolls. And in this connection I desire to say that for many years that was the general law, namely, that a widow of a soldier who was receiving a pension, but who afterwards married, and the pension was thereby withdrawn, should, on the death of the second husband or on her divorce from him, be allowed restoration to the pension-rolls. In fact, I think it will be generally conceded that good morals will sustain such a law; and I believe it ought to be the general law at present. As the law now stands it tends to discourage marriage and is against good morals.

But this soldier died in the hospital, his widow receiving a pension on account of his death; afterwards she remarried, was unfortunate in her second marriage, a divorce followed, and the committee simply restored her to the rolls. Again and again have the committee recommended similar bills, and time after time has the House ratified the action of the committee.

In the next case, that of Ellen Shea, I will leave the defense of that to the able gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LANE], the member of the committee who reported the bill. I simply desire to defend the committee against the charge of hasty or improper action; for I know from my own personal experience that the most patient and painstaking investigation has been given in all of these cases by the committee. It is impossible, of course, for the full committee to take up the papers in each case and examine them, because there are such numbers of cases pending. If that were done but very few could be reached for consideration. To each member of the committee have been assigned certain cases for examination; and each member has taken the evidence in the particular case assigned, carefully examined it in all its details, and reported the bills favorably which are believed to be meritorious. We have had certain rules of action, certain precedents have been established, and we have endeavored in the consideration of all of these cases to apply these rules of action to them as they came up.

I have no desire, Mr. Speaker, to say anything further than to say that no committee of this House has ever labored more earnestly, more conscientiously, to discharge their full duty than has the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. RANDALL], who reported one of the cases which is in controversy.

Mr. RANDALL, of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, the first bill referred to by the gentleman from Missouri was the bill (H. R. 6607) granting a pension to Keziah Randall, Mattapoisett, Mass., widow of Richard Randall, who served in the coast guard, 1812 to 1815.

The claimant in this case is one hundred years and six months old and has outlived every person upon whom she has any claim for support. Although she has reached this extreme old age, her mind is clear, and she realizes fully the fact that she is entirely dependent upon the charity of her neighbors and friends, and that but for that charity she would end her days in the poor-house. Her husband did serve in that war. I beg leave to correct the statement of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. STONE]. He says that the husband of this woman served three weeks, while the report says that he served three months. It is true, as stated, that no record can be found of his service during that war, and that I can easily explain. The large majority of the men of Southeastern Massachusetts enlisted in the war, and their names can now be found on the rolls.

A small number were left at home to take care of their farms, the women and children; but when the British ship Nimrod came and destroyed Falmouth and a portion of New Bedford and adjacent towns and a vast amount of property, these young men started as a coast guard and went with others to protect life and property; and there they served faithfully until the ship had to leave on account of their resistance.

The Committee on Pensions have given great attention to this case. They waited carefully until they could get such evidence as would prove to them conclusively the justice of this claim. There is a local history or diary, written at the time, giving every fact and every date and the names of those who served in that coast guard at that period of our history; and it is unquestionable that the husband of the claimant served faithfully, and no claim was ever made for that service until recently, when this poor old woman really required assistance, and your committee, after giving the claim careful attention, felt that it was an act of justice to grant it, for her life can now be measured by months, and it seems that this little pension of $25 a month should be given her for the few remaining months of her life, and I hope the vote of this House will justify the committee in its action.

Mr. MORRILL. I now yield fifteen minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LANE], who reported one of the bills.

[Mr. LANE withholds his remarks for revision. See Appendix.]

Mr. MORRILL. I yield fifteen minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CHIPMAN].

Mr. CHIPMAN. Mr. Speaker, I have a very high regard and a very great respect for the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. STONE], but I was surprised at the character of the remarks which he made this morning, and I only regret that the time which is allotted to me is so short that I can not follow the argument which he delivered here, that argument so carefully prepared and elaborated, as it should be followed.

I think the gentleman was unfortunate, very unfortunate, in the selection of the case upon which he laid the most stress. Ellen Shea is an old woman. She was the mother of two soldiers. Two of her boys served the country. One of them was wounded, and, as a result of that wound, an accident occurred to him by which his neck was broken. The other incurred disease in the Army, which rendered him insane and made him a care and a burden to her during his life and which may reasonably be supposed to have hastened his death. I say "may reasonably be supposed," and if there is any doubt upon that point that doubt should be resolved in favor of the mother. I have no fear that the House will reject this old woman's claim, or her prayer, rather, for it is not a claim save as gratitude and honor make it a claim upon the country.

Mr. Speaker, the general tone of the remarks made by the gentleman from Missouri shows that some of us begin to count the cost, that we begin to add up figures in regard to the pension system. I have heard a great deal of talk in this House lately in that direction; and yet I remember well the day when the cost was not counted, when we were prodigal of money, when we were lavish of blood, when the motives which took men under the flag were not scanned and analyzed as they have been here in the cold blood of this discussion, when the man who enlisted was the hero of the hour, when the youth, the very flower of our land, with stalwart form, with rosy cheeks, and with flowing locks, went forth, beloved and regretted, but honored, to fight the battle for the Union.

I remember all that well. Nobody stopped then to ask, as the gentleman from Missouri has asked this morning, what kind of patriotism they had; nobody was mean enough to suggest that those men went out to risk their lives for the mere pittance of $13, $14, or $15 a month and "hard-tack." The man who would have made such a suggestion as that would have been whipped and scourged from all decent society; he would have been treated almost as a rebel: he could not have lived in any community in which loyal sentiment prevailed. No one then talked of "Treasury looters," as if keeping from poverty and want the men who served their country is looting the Treasury. No one then talked of "pretorian guards;" and I am amazed at the folly, the utter stupidity, which induces any man to talk of them now. "Pretorian guards" on crutches! "Pretorian guards" with patches over their eyes, without arms, without legs, with gray hairs, and forms bent with disease! "Pretorian guards" who have not the strength to raise their shields above their heads! I would like to see this army of "pretorians!"

ranged before the gentleman; and instead of being eloquent against them, his heart would melt with pity and he would wish that he had never made this speech here this morning. [Applause.]

We are told that it was the duty of men to serve the country. That is a beautiful theory; no one doubts it; yet did all men serve the country? Did all men give two sons to it, as the widow Shea did? Did the men of wealth, did the men who had the greatest stake in the country—did they, as a rule, enlist and fight the battles of the war? Could all men go? Was it possible for a population to go en masse into the Army? Did the Government make any such demand? Was there ever any such necessity?

Whom, then, did we appeal to? We appealed to the young and hopeful, to the men of sentiment, to the men whose enthusiasm would carry them beyond prudence, would carry them beyond all mercenary motives. Those were the men we appealed to, and those were the men who went to "the front." Were they thinking of a little bounty? Why, look at the troops from the Northwest, from Minnesota, from Wisconsin, from Michigan, the men from the farms, the decent men, the good men, the young men, and, as they proved themselves, the brave men! What took them there? What motive had they? And yet, I repeat it, the gentleman is here to-day in cold blood scanning their motives after the fact.

We are determining as to what influenced the patriot who went forth to fight for his country, dissecting his heart, his patriotism. Why, Mr. Speaker, we shall soon hear a question as to what motives influenced George Washington. We shall soon hear a question as to what motives instigated all the patriots of the Revolution and all the patriots of every war. It seems from the gentleman's speech that there were some men who performed great deeds and deserved great praise in the last war; but if we are to judge by that speech the great mass of the soldiers were unworthy men, mercenary men, and are not to-day entitled to consideration at the hands of this Congress. In this he is wrong—wrong in every degree, to every extent.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the pension laws are insufficient. We could not foresee the future, we could not anticipate all the evil consequences of internecine strife. The gentleman "cries a halt;" but the time to halt has not come. The time to halt will not come until a reasonable provision is made for the necessities of every soldier in this country, necessities growing out of the war and out of the condition into which he was brought by the war. There was his wasted youth—a youth gone forever. There were the hardships of campaigns which left ineradicable blights upon the person. There were wounds of battle. There was the fever, the gangrene of the hospital. There was the long march. I suppose all this is to be deemed sentiment now, but all these things, borne in the heyday of youth and hardly minded then, are bearing their fruit of suffering and misery. And all this must be paid for—no, not paid for, but tenderly assuaged. The gentleman speaks as if every duty to the soldiers has been fulfilled, as if the pension laws are perfect.

Why, Mr. Speaker, we need a service pension; we need a pension for the widows of soldiers; we need better provision for the deaf, dumb, and blind who are left in these conditions by the war; we need a provision by which increases of pension shall be paid from the day on which they are applied for, provided the disability exists at that time. We need act after act to make our laws efficient. And above all we need and we ought to pass a law establishing a rule of testimony in the Pension Bureau by which the oath of a private soldier shall receive as much honor and credibility as the oath of a commissioned officer. There are many things we need; there are many things which we ought to do. The logic of the entire situation will compel us to those things—things which are reasonable, things which are just, things which are demanded by the very best sentiment of the country.

It is said the pension-list is large. Gentlemen must remember that we had a large war. No war of modern times has equalled it. Over two millions of men enlisted and fought under the banners of the Union. Some of them were killed in the war, on the battle-field; some languished away in the hospital or died in the Confederate prisons; some of them have since died of diseases contracted there; but many of them are with us now. I ask you, gentlemen, what will you do with those who are with us now? Call them "pension looters?" Call them "pretorians?" Tell them to go to the poor-house? Tell them to go and kill themselves? Some of them are in disease and want because they served their country. What are we to do with them? Accuse them that they live too long? Tell them that they ought to have met friendly bullets in the days of their glory? Sir, they are here; they are with us. This country may soon—God grant the day may not come!—but this country may soon need another army of volunteers; and what inducement to patriotism will there be in poor-houses filled with the veterans; with a class of honest, brave, meritorious, loyal men who are called "looters of the Treasury," who are stigmatized as the "pretorian guard" of the country?

The time for a halt has not come; and so far as any argument made this morning upon these bills is directed against the general pension system and proceeds upon the ground that the system is extravagant, improvident, ill-judged, I protest against that argument. We will go further in this system, not extravagantly, not pinchingly, not with the head or the heart alone, but with both combined. We must continue until the last soldier who served his country in that war, and the last widow of a soldier who served his country in that war, who suffer by reason of service done for the country, have died and been gathered to their fathers. [Applause.]

Mr. MORRILL. I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. DOLLIVER].

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. Speaker, I did not intend when I took a seat in this Chamber to violate the golden rule of silence which the traditions of the House, for its own protection, have applied to the probationary term of legislative service.

I am led from that purpose by the opportunity afforded by the chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions [Mr. MORRILL] to say a few words in reply to what has been said by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. STONE] in regard to the rights of the veterans of the Union Army. And I take a deeper interest in the discussion because it has been said by a distinguished advocate of more liberal pension legislation, in a public appeal to the loyal people of the United States, that the men born since 1850, knowing little or nothing of the real sufferings and services of the civil war, can not be relied upon to do justice to its surviving veterans.

Speaking in a humble sense for the men born since 1850, I challenge the truth of that suggestion. On the other hand, the young men of the United States, without distinction of party politics, recognize that the most solemn duty of these times is to fulfill along the straight lines of justice the promises made by the American people when the Union Army was recruited, and afterwards repeated when its worn and faded regiments were discharged in honor and in victory. [Applause.]

They understand that in fighting for the unity of the Republic the armies of the nation carried on their swords the welfare of centuries and in their hearts the great hope of posterity. They understand that the success of the Confederate arms would have been fatal both to the form and substance of popular government in the world and that human slavery was not only a felony against the slave, but an offense against the industrious millions of the earth. They have no ear for voices out of the past that reargue the case of the rebellion and restate the forgotten apology of the slave power. They perceive distinctly that the effort to break up the Union into fragments was a blunder so stupendous that it hides its odious features only in the refuge of common charity. So that to-day, even in the South, the generation born since 1850 understand that the armed hosts of 1865, visiting upon Virginia and Georgia the desolation of war, were in a larger sense the enlisted regiments of civilization, fighting for North and South, for the American commonwealth, for the generations yet to come. Feeling so and thinking so, the young men of the United States, while they know little or nothing of the real services and sufferings of those memorable years, are ready to join in gratitude and affection with the veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic in the universal popular demand for justice.

I have heard it said on this floor that no nation has ever yet provided so large a fund for invalid pensions. That is true, for the plain reason suggested by my friend from Michigan [Mr. CHIPMAN], that no nation ever called into the field so great an army or ever discharged an army with so grievous an affliction of wounds and disease. Our pension laws from the beginning have been prone to discern the disability of a wound and to ignore the less tangible but not less fatal infirmity of disease. Yet the record shows that less than one-third of the death loss of the Army is traceable to the accidents of the field. In the camps of contagion and in the prison more than 200,000 men met their last enemy. Fever, and hunger, and exposure did for them what in a less visible way they did for countless multitudes, who are now beginning to realize in failing health and strength the hardships of their service.

The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. STONE] protests for himself against an increase of the pension-rolls on the ground that the Government has already made a liberal provision for its veteran soldiers. While it is true that much has been done, it is equally certain that much remains to be done; so that I think a remark like that is either the invention of hostility or the hallucination of ignorance. What are the facts? Thirty-five men receive \$1 a month. I can not imagine what form of disability this monthly allowance is intended to cover, nor can I suggest the delicate shading of disease that is relieved by the payment of \$2 a month, now received by nearly 27,000 men. Four men are on the roll for \$2.25, while in one case the law has cut a penny into vulgar fractions and passed to the pensioner's credit the quaint and princely allowance of \$2.33 $\frac{1}{3}$  per month. To another we give \$2.50.

To five we give \$2.66, having first weighed their merits upon balances to separate them from the more fortunate eight who monthly receive from the Government they defended the sum of \$2.66 $\frac{2}{3}$ . Fifteen hundred and fifty-six men have \$3, while 331 get \$3.75. Sixty-nine thousand are paid \$4 a month, and 52,000 more range between \$4 and \$6, receiving in many cases that highest proof of the Government's attention—an attention that often cuts copper cents in two and counts the halves, as Providence is said to number the hairs of our heads. Rising through all the grades of addition from \$6 to \$8 we find 70,000 more provided for oftentimes to the fraction of our smallest coin.

In other words, of the 356,000 soldiers now upon the pension-roll more than 221,000 receive between $1 and $8. What sort of a liberality is that which counts out to a pensioner $12 a year, or $24, or $48, or $96? I say that such a payment disparages both the nation and the claimant. Yet $8 a month is the accepted unit for total disability. Where did the idea come from that a man could live in the United States on $96 a year? That idea must have originated in an almshouse, must have been discovered in a garret. Yet we find it in the general pension act of 1818, when our fathers made provision for the survivors of the Revolution.

In contemplating—

Said President Monroe, in his first annual message—

the happy situation of the United States our attention is drawn with peculiar interest to the surviving officers and soldiers of our Revolutionary army, who so eminently contributed by their services to lay its foundation. Most of these very meritorious citizens have paid the debt of nature and gone to their repose. It is believed that among the survivors there are some not provided for by existing laws who are reduced to indigence or even to real distress. These men have a claim on the gratitude of their country, and it will do honor to their country to provide for them. The lapse of a few years more, and the opportunity will be forever lost. Indeed, so long already has been the interval that the number to be benefited by any provision which may be made will not be great.

The act of 1818, passed after nearly all those to be benefited "had paid the debt of nature and gone to their repose," has ever since served the double purpose of justifying the delay of Congress and of fixing as if by a divine revelation the maximum for total disability.

Yet that law, at the time, was commonly accepted as a tardy correction of an almost fatal mistake, and the amount fixed by its terms would have been deemed discreditable if the Treasury had not had the excuse of being empty. Nevertheless, that historic space of forty years is still the favorite measure of our duty as to time, and that historic $8, which in seventy years has seen the wages of every trade advance, the salary of every office multiplied, and the cost of decent living everywhere increased, while it alone remains to suggest the narrow circumstances of our ancestors, is now paraded as a token of our liberality. I think it is time to shut our mouths on the question of liberality and look the demands of justice squarely in the eye.

The great body of the Union veterans when they gave their names to the Army were young men and poor men. In keeping step with the ranks they lost step with their generation; they got behind in the race of business, and to-day many of them are burdened with poverty, more of them with disease, and all of them are in the shadows of approaching age. To them the nation's duty is limited only by its resources. In the words of Washington—

It would be a comfortless reflection to any man that after he had contributed to securing the rights of his country at the risk of life and at the ruin of his fortune there would be no provision made to prevent himself and family from sinking into indigence and wretchedness.

The American people demand that every one who bore a part in the national service shall be protected from want, not with the pinched and starved gift of charity, but in the exact spirit of Abraham Lincoln's great promise, to care for him who had borne the battle and for his widow and his orphan children. I shall support every measure that looks towards the faithful keeping of that promise. I want to see the pension code of this country so simplified that an army of claim agents may not be required to convey to the pensioner the certificate of his meager allowance. I know a man in my own district, in the last stages of consumption, whose claim had been pending ten years. Upon presenting the need of his situation I had the satisfaction of seeing $10 a month doled out to a dying man with a family on his hands.

In my own town I know as gallant a man as ever fought for his country, who for eleven years has sat by the bedside of an invalid wife by night, and by day worked in weakness and bodily pain to support his family, whose claim is held up because his disease is remotely traceable to symptoms appearing before his enlistment. I say that, when the Government has found a man fit for the business of war and has used him for that purpose for a term of years at the average wages of 20 cents per day, it is in all equity estopped from referring his disability to the diseases of infancy. The proving of a pension claim under our system has become more burdensome than a lawsuit.

In these cases we find a new rule of evidence unknown to the courts—a rule that determines a man's credibility not by his character, but by his rank. Under this rule, as the gentleman from Michigan has suggested, one officer equals two privates to prove a fact; that is to say, truth is more likely to be found on horseback than on foot. I do not recite these examples of technicality and delay to disparage the present or any former administration of the Pension Office. I believe that the bureau has done the best that could be done under our system with the facilities at hand. I recite them for the purpose of emphasizing the absurdity of sending a man for evidence of his disability to comrades that are scattered, to officers that are dead, to surgeons that have forgotten the sickness occurring in their own families. In my judgment the time has come to give an honorable discharge from the Union Army its par value, in grateful recognition of the heroic service which, in the words of Abraham Lincoln's message to the Congress of 1863, "gave to the world the home of freedom disenthralled, regenerated, enlarged, and perpetuated." Let us not repeat the ingratitude of the past.

John Quincy Adams, in his first message, describes the Revolutionary pensioners of 1820 as "the venerable relics of an age gone by." In vain had the patriots of that day interposed their influence in behalf of their old comrades. The spirit of mercantile times had postponed the day of justice till only a few tottering men were left to tell the story of the Revolution; and the treatment these received is one of the scandals of our national history. In response to some such clamor as that which a few months ago emanated from the White House, at the time my friend from Missouri says he was accustomed to fall down and worship before its occupant, the act of 1820 was amended to strike from the roll all who failed to file a schedule of their earthly possessions, and thereby demonstrate that they had in fact landed at starvation's gate.

It was against this bloodless provision of the law that Mr. Adams asked a question which ought to be repeated in the ears of every Congress until justice be done. "May not the want," said he, "in most cases be inferred from the demand, when the service can be duly proved, and may not the last days of human infirmity be spared the mortification of purchasing a pittance of relief only by the exposure of its own necessities?" To us the veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic, to whom my friend from Missouri has referred, are not the relics of an age gone by. They are our fathers, our brothers, our friends, our neighbors, our associates. If this Government is to reserve its bounty for the venerable relics of an age gone by, we may as well at once complete the national humiliation by openly discrediting the national duty.

The old soldiers stand before the public Treasury, not as paupers, not as mendicants, not even as beneficiaries. They are the preferred creditors of the nation of America. They hold the bonds of the real national debt. To its payment the public faith is sacredly pledged. We must not question it. We can not without infinite penalties repudiate it. Nor ought we to go into partnership with the grave and plead the precedent that enables us to drive a hard bargain with old age. Now is the accepted time to complete the act of national gratitude. Within twenty years the most of the veterans will be gone. Already the great commanders, except one, have joined the innumerable company of their comrades on the other shore.

Every year time touches the wasting ranks with a heavier hand. Soon the last will have departed, and little children playing upon the streets will hush their laughter to look with curious reverence upon bent and white-haired men, the last of the Grand Army of the Republic. I do not know what others may think, but in that day I want to feel that the public faith has been kept in the ample measure of gratitude and of justice. I shut my eyes while the busy fingers of calculation compute the cost. It makes absolutely no difference what it costs. The defense of the Union was an undertaking so vast that no worldly arithmetic can estimate its expense. But the American people, with eager patriotism, were ready to pay all that it cost to the last farthing. [Applause.] Nay, more, they were willing to bury their dead; they were willing to put the signs of mourning upon nearly every family altar; they were willing to take back their loved ones from the hospitals of disease, from the stockades of merciless prisons, from the flag of the great Republic might live through the storm of battle. [Applause.]

My countrymen, it was a costly sacrifice; but it was worth all it cost and infinitely more. [Applause.] And to-day there is not in all our borders one veteran of the civil war but we are his personal debtor; not one woman whose broken heart gave to the nation husband, or son, or brother, but we are her personal debtor; not one old man, stricken by years, the staff of his support taken away by the service of his country, but we are his personal debtor. [Applause.]

I could not help feeling a sentiment of indignation when I heard their necessities sneered at on the floor of this Congress. I say to the gentleman from Missouri, and to you, gentlemen, that the need which stands in pathetic eloquence behind the pressing urgency of the demands of the old soldiers of the United States is no badge of dishonor. [Applause.]

It is rather a mournful witness, like the homeless lot of the Workingman of Nazareth, that they who were rich in the exultant wealth of youth and strength for our sakes have become poor. [Applause.] And so when I hear men talking of the extravagance of pension appropriations and read in newspapers the idle babble that the old soldiers of the country are seeking to loot the Treasury, I reply that every dollar of the national wealth, in the Treasury and out of it, is encumbered first of all by the inviolable lien of our duty to the men and women who thought not of their blood and their tears in the hour of the national trial. [Applause.]

Horace Greeley, in the editorial columns of the old Tribune of the common people, just after the war, foreseeing the hardships that must follow the return of the country to a sound currency, predicted that the popular discontent would be organized by demagogues and used to destroy the public credit. He was mistaken. For the American people stood in the midst of their shriveled and scattered fortunes for six patient years, deaf to every whisper of seduction, and to-day among the money-changers of the world the American promise is better than the shining gold. [Applause.] And for one I am glad that it is so. I am glad that in all the earth there is no bank, no bourse, no narrow street of speculation that questions the credit of the United States of America. [Applause.] But, before God, I had rather see the whole framework of our financial system put to an open shame before the world than to see the care-worn remnant of the old Union Army driven from the public Treasury by the money power of the United States, holding in their trembling hands the broken promise of Abraham Lincoln. [Loud and prolonged applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. FLOWER. Mr. Speaker, I believe there is a little of the time remaining of the gentleman from Missouri? If so, I desire to occupy it.

The SPEAKER. There are seven minutes of the time remaining.

Mr. FLOWER. In that time, Mr. Speaker, I desire to occupy the floor and to raise my voice in favor of the Union soldier and the pension laws. In every war in which this country has been engaged, from the first War of our Independence until the Union war of 1861, it has been the policy of the Government to give pensions, and liberal pensions, to its soldiers. When these men in 1861 went to the battle-field, we promised to make their wives and children wards of the nation. I am in favor of carrying out that policy and that promise to-day.

I am one of those Democrats who believe—and I believe I voice the sentiments of every Democrat in the State of New York here represented—that they fought in a more just cause than any soldiers who have ever preceded them. [Applause.]

Napoleon fought to conquer. A poet speaks of him as one—

Whose game was empires and whose stakes were thrones,
Whose table earth, whose dice were human bones.

Alexander wept because he had no more worlds to conquer. The soldiers of the Old World fought to make their rulers stronger and greater over themselves. But these Union men fought to make their enemies equal to them. We made a line 3,000 miles long to make you men of the South equal to us and to save this country as a common heritage to you, your wives, and your children forever. [Applause.] I am in favor of carrying out the promises made at that time, when they went to the front. I think there may be individual cases in which it would be unjust to grant pensions; but there are hundreds of cases that are left to dangle along in this House that are just and honest, and I hope they will speedily have their due. [Applause.]

Mr. MORRILL. Mr. Speaker, I believe I have a little time remaining. I will yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LAWLER].

Mr. LAWLER. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to take more than a minute or two. I listened very patiently to the speech very ably prepared by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. STONE] and I am sorry that it was not directed against other cases than those brought over from the meeting on Friday night last. I only want to speak of one case, that of Ellen Shea, which was mentioned by my colleague from Illinois [Mr. LANE].

This boy did go into the war. He was continuously in the Army, and though absent on one or two occasions, he did come back from the war in this demented condition. His mother to-day, had it not been for the entering of this boy into the Army, would have had his services, and I am sorry to see an attack made upon a woman of seventy-six years of age, without any support from any source, and without the support that her two sons would have given her, and dependent upon her neighbors for subsistence. This is one of the cases that have been made a special mark by my friend from Missouri.

I want to say right here that I introduced a bill in Congress that ought to have been considered and passed. It was a bill giving every soldier in the Army and Navy, or, if dead, to his widow, a pension of $12 a month. If that bill could have been passed and pension agencies and inspectors abolished in this country, and we could stop giving large pensions beyond that, we would take away a great deal of this feeling always manifested in Congress, and our time, in place of being taken up for two long hours, as to-day, with an issue against a few old, aged, and decrepit people, could have been devoted to the consideration of legislation for the people. [Applause.]

Mr. MORRILL. I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KERR].

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. I desire to take the attention of the House but for a moment. A great deal has been said about the pledges made by the Republican party. I am in favor of redeeming every pledge that has been made by the American people to the soldiers of the Union Army. I was one of them myself, and I sympathize very greatly with every man who to-day is in need on account of being in the Army.

I will say, Mr. Speaker, that there are men upon that side of the House who are to-day calling attention to the pledges made by the Republican party, but who all through the last Administration were unable to secure, and made no effort to secure, an appropriation for the relief of men who were in the almshouses of the country.

It was to emphasize the demand of the American people that these men should be cared for, that no man who had performed his duty to his country in its hour of need should be committed to the tender mercies of an almshouse, that the Republican party made the only pledge they made to the American people in the last campaign. That was that these men who had been made poor by their service, who were disabled at the present time, and who are in danger of becoming a public charge shall be cared for. That pledge we made in the national platform; and unless I am very greatly mistaken it will be redeemed before the close of the present Congress. That is the only pledge that, as a party, we made, except the general pledge that we would be liberal in our pensions to the Union soldiers. As has been said by every speaker who has spoken here to-day, this Government has contributed larger sums for the support of the disabled soldiers of the late war than any Government ever did because of any war.

I make this remark because you who during the last Congress were not able to secure any such legislation are making demands upon this Congress and claiming that we made pledges that we never made. Just before the last election a message was sent here by the late President advocating some general pension legislation; but the committee of this House never considered that message. They never made any attempt to do it during the last Congress, and I make the assertion that there is no considerable body on that side of the House that has ever been in favor of taking any measures for the relief of the soldiers of the Union Army any further than has been made by the legislation now on the statute-books. We propose to go further, and to provide that no man who was true to his country and suffered from disease or wounds in the service or is a loser by his service, whether able to prove it or not, if he is at present disabled, shall be deprived of the right to be placed upon the pension-rolls. [Applause.]

The question was taken on ordering the bill to engrossment for a third reading; and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Division.

Mr. MORRILL. I would like to ask the Chair which of the four bills this is.

The SPEAKER. It is the bill that has been read. The Clerk will read the title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 2057) granting a pension to Ellen Shea.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 93, noes 5.

So the bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time.

The question then recurred on the passage; and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 87, noes 8.

So the bill was passed.

The next bill read reported from the Committee of the Whole House was the bill (H. R. 4132) granting a pension to Esther G. Bryant.

The question was taken on ordering the bill to be engrossed for a third reading; and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 77, noes 4.

So the bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The next bill coming from the Committee of the Whole House was the bill (H. R. 6166) granting a pension to Elizabeth T. Garrett.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time.

The question recurred on the passage of the bill; and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 73, noes 3.

So the bill was passed.

The next bill coming from the Committee of the Whole was the bill (H. R. 6607) granting a pension to Keziah Randall, of Mattapoisett, Mass., widow of Richard Randall, who served in the Coast Guard, 1812 to 1815.

The amendment was agreed to; and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

DUTY ON HIDES.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a memorial from Massachusetts shoe manufacturers, remonstrating against a duty on hides.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The petition is as follows:

NEW ENGLAND SHOE AND LEATHER ASSOCIATION,
234 DEVONSHIRE STREET, Boston, March 31, 1900.

The honorable the Ways and Means Committee of the National House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

SIRS: The undersigned, manufacturers of leather and shoes and dealers in leather and articles produced from leather, believe that any duty imposed upon raw hides and skins would be very detrimental to one of the largest business interests of New England and the Middle States, and that it would increase the cost to the consumer of every pair of shoes produced in this country.

It is also the opinion of all leading houses that the imposition of any duty would cause great embarrassment to the large export trade, now amounting to $10,000,000 or $12,000,000 annually, and tend to drive it to the Dominion of Canada, where labor and materials for tanning are much lower than they are in the United States.

For these and many other reasons which could be enumerated we respectfully and earnestly protest against the proposed duty.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. ENLOE rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. KILGORE. I do not wish to consume any time in debate, but will ask the reading of the report in the time which would be allowed me for discussion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] desires that the report be read in his time.

The report (by Mr. LANE) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5206) granting an increase of pension to Catlena Lyman, submit the following report:

This bill passed the Senate of the Fiftieth Congress, and the following report was made to the Senate on said bill, which report your committee adopt as their own and which is in words as follows:

"The Committee on Pensions, to whom was re-referred the bill (S. 2626) granting a pension to Catlena Lyman, widow of William C. Lyman, have examined the same and report:

"That the claimant is now a pensioner at the rate of $25 per month, the rate allowed by law for her husband's rank, that of passed assistant surgeon in the Navy.

"Since the recommitment of the bill it is shown by additional evidence submitted to the committee that the husband, William C. Lyman, although having officially only the rank of passed assistant surgeon, did actually serve as surgeon in the Navy in the war of 1861 with marked ability. He took the place of surgeon at the United States naval rendezvous at Chicago. He had charge of several ships in quarantine outside of New Orleans. He was in the expedition against the forts and fleets of the enemy in the Lower Mississippi. In the discharge of his duties there he took the yellow fever and only recovered after long suffering.

"He served as surgeon on board the Portsmouth, the flag-ship of Admiral Farragut, and in recognition of the meritorious character of his services he received a testimonial from the admiral, being a box of surgical instruments, inscribed to him by that officer, which has been shown by the widow, in whose possession it is, to the committee.

"The claimant lost all her property by the Chicago fire and is now without means of support save the pension. The sum now paid her is inadequate. The committee therefore recommend the passage of the bill."

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make one statement in relation to this bill. I state upon information given me by others—not upon my own knowledge—that the beneficiary under this bill is now employed by the Government at a salary of $1,000 a year. If this is true, I submit that the increased pension proposed in the bill ought not to be granted. I suppose the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LANE] can tell whether it is true or not. The information has been given to me from a very reliable source.

Mr. LANE. I do not know whether it is true or not.

Mr. KILGORE. The pensioner in this case is now receiving $25 a month. This bill proposes to increase the pension to $50 a month.

Mr. LANE. I do not know whether this lady is now drawing a salary from the Government or not, and I do not care. In preparing the report I did not ask what salary she might be drawing. I recognized the case as a meritorious one, and considered that she was entitled to the amount of money which this bill proposes to pay. That was my reason for reporting the bill, and the committee approved it.

Mr. CHEADLE. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry. Is this bill now subject to amendment under the order?

The SPEAKER. The previous question has been ordered, and, as the Chair understands, the bill is not subject to amendment.

Mr. KILGORE. The order of the House was that the bill should come up this morning with the right of discussion for fifteen minutes on each side and the privilege of amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas is right.

Mr. CHEADLE. If the bill is subject to amendment, I move to amend by striking out "$50" and inserting "$30."

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that under the somewhat unusual order made by the House last Friday night the bill is subject to amendment.

Mr. CHEADLE. An order of that kind is very often made in reference to bills which are carried over in this way for a vote in a full House. I submit the amendment I have already stated.

Mr. ADAMS. I ask the Chair to consider whether the word "amendment" as used in the order may not be construed as meaning amendments pending. That, I think, is the usual order entered with reference to these bills coming over from the Friday night session.

The SPEAKER. The order reads:

The previous question to be considered as ordered, with the right of an amendment, and debate for fifteen minutes on each side.

This language would seem to confine the right of amendment to one amendment.

Mr. CHEADLE. I move to amend by striking out "$50" and inserting "$30." I do not wish to repeat what I have said over and over again on this question of private pensions. I would not, if I could, detract one jot or tittle from the well earned fame of the man who was the husband of this widow. But I undertake to say that under our theory of Government there can be no classes in widowhood. No widow can make a greater sacrifice for her country than to yield up the life of her husband. It has been deemed proper under the general law to give to the widows of one class of officers $30 a month, to the widows of another class $25, of another $20, of another $17, and to the widows of private soldiers $12 a month. If it be true, as stated by the gentleman from Texas, that the claimant in this bill is in the employ of the Government at $1,000 a year, in addition to receiving a pension of $25 a month, making in all $1,300 a year from the Government, then in view of the fact that thousands of the widows of men who died that this Government might not perish are now living in penury and want—not pensioned at all—I protest here against giving to any one any pension outside of the amount authorized by the general statutes of the country. I hope that the amendment I have proposed will prevail.

Mr. LAWLER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to have read a letter from the Admiral of the Navy in reference to this case.

The Clerk read as follows:

OFFICE OF THE ADMIRAL, Washington, D. C., April 3, 1890.

MY DEAR SIR: Mrs. Catlena Lyman has applied to me for a letter to you in her behalf.

Her bill (H. R. 5206) was reported favorably by Mr. LANE, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, March 1, and it only now wants a favorable consideration from the House to make her happy.

When it is considered that the naval pensions are paid from the pension fund raised by the officers and men of the Navy from prizes captured from the enemy, we can not but wonder why there should exist any hesitation on the part of Congress in granting pensions to the widows of officers and sailors, who in nine cases out of ten are left without means of subsistence, while the Army, which really has no fund to draw upon, is most liberally dealt with, and in most cases their pensioners get double what is paid to those of the Navy.

We feel this discrimination in the Navy keenly, especially when it falls upon the widow of a deserving officer like Dr. Lyman, who faithfully performed his duty during the civil war.

I could not undertake to specify all of Dr. Lyman's services, but no doubt Mrs. Lyman will make you acquainted with all the facts in the case.

I am always a friend to the widow, and I write now particularly to request that you will do all in your power to obtain for Mrs. Lyman the pension that she asks.

I remain, very respectfully and truly, yours,

DAVID D. PORTER, Admiral.

Hon. FRANK LAWLER, M. C.,

United States House of Representatives.

Mr. LAWLER. Mr. Speaker, this letter was unsought by myself; it came to me through the mail. Time will not permit me to recount the services rendered by Dr. Lyman, particularly at the time the fever was raging, when he filled an important position, not by appointment, but in the absence of the commanding officer. I did not expect there would be any opposition to the passage of this bill.

Mr. KILGORE. Will the gentleman allow me a moment?

Mr. LAWLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. KILGORE. This report made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LANE], from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, recites that—The claimant lost all her property by the Chicago fire.

Is that true?

Mr. LAWLER. It is true; the fact is well known.

Mr. KILGORE. The report further states that—

She is now without means of support save the pension. The sum now paid her is inadequate.

Is that true?

Mr. LAWLER. That was the question raised; I do not know anything about those facts.

Mr. KILGORE. Is it not the fact that she is in the employ of the Government at a salary of $1,000 a year?

Mr. LAWLER. I would like to ask you in return—

Mr. KILGORE. I am interrogating you now; you are on the stand; I do not propose to be cross-examined.

Mr. LAWLER. I will answer the gentleman, if he will state where he got his information.

Mr. KILGORE. I am asking information of the gentleman from Illinois. I suppose this statement which has come to me must be true; and it must have been withheld from the committee or the committee must have withheld it from the House. Somebody has been uncandid or somebody has given me incorrect information. And the gentleman from Illinois himself is not entirely candid or he would answer the question one way or the other.

Mr. LAWLER. I will answer—

Mr. KILGORE. Well.

Mr. LAWLER. I will answer that it is true—

Mr. KILGORE. That is right.

Mr. LAWLER. But the lady's health is so much impaired that she wants to retire, and will do so, from that position, and with this pension support an aged mother. That is true.

Mr. KILGORE. Nothing is said about that in this report.

Mr. LAWLER. Well, I do not understand that the committee were called upon to embody everything in the report. They have taken this case on its merits; we have let the case rest on its merits. I leave it there now.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. If the amendment has not already been proposed, I move to amend so as to make the amount of this pension $30.

The SPEAKER. That amendment is pending.

The question was taken on the amendment; and there were on a division—ayes 92, noes 54.

Mr. LAWLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays on this question.

The yeas and nays were refused, 23 members only voting in favor thereof.

Mr. LAWLER. I ask for tellers on the yeas and nays.

Tellers were refused, there being 20 members only rising in favor of the demand.

Mr. SPRINGER. Is not that one-fifth of the last vote?

The SPEAKER. But it requires one-fifth of a quorum to order tellers.

So the amendment was adopted.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CONTESTED ELECTION—WADDILL VS. WISE.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to announce for the information of the House that, under direction of the Committee on Elections, I will call up on Thursday next for consideration the contested-election case of Waddill vs. Wise.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced the passage of bills of the following titles; in which concurrence was requested, namely:

A bill (S. 2714) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Aurora, in the State of Illinois;

A bill (S. 2950) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Leadville, in the State of Colorado; and

A bill (S. 2163) to reorganize and establish the customs collection district of Puget Sound.

PENSIONS—ELLEN SHEA.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the next bill on which the previous question was ordered, coming over from last Friday.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 2051) granting a pension to Ellen Shea.

Be it enacted, etc. That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the limitations and provisions of the pension laws, the name of Ellen Shea, mother of Michael Shea, late of Company A, Thirtieth Illinois Volunteers.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, there are four bills coming over under the order referred to by the Chair, and the agreement was that there should be an hour's debate on each side on them.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will have to rule that the time can be exhausted on the first bill.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, there are four bills coming over from the evening session of last Friday. It was agreed by unanimous consent that I might control one hour in the discussion when the first bill should be called up, to use the whole of it if I desired at one time. I stated then, as I do now, that what I wish to say in regard to all these bills I would say in one speech. I prefer to put what I have to say in a single speech, as I can not express what I desire to in fifteen minutes. I shall not therefore discuss the bills in the order in which they appear on the Calendar, but in the order rather of the service of the soldier.

I selected these four bills somewhat at random from those which were considered on last Friday night as illustrating the class of pension bills to the passage of which I object. The first of these is a bill granting a pension to Keziah Randall. Mrs. Randall is a very old lady. She was born in 1789. She is also poor. She states that during the war of 1812 her husband, with four others, went to Wareham and served about three weeks as coast guard at the time the British sloop Nimrod was "making a raid along the shores of Buzzard's Bay." She says he also did other service, being engaged altogether about three months. When or how the "other service" was rendered or what it was does not appear. She says, "He did not enjoy good health after returning home, and thinks exposure in said service was the cause." It appears also that she "disposed" of her husband's knapsack and gun about fifty-five years ago. Several citizens of high standing at the claimant's home "certify" that she is a woman of good reputation. The report of the committee contains this clause:

It also appears that claimant is unable to find any one now living who served with her husband in the war of 1812, and no record of the service can now be found.

Thereupon the committee recommend the passage of the bill.

Now, I sympathize with this old lady, as I do with all ladies who are old and, unfortunately, poor. But when I am called upon to levy a tax on other people, many of them old and poor and already over-taxed, for the benefit of this one, I would like to know upon what ground such an act can be defended. Aside from the statement of the beneficiary herself, there is no evidence or pretense of evidence that her husband ever rendered any service at all of any kind. He certainly never belonged to any military organization. The only specified service that she says he performed was watching Buzzard's Bay about three weeks while a British war-ship was in its waters.

She says "he never enjoyed good health" after that and she "thinks exposure in that service was the cause." It does not appear what his disease was, how much he suffered, or when he died. There is no merit in the case from any proper legislative point of view. There is nothing in the case unless the American Congress wishes to encourage longevity by pensioning people who succeed in living a hundred years. I doubt, however, whether there is a gentleman upon this floor who would not enter into a solemn contract under seal to remain in this "vale of tears" a full century without any hope or promise of a pension.

The next bill is one granting a pension to Elizabeth T. Garrett. It appears from the committee report that her husband was in the Black Hawk war one month and twenty-five days. He joined a military organization in Illinois to protect himself against an uprising of savages, just as he would protect himself against wolves surrounding his home. He does not appear to have been wounded or diseased. Whether he was in a battle, or what he did, I do not know, nor does the committee vouchsafe to inform us. He did live to be an old man, dying only about four months ago, aged over eighty years. Being an old man in rather reduced circumstances, Congress passed a special act September 3, 1898, granting him a pension at the rate of $20 per month, which he drew until his death, which occurred about the first of last December.

Inasmuch as Congress was liberal with the husband by supporting him at public expense, now hardly is he buried until the widow comes and informs you, Mr. Speaker and gentlemen, that the only property she possesses is a town lot worth $250, and that she is old, feeble, and partially blind, and asks that the pension of $20 per month granted her husband may be continued to her. Her claim has at least this merit, that she is just as much entitled to it as her husband was, although there is no pretense that his death was in any way connected with his service of one month and twenty-five days.

The next bill is one granting a pension to Esther G. Bryant. Her first husband died in the service on February 20, 1865. On May 13, 1868, she remarried. Two years thereafter she obtained a decree of divorce on the ground of "intolerable severity." Now she asks to be restored to the pension-rolls.

I object to this sort of legislation, first, because she knew she would forfeit her pension by contracting a second marriage, and hence surrendered it voluntarily; second, because this sort of legislation offers a premium on divorce. It is as if you should say: "You can swap your pension for a husband when you like, and if he doesn't suit you you can swap back again."

I am told there used to be a law or a practice of the Department which authorized the restoration to the rolls of women situated like Mrs. Bryant. But if there was such a law it has been repealed or if there was such a practice it has been discontinued. Whether it was one or the other a stop was put to it, presumably because the thing was wrong. If it was wrong to apply it generally it is wrong to apply it specially.

The next bill is one granting a pension to Ellen Shea, as the dependent mother of Michael Shea, deceased, who served in the Thirtieth Illinois Cavalry during the civil war. The claim of Mrs. Shea was rejected at the Pension Office on January 27, 1885. This bill, or a similar one, passed the Fiftieth Congress, but did not receive the approval of the President.

I have examined the papers on file at the Pension Office. This bill is predicated on the evidence on file there. The Surgeon-General reports that the name of this soldier does not appear on any hospital record, though his regimental medical records are not on file. The military history of the soldier is given in a report made by the Adjutant-General to the Commissioner of Pensions in 1884. He enlisted January 13, 1862, for three years, and was mustered out January 20, 1865. He was reported as deserting at Memphis from the steamer Gladiator in October, 1862. He is subsequently reported present from October 31, 1862, to February 28, 1863, with this remark:

Reported on last muster-roll as a deserter; since returned from arrest in Memphis, Tenn., where he left the boat without leave.

He was reported absent sick at Helena in July and August, 1862, though the Surgeon-General certifies that his name is not on the records of the hospital at that place. He afterwards returned to his regiment and deserted from the steamer Gladiator in October, 1862, as I have stated, and was arrested and returned to the regiment. From August to October, 1863, he was reported present sick. He was not in any hospital, unless it was a regimental hospital, and the nature of his disease does not appear. During November and December, 1863, he was absent on sick furlough. January and February, 1864, he was absent without leave. From March to June, 1864, he was present. From June to October, 1864, he was present in confinement. For what he was confined does not appear. November and December, 1864, he was with the regiment, and was mustered out in January, 1865. That is the military record of the soldier. He seems to have spent a good part of his time in unauthorized absences and under arrest.

Nineteen years after he left the service, on March 10, 1881, he was caught in a snow-slide at Pitkin, near Woodstock, Colo., and lost his life, as did a number of others at the same time. On July 12, 1884, the mother filed her application for a pension. Her declaratory statement, upon which she bases her claim, is as follows, that her son—

Contracted a fever, the nature of which claimant does not now remember, at Pilot Knob, Ark., which resulted in insanity, and from the results of which he died at Woodstock, Colo.

That was her declaration, and the whole of it, as to the origin of her son's disease and the cause of his death. Apart from her own statement, the only testimony she offered to support the declaratory statement which I have quoted were two affidavits made at different times by the same man, one Dr. J. R. Bullock, of Waukegan, Ill. Those affidavits are very brief. One contains five lines of written matter, the

Mr. ENLOE. I rise for the purpose of making a motion that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of business upon the Private Calendar.

Mr. HOPKINS. Will the gentleman withdraw that motion for a moment, in order that I may call up a bill which has just come from the Senate?

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman from Tennessee withdraws his motion he must do so absolutely.

Mr. ENLOE. I do not withdraw the motion.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not mean to say that the gentleman can not withdraw it, but that if he does the withdrawal must be unconditional.

Mr. ENLOE. At the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS] I withdraw the motion.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill S. 2714.

Mr. ENLOE. What is the character of the bill?

Mr. HOPKINS. It is a public-building bill.

Mr. ENLOE. I can not withdraw for that purpose. I renew my motion, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. CULBERSON, of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I desire to antagonize the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee, and to move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering the first bill on the Calendar, the bill to create a court of patent appeals. I hope the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee will be voted down.

Mr. ENLOE. Mr. Speaker, I do not understand that the gentleman's motion is in order at this time. This is Friday, a day set apart by the rules for the consideration of business on the Private Calendar.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas has not made any motion. The motion before the House is the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. ENLOE] that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of business upon the Private Calendar.

The question was taken on the motion of Mr. ENLOE; and the Speaker declared that the yeas seemed to have it.

Mr. ENLOE. I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 67, noes 64.

Mr. KILGORE. I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and the Speaker appointed Mr. KILGORE and Mr. ENLOE.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 85, noes 67. So the motion of Mr. ENLOE was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Pending the announcement of the result of the vote on the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. ENLOE] the Chair desires to lay before the House certain personal requests.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. RAINES, for ten days, on account of important business.

To Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania, for one week from to-morrow, on account of important business.

To Mr. KINSEY, until the 12th instant, on account of important business.

To Mr. O'DONNELL, for ten days, on account of important business.

To Mr. WHITING, for ten days, on account of important business.

To Mr. RAY, for one week, on account of important business.

To Mr. ROCKWELL, for two weeks.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. MOORE, of New Hampshire, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (S. 1612) to construct a road from the city of Staunton to the national cemetery in the county of Augusta, in the State of Virginia; and

A bill (S. 1984) to create the offices of surveyor-general in the States of North Dakota and South Dakota.

CLAIMS UNDER THE BOWMAN ACT.

The House, in pursuance of the motion of Mr. ENLOE, resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan, in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is now in Committee of the Whole for the consideration of business on the Private Calendar. When the committee rose last week it was considering the point of order raised by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KERR] upon the bill H. R. 7616, and the gentleman from Iowa had the floor.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will permit me, I will offer a resolution which I think will do away with his point of order.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I reduced my point of order to writing at the suggestion of the gentleman from Kentucky and handed it to the Chairman. I do not think it has been printed exactly as it was written, so I ask that it be again read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the point of order submitted in writing by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KERR] on Friday last.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee had no jurisdiction of these claims, for the reason that no bill for the payment of either of these claims had ever been referred to the Committee on War Claims; second, if either of these claims was properly before the committee, they had no jurisdiction and no right to report more than one of those claims in a single bill.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, before this question is decided I desire to submit some additional remarks and to call attention to some additional authorities; but in order to avoid unnecessary delay, I will now yield for the resolution of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS].

Mr. ENLOE. Mr. Chairman, I demand the regular order.

Mr. HOOKER. I hope we shall have a ruling upon the point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The first point of order that the Chair rules upon is that order must be maintained on the floor. [Laughter.]

Mr. THOMAS. I would like to have my resolution read.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ROGERS. My point is that while the point of order of the gentleman from Iowa is pending, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. ENLOE] having demanded the regular order, the resolution of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS] is not in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Ohio. Let us hear the resolution read first.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is not well taken until we know what the resolution of the gentleman from Wisconsin is. It may be a privileged motion. The Clerk will read the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas House bill 7616 is alleged to be composed of a large number of items, many of which have not been referred to the Committee on War Claims by bill or otherwise by the House of Representatives of the Fifty-first Congress: Therefore,

Resolved, That the Committee of the Whole House report said bill to the House with the recommendation that it be referred to the Committee on Rules to investigate the status of said bill in connection with the practice of the House, and as early as practicable to make such recommendations in the premises as they may deem proper for the consideration of the House, including any change of rules deemed by them necessary for just action on the part of the House as to this and similar bills.

Mr. ROGERS. I now renew the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point.

Mr. ROGERS. My point is that there is now a point of order pending, the point made by the gentleman from Iowa; and pending the consideration of that point nothing is in order until it has been decided by the Chair or withdrawn.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair holds that the resolution just offered is a privileged motion, being one to refer to a committee, and that if adopted it virtually does away with the point of order now pending. Therefore the Chair will entertain the resolution offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. ENLOE. I move, in lieu of that resolution, this resolution.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will send his resolution to the desk to be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the committee report to the House that House bill No. 7616 be, and the same is hereby, recommitted to the Committee on War Claims, with authority to report it back to the House at any time, to be placed on the Calendar; and the bill shall be considered the first Friday after it shall have been reported again to the House.

The CHAIRMAN. Is this offered by way of amendment?

Mr. ENLOE. It is offered as a substitute.

The CHAIRMAN. It is a motion to commit to another committee than the one named in the original resolution?

Mr. ENLOE. Yes, sir.

Mr. CANNON. It seems to me that this proposition is subject to a point of order, because it undertakes to change the rules of the House, which can not be done in this way, either in the House or in Committee of the Whole.

The CHAIRMAN. It is very clear that this can not be done. The Chair sustains the point of order. The question is on the adoption of the resolution of the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. RICHARDSON. It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that the resolution offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin is clearly out of order. If I understand it, it proposes to refer a bill relating to war claims to the Committee on Rules, while the rules of the House expressly provide that all bills relating to war claims shall go to the Committee on War Claims.

Mr. ENLOE. The resolution of the gentleman from Wisconsin is as much a proposition to change the rules as mine.

The CHAIRMAN. That is a matter of argument. It is not for the Chair to argue that with the gentleman.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. The point of order raised by me went to the jurisdiction of the Committee on War Claims—

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair so understood.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. The proposition of the gentleman from Wisconsin is to submit that question to the Committee on Rules—the committee that frames the rules—and have them determine the question whether this bill was properly reported by the Committee on War Claims.

Mr. RICHARDSON. What do you refer to the Committee on Rules? Let me ask.

Mr. ENLOE. The point of order, the gentleman from Iowa said.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Do you want to refer the point of order to the Committee on Rules? That is something unheard of, it seems to me.

The CHAIRMAN. Of course what members say is not to be treated as the statement of the Chair.

Mr. HOOKER. I would like to be heard a moment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] is recognized.

Mr. HOOKER. Mr. Chairman, I understand the proposition is now to refer this point of order to the Committee on Rules. I do not know how other gentlemen may feel about this matter, but I utterly object to giving to the Committee on Rules any more power than it already possesses. As a Committee on Rules its function is to report rules for the guidance of the House in the consideration of matters that may arise before it. Now, here is a matter which has sprung up from the Committee on War Claims; a point of order has been made; it was debated all last Friday, and not decided by the chairman of the committee; the committee rose and the House adjourned, leaving pending the question presented by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KERR]. Now, with that question pending, undecided by the Chairman, the proposition is to refer this matter to the Committee on Rules—to do what? To decide the point of order? If so, sir, you might just as well abdicate your seat and leave the five men constituting the Committee on Rules to suggest everything and decide everything in this House. I objected to this—

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Mr. Chairman—

Mr. HOOKER. I am not through.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. I rise to a point of order. I hold that this debate is not in order. The point of order comes too late. I make the point that the point of order on the resolution of the gentleman from Wisconsin was not made until we entered upon the discussion of the resolution and the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. ENLOE] submitted an amendment to it; and it is too late for him now to say—

Mr. HOOKER. That amendment has been ruled out of order.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. I am aware of that; but we had entered upon a discussion of the resolution—

Mr. HOOKER. We are considering the other resolution—not the one to which the gentleman from Iowa refers—and upon that question I believe I have the floor. I want to get through and then I will yield to my friend on the other side.

I have but a single word to say upon this matter. In the last Congress, when this House was Democratic, I opposed with as much persistence and earnestness as I do now the investing of the Committee on Rules with any power beyond that defined by the rules themselves. The subject-matters which are, by the rules, to be referred to this committee are plainly expressed and easily understood, just as are the subject-matters referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, the Committee on War Claims, the Committee on Claims, or any other committee. But, sir, I observe that the Committee on Rules, instead of confining itself to its province as a Committee on Rules, is now resolving itself into a "steering committee" of the House, to dominate every subject presented for consideration here, by determining, as that committee has done in numbers of instances, that the House shall consider certain propositions for a certain length of time; and at the expiration of that time, by resolution from the Committee on Rules, the hands of the House are tied, the previous question is considered as ordered, and in that way individual Representatives here are rendered absolutely powerless.

The Committee on Rules is thus clothed with power to determine everything. The result will be that when you come to consider even the question of taxation—the question what burdens shall be laid upon the people or what relief shall be given to them—the five members constituting the Committee on Rules, two on one side and two on the other, with the Speaker as ex officio chairman, will determine how long the question shall be considered, what debate shall be allowed, and when the previous question shall be ordered, thus stifling entirely the sentiment and the voice of the House.

I now yield the floor to my friend on the other side.

Mr. SIMONDS. Mr. Chairman, it is my misfortune to be a member of the Committee on War Claims. If I could find it consistent with what I conceive to be my duty, I should refrain from saying anything upon this matter, but that is not the way I look at my duty.

As I understand it, the resolution offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS] is practically on all fours with the point of order raised by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KERR]. That point of order is, first, that the Committee on War Claims has not the right to report this bill because no bill of the same general nature has been referred to the War Claims Committee, and, second, if any particular bill or bills of this nature have been referred to the Committee on War Claims, it is not proper to report them all back in an omnibus bill. If that proposition is correct, then according to the view I take of the matter, the Committee on War Claims is of less rank and less power than the other committees of this House. I utterly deny that proposition.

It is conceded that the Committee on Rules, the Committee on Ways and Means, the six appropriation committees, and the Committee on Rivers and Harbors may originate bills when the subject-matter is before them and report them to this House in such shape as suits the discretion and the judgment of those committees. That is a conceded fact in regard to the rules of procedure of this House, and unless there is something in the rules of the House to prevent it the Committee on War Claims has as good a right to go along these lines of procedure as any other of these committees I have named.

And when you come to consider anything which gives one committee more rank and power than another it is a matter to be strictly construed, because it is in derogation of the powers of the other committees of the House.

The gentleman who prepared the Digest of the Rules has referred to this matter in one or two places. On the first point we have on page 319 of the Digest:

It is not competent for a committee to report a bill when the subject-matter has not been referred to them by the House, by the rules or otherwise.

The clear inference from the language used by the person who made the Digest is that if a subject-matter has been referred to a committee in any way, then it is proper to report on it by bill or otherwise.

Again, referring to the Digest on page 318:

The committee have full power over the bill or other paper, except that they can not change the title or subject.

This means that a committee can so change a single bill as to make it an omnibus bill, embracing other matters of like nature. That is the way it would strike a person studying this question dispassionately and with no special case before his mind. There is no better authority to appeal to than some competent person studying the question with no particular case before him.

It has been ably and ingeniously said by my friend from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR], in the best argument I ever heard made on the spur of the moment and upon such a topic, that when any particular committee exercise this authority they do so under clause 51 of Rule XI.

What is that clause 51? Look at it judicially. Its purpose is not to say that certain committees may originate bills, but its purpose is to say what committees have the right to report at any time.

That is the purpose of clause 51 of Rule XI, and the other question remains untouched as to whether the power exists to originate bills in committee. The purpose is to show by this clause 51 of Rule XI what committees may report at any time, and it goes on to say on what subjects those committees may report at any time.

I submit that, treating this matter judicially, as it is the duty of every member of this House to treat it, it is not fair to base an argument on that clause 51 of Rule XI to which I have referred, to the effect that it is intended to give certain committees power to originate bills in committee. The power to originate bills in committee is just the same with the Committee on War Claims as with any other committee of the House. It is a power that does not differ. It is the same with the Committee on War Claims as with the Committee on Rules, or with the Committee on Ways and Means, or with the six appropriation committees, or with the Committee on Rivers and Harbors. I do not think that clause 51 of Rule XI touches the matter at all.

Mr. Chairman, no gentleman has been able to discuss this question without touching upon the merits of it. I shall be the last man in the House to impugn the sincerity and earnestness of the chairman of the War Claims Committee in the opposition which he has seen fit to offer to the bill, but that opposition is based upon the idea that if we consider this bill in the way we are trying to consider it we shall pay certain claims which we ought not to pay. If that be so the proper way to meet the objection the gentleman urges, is, when the bill comes before the House, to amend it, by providing that no finding of the Court of Claims shall be paid until it has first passed the inspection of the Attorney-General, and it shall be certified by him that there is no probable cause for a new trial, and that he sees no reasonable cause why such claim should not be paid. In this connection I wish to say that I have draughted an amendment covering precisely that point, which it is my purpose to offer if we ever reach the consideration of the bill.

Now, as to the merits of the case, permit me to say a word. I began by saying that I was unfortunately a member of the Committee on War Claims; and I do consider it a misfortune. It was a surprise to me when I found myself there. But the Speaker saw fit to put me on the committee, and I shall take it with all the seriousness of which I am capable and shall do my duty as well as I may. This Committee of the Whole should look at the facts of the case. These men came here with their claims years and years ago, and you, instead of acting upon them, then said: "We have created a Court of Claims for the consideration of such matters. Go there with your claims, and come back here with the findings of the court." Now, the plain inference from the action of the House was that if they come back with just and reasonable findings of the court the House will do the just and proper thing by them and pay the amount of the claim so found. Has that been done? What are the facts?

For six years you have sent these men to the Court of Claims; they have hired their attorneys; they have endured all the trouble and expense of trial; they have obtained the findings of the court, and they come back here to be trifled with in a way that it seems to me is utterly unworthy of the dignity of the American Congress.

I undertake to say, Mr. Chairman, that there is not a gentleman on this floor who in the conduct of his own private business would do the things that are done on this floor every day and which gentlemen seem willing and anxious to do in the conduct of the public business. Take the case of a man who has ample revenues to pay his debts; other men present claims against him, and there is a tribunal to which he is willing to submit the justice of the claims. The claimants go to the tribunal thus selected, try their causes, and come back with the findings of fact by a court composed, as in this case, of five judges, who are all reputable gentlemen, so far as I know or have reason to think. There is not a gentleman in this House who would not in the case of his own private affairs pay every one of such claims so passed upon. And I would like to know how gentlemen are justified in having two consciences, one for the conduct of their private business and one for the conduct of public business as Representatives in the United States Congress? It does not seem to be a consistent line of conduct.

One thing you have to bear in being a member of the Committee on War Claims is this: Claimants come to you with tragedies innumerable; and a man would be more or less than human if he could hear the stories with indifference—

Mr. KILGORE. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. SIMONDS. Are you very anxious?

Mr. KILGORE. I am anxious to put the gentleman from Connecticut right.

Mr. SIMONDS. Very well.

Mr. KILGORE. The gentleman assumes that it is a duty of Congress to make appropriations to pay claims favorably passed upon by the Court of Claims without inquiring as to the liability of the Government. Congress itself must be the judge of the law. The fact is that having taken the findings by the court it is the right and duty of Congress to determine the questions of law involved.

Mr. SIMONDS. I undertook to say nothing of the sort; and what I am asking for just now is that these claims may be heard in this court and the questions of law, if there are any, may be passed upon by this Congress. That is the only thing I have asked. I am seeking no short cut in this matter.

I am not entirely pleased with the fact that all of these persons who present claims seem to be from the South; I would much prefer to see more of them from the North, where I come from; but that does not alter my sense of justice. And I repeat that I can see no reason why gentlemen should have two consciences, one for the conduct of their private business and another for their guide in the transaction of the public business in this House.

Mr. ENLOE. Mr. Chairman, I would ask the gentleman from Connecticut if there is any question coming from the Court of Claims to be decided by Congress, except the question as to whether or not they will appropriate the money to pay the claims that have been investigated by the court under the rules of law, and with all the evidence before it, in which they found against the Government and for the claimant?

Mr. SIMONDS. Mr. Chairman, the question asked embodies its own answer. As I understand it, there are no other questions. But if there are, the gentleman can bring them in separately and settle them in this forum. It would seem that these claims have been made the foot-ball of politics for years; and I must say that I suspect that a part of the willingness of the gentlemen on the other side to have these claims considered at this time is because the Republican party is in power; and if they are paid they will swell the total of our appropriations. But that is not to my mind a sufficient excuse for not paying them. I feel that I am called upon to do my duty and to pass upon these claims irrespective of any such questions as that; and I appeal to the other members of the House to do the same.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. ROGERS. I desire to make another point of order against that resolution.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ROGERS. My point of order is that this resolution is not in order. The consideration of this bill has been entered upon, and that this motion, if in order at all, would be in order after the bill had been reported back to the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. ROGERS. I desire to appeal from the decision of the Chair upon that point of order.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I would like to make a remark or two upon the point of order made by the gentleman from Arkansas. Will the gentleman allow—

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, I desire to state my point of order and then ask that the Chair will state it to the House.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I want to say a word in favor of the point of order made by the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. ROGERS. Would it not be better to have the point of order stated?

Mr. ENLOE. I rise to a question of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ENLOE. And that is, that on various and sundry propositions and on two points of order the entire time of the House on last Friday was consumed, and the entire time to-day has been taken up in a discussion not for the enlightenment of the Chair and the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will be glad, of course, to proceed to the consideration of the matter.

Mr. MCCREARY. Mr. Chairman, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MCCREARY. I desire to know what has become of the two points of order raised by the gentleman from Iowa last Friday, which were discussed nearly all day.

These motions are pending, and, as I understand, these were the first points of order to be considered by this House, and the duty of the Chairman was to pass upon these points of order before we can proceed any further.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky states the matter as it is. The questions before the committee are the points of order raised by the gentleman from Iowa. The gentleman from Iowa had the floor upon that question at the time when the committee rose last Friday, but gave way that a motion that the committee rise might be made by another member. Upon the committee coming to order, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KERR] having the floor, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS] offered a motion or resolution which the Chair will now have read again in connection with what the Chair is stating.

Mr. MCCREARY. Decide that point of order first.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will please wait and let the Clerk read the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas House bill 7616 is alleged to be composed of a large number of items, many of which have not been referred to the Committee on War Claims by bill or otherwise by the House of Representatives of the Fifty-first Congress: Therefore,

Resolved, That the Committee of the Whole House report said bill to the House with the recommendation that it be referred to the Committee on Rules to investigate the status of said bill, in connection with the practice of the House, and as early as practicable to make such recommendations in the premises they may deem proper for the consideration of the House, including any change of rules deemed by them necessary for just action on the part of the House as to this or similar bills.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair held that this was a privileged motion; and, further, it is privileged because of the fact that it raises the question of the jurisdiction of a standing committee of this House among other things, and properly it could be referred to the committee which has the interpretation of parliamentary law. The Chair held the motion privileged and held the point of order made by the gentleman from Iowa in abeyance, because if the resolution is adopted the point of order ceases to be of any consequence and is virtually eliminated by the action of the committee in adopting the resolution. If the committee fail to adopt the resolution, the question then would recur on the point of order made by the gentleman from Iowa. In the mean time the gentleman from Arkansas raised a point of order upon the motion, and the Chair overruled it. Now the gentleman from Arkansas raises another point, a second point, which the gentleman will please state.

Mr. ROGERS. I hope that I may be permitted to state my point of order. I want to ask the Chair to state it and then I want to be heard upon it. The point of order I made was this: That this resolution of the gentleman from Wisconsin to refer this bill to the Committee on Rules before the bill itself had been under consideration, or general debate had begun, or any opportunity had been afforded for amending the bill or perfecting it, was premature and not in order. In other words, that this resolution can not be considered by the committee so long as anybody in the committee desires to be heard and so long as anybody sought to amend, alter, perfect, or change the provisions of the bill, and on that point I have asked the attention of the committee. So that my point of order is that this resolution offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin is not in order, and can not be in order in any respect, without reference to the point of order made by the gentleman from Iowa, until we have finished the consideration of the bill.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. I make the point of order that the point of order comes too late, for the reason that we had entered upon discussion.

Mr. ALLEN, of Mississippi. I rise to a question of personal privilege.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has recognized the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. HOOKER. I desire to ask the gentleman from Arkansas to ask the Chair (in view of the fact that he is on the floor and that I can not obtain the floor) the question as to whether there is any power in the Committee of the Whole to refer a subject-matter under consideration to any other committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will say, in reply to the inquiry of the gentleman from Mississippi as to the scope of the resolution of the gentleman from Wisconsin, that it proposes that the committee shall recommend to the House the reference of the bill to the Committee on Rules.

Mr. ROGERS. Whether it is put in the form of a recommendation or not, the effect of it is, as the Chair has properly stated, to take this matter out of the Committee of the Whole, and, therefore, if the resolution is carried, it takes the matter to the Committee on Rules. Now, I hold that no motion which takes this bill from the Committee of the Whole House until they have had an opportunity to debate and mature it is in order, or could be in order, even without reference to the question of whether it was in order at the time it was submitted for consideration. Otherwise every bill, when the House goes into Committee of the Whole to consider it, would be subject at once, before the consideration began, to a motion to refer it to a committee other than the one to which the House had referred it; and in that way the consideration of any bill on the Calendar might be prevented, for we might take up one bill after another and exhaust the time in votes to refer it to other committees.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Not only so, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. ROGERS. If the Chair does not care to state my point of order, there are two or three things that I want to say by way of debate.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would like to have the gentleman's point of order reduced to writing, so that there will be no mistake about its being stated accurately by the Chair.

Mr. ENLOE. Did not the Chair decide the point of the gentleman from Arkansas to be out of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The first point of order raised by the gentleman from Arkansas the Chair ruled out, and the Chair was about to rule out the second when the gentleman from Arkansas expressed a desire to be heard.

Mr. ENLOE. Well, I wish the Chair would rule it out and let us proceed with the transaction of public business. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman knows that the Chair must observe the proper courtesies of parliamentary procedure in these cases.

Mr. ROGERS. I suggest to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. ENLOE] that if he will reflect for a moment he will recollect that every member on this floor has exactly the same rights, and I have just the same right to present my views as he has to undertake to attempt to take me off the floor or to lecture me. [Laughter.]

Mr. ENLOE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman permit me to state—

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Arkansas yield the floor?

Mr. ROGERS. I will yield to the gentleman if he desires to make a statement.

Mr. ENLOE. I want to state that I had no such purpose in view as lecturing the gentleman from Arkansas. If any lecture was intended it was meant to apply somewhere else. But, Mr. Chairman, I do not like to see the entire time of this House taken up in this way, to the defeat of these claims and the prevention of the transaction of public business, by the discussion of these technical points day after day.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, if, as I think, that lecture is, in part at least, meant for me, I want the gentleman to understand—

Mr. ROGERS. I resume the floor, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. ENLOE. I never thought of the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. WALKER, of Massachusetts, rose.

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. WALKER, of Massachusetts. I rise to discuss the point of order pending before the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS] has the floor.

Mr. REILLY. Mr. Chairman, what is the question before the committee, the resolution of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS] or the point of order of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS]?

The CHAIRMAN. The question before the committee now is the point of order of the gentleman from Arkansas, which he is discussing.

Mr. ROGERS. Now, Mr. Chairman, if the committee will preserve order, I will try to state as best I can the precise situation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will first state the point of order raised by the gentleman from Arkansas. The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS] makes the point of order that the resolution offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS] can not be considered, if at all, until the bill has been proceeded with by paragraphs and amendments offered; in other words, until the bill has been considered. That is the point raised by the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. THOMAS. I make the point of order that that point comes too late.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is of the opinion that it does not come too late. The gentleman from Arkansas will proceed.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the fact that there seems to be a disposition to waste Fridays and to transact no public business, but I desire to be heard now because the question presented to the Chair now and the question which the Chair has recently ruled upon are of far-reaching importance in the orderly conduct of the public business. The question presented is this: By an act of Congress known as the Bowman act, either House of Congress, or a committee of either House of Congress having jurisdiction of what are known as war claims, was given the power to refer those claims to the Court of Claims to have the facts ascertained and reported to Congress. In pursuance of that law the Court of Claims adjudicated various claims of individuals and reported them back to the House, as the report in this case, I am informed, shows.

Under Rule XXIV of our present code it is provided that these communications, with all others addressed to the House, shall be referred, under Rule XI, just as a bill which is introduced relating to a similar subject-matter would be referred to the proper committee.

The Speaker of the House, acting under this rule, referred these reports from the Court of Claims to the Committee on War Claims, and that committee consolidated various of these private claims into one bill and reported them in that form back to the House, and they now stand upon the Calendar.

The House took up that bill, and on the 28th of February referred it to the Committee of the Whole for its consideration. On last Friday the bill came up for consideration. At that stage in the proceedings and before the consideration began, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KEER] made two points of order against the consideration of the bill. Pending those points of order the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS], the chairman of the Committee on War Claims, offers to-day a resolution the effect of which (without reference to its exact wording) is to take this bill, before we enter upon its consideration at all, and refer it to the Committee on Rules for their advice and counsel as to what should be the proper disposition of this particular bill.

I undertake to say that in the history of the House of Representatives from its first session down to the present hour there never was a proposition of this character presented under these circumstances—never in the history of the whole country. But the Chair ruled that, notwithstanding the gentleman who made this point of order was occupying the floor, he had the right to yield to allow the gentleman from Wisconsin to offer this resolution; and the Chair held this resolution, pending that point of order, without its withdrawal or disposition, to be in order; and the resolution was read from the Clerk's desk. My point of order against its being in order was overruled.

At this stage of the proceedings—and here I am somewhat in doubt as to what the debate which took place on the other side was addressed to, whether to the merits of the resolution or something else—I made the point of order that until we had entered upon the consideration of this bill, until it has been open for debate and amendment, and is finally completed and ready to be reported back to the House, a resolution which seeks to take the bill from the Committee of the Whole anterior to that is out of order. It is this point of order which I propose now briefly to discuss.

I first cite to the Chair clause 5 of Rule XXIII:

When general debate is closed by order of the House, any member shall be allowed five minutes to explain any amendment he may offer, after which the member who shall first obtain the floor shall be allowed to speak five minutes in opposition to it, and there shall be no further debate thereon; but the same privilege of debate shall be allowed in favor of and against any amendment that may be offered to an amendment; and neither an amendment nor an amendment to an amendment shall be withdrawn by the mover thereof unless by the unanimous consent of the committee.

The clause which precedes that is in these words:

In Committees of the Whole House business on their calendars may be taken up in regular order, or in such order as the committee may determine, unless the bill to be considered was determined by the House at the time of going into committee, but bills for raising revenue, general appropriation bills, and bills for the improvement of rivers and harbors shall have precedence.

Clause 6 of the same rule provides:

The committee may, by the vote of a majority of the members present, at any time after the five-minute debate has begun upon proposed amendments to any section or paragraph of a bill, close all debate upon such section or paragraph, or, at its election, upon the pending amendments (which motion shall be decided without debate); but this shall not preclude further amendment, to be decided without debate.

Now, Mr. Chairman, these citations from the rules show that when we are proceeding in Committee of the Whole no motion that the committee rise can be made, no motion for a reference of the bill to another committee can be entertained, no disposition of the bill at all in the committee can be had, until you have entered upon the consideration of the bill. But the position of the Chair is that pending a point of order against the consideration of the bill and before its consideration is begun a resolution is in order to refer the bill to some committee to advise the Committee of the Whole or the House of Representatives what is the proper disposition of the bill. You propose not to take up the bill at all. The House instructs you to go into Committee of the Whole and consider this bill; but instead of considering it, as directed by the House, the Committee of the Whole undertakes by this resolution to take the bill out of the committee, to go back into the House and direct the House to send it to the Committee on Rules for its instruction and advice.

Now, Mr. Chairman, there are some things which in parliamentary bodies ought to be tolerated and some things which ought not to be tolerated. If we are to have a code of rules by which the House of Representatives is to be governed, we ought to have some uniformity in the enforcement of those rules. The boast of your party was that these rules were made for the disposition of the public business; that you wanted to do business. Now you are face to face with business; and why can we not go on in pursuance of the instructions of the House and face the issues involved in this business, and do the business either one way or another? Why is it necessary, by a sort of parliamentary legerdemain or sleight of hand or "now you see it and now you don't see it" performance, to take this bill out of the Committee of the Whole and send it to the Committee on Rules to have them smother it or sidetrack it in some way? Are you unwilling to trust the members of your own party? What is the object of this proceeding? It is without a precedent anywhere. I defy the production of a precedent by anybody.

Mr. Chairman, I appreciate to a certain extent the questions involved directly or indirectly in this bill. The French spoliation claims stand behind it; other bills of similar character stand behind it. You want to devise some means to get rid of this measure, which you do not wish to consider, without side-tracking those that occupy the same parliamentary status which you do wish to consider. When I say "you," I mean your party, Mr. Chairman; not you individually. This irregular proceeding, without any sort of authority or precedent, is to be invoked to get rid of these measures and to accomplish purposes which you could not undertake to accomplish by the regular, orderly methods of parliamentary law.

Mr. COLEMAN. Will the gentleman allow me one minute for a correction? The gentleman says our party want to do this. Not all of them, if you please.

Mr. ROGERS. I will except my friend, if he desires to be excepted.

Mr. ALLEN, of Mississippi. We are glad to see evidences of repentance.

Mr. ROGERS. I am inclined to except a good many of the gentlemen on the other side.

But, Mr. Chairman, there is something behind that chair in which you sit, some "power behind the throne" that wants to make some disposition of these measures that is not orderly or parliamentary under the rules. It can not be otherwise. When a bill of this kind comes up, embracing claims from one section of the country only, why is it that some parliamentary process never before invoked in this House is to be resorted to in order to get rid of the bill?

Why, Mr. Chairman, if there is any class of persons in this country who, viewed from a broad, patriotic standpoint, ought to have some consideration in this House, it is these loyal claimants from the South, for where they were it was worth something to be loyal.

Why is it these claims which come from a section of the country, the Southern section of the country, are to be driven out of the House and resorted had by parliamentary legerdemain and trick to get rid of their bill when you are professing such loyalty to those friendly to the Union cause during the war? Why is it you do this thing?

Let some of these gentlemen who have inaugurated this business, answer. Let them get up the precedents by which this is done; let them point out in these rules some authority for it; let them go back to the history of parliamentary law in every period of the country's history, and see if they can find a single instance where, pending a point of order in a Committee of the Whole, involving the jurisdiction of that committee, and before the point of order could be heard and decided, the bill could be taken out of the committee into the House on a motion and referred to another committee, before its consideration had been begun, much less without having an opportunity to perfect and amend it.

Mr. McCOMAS. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. ROGERS. I desire to yield for a minute to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. ALLEN].

Mr. McCOMAS. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The gentleman from Arkansas has no power to yield the floor.

Mr. ROGERS. I promised to yield for a minute to the gentleman from Mississippi, and I do so now to hear what he has to say.

Mr. GROSVENOR. But the gentleman has no right to yield the floor.

The CHAIRMAN. When the gentleman yields the floor during the discussion of a point of order he yields it absolutely.

Mr. ROGERS. I wish to say only that I intended to yield to the gentleman from Mississippi, but I forgot it when I took my seat.

Mr. ALLEN, of Mississippi. Then I will rise to a question of personal privilege.

Mr. McCOMAS. I have the floor for a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will proceed.

Mr. McCOMAS. This is my inquiry: The motion was made, as I understand it, to take up and consider the bill which we are now all talking about. [Laughter.]

A MEMBER. And anxious to have considered.

Mr. McCOMAS. A motion was then made to recommit that bill to the Committee on War Claims, upon which the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KERR] made a point of order as to its consideration, which was discussed a whole day. Subsequently a resolution, as read, was offered referring it with instructions to the Committee on Rules. An amendment to that proposition was offered and ruled out of order. Then the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS] made the point of order which he has just now discussed.

My parliamentary inquiry is whether the Chair by deciding simply on the first point of order, to wit, that against the consideration of the bill, disposes for the time of this whole matter. Upon that parliamentary inquiry I only wish to ask the Chair whether that point of order is not too late on account of the discussion of the bill, as will be seen on page 2824 of the RECORD that there were division and debate before the point of order was made by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KERR]. It will settle, too, this controversy pending and all points of order thereon.

The CHAIRMAN. As to the parliamentary question of the gentleman from Maryland, the Chair will reply by stating that the motion made by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS] is in the nature of a privileged motion, and it is not for the Chair to say that such a motion shall not be considered in this body. The Chair is not ready to go that far. Being a privileged question, the Chair holds it is properly before this committee for decision.

As to the point of order of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS], he had the right to make that point under the rules. The consideration of the motion made by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS] is now pending. The Chair can not propose to do anything except by sitting here and hearing gentlemen discuss the question. That is all he can do.

A MEMBER. I should like to hear the decision of the Chair.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say a single word in relation to the point raised by the gentleman from Arkansas. The gentleman from Arkansas seems to have pointed his heaviest ammunition towards me, as though I were in some way responsible for the lamentable parliamentary condition in which we now find ourselves.

Mr. ROGERS. If the gentleman from Ohio will pardon me, I will state that I had no reference on earth to him.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Well, I only want to say to the gentleman that I am in favor of sustaining his point of order, and the reason is this: The original point of order raised the question of jurisdiction in this House as to the subject-matter under consideration. If that motion is decided affirmatively, then the bill goes out of consideration here; and I deny that there is any parliamentary procedure that justifies the reference by this committee of the bill, pending this question of the right to consider the bill at all.

Mr. ROGERS. I agree with the gentleman fully on that point.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Why, Mr. Chairman, what would you say of a court that upon a demurrer that raised the question of jurisdiction of the court should undertake to refer the subject-matter to a referee? The court can not render a judgment for the costs; it has to stay right there. The proceeding must stop at that point until that is determined. Therefore it is not in order to refer a bill, or a question growing out of the bill, to another committee pending the consideration of the question whether the House has jurisdiction or not. This is manifest for the reason that if the Chair should now overrule this point of order, and thereafter the House should sustain the motion affirmatively, why, what have you done? You have taken jurisdiction of a bill by its reference which you say the House had no jurisdiction of; and hence we have a right to the judgment of the Chair upon the question whether the bill is properly here or not.

Mr. ALLEN, of Mississippi, rose.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, just a word. I was not here on last Friday when the point of order was made—

Mr. ALLEN, of Mississippi. I believe I was recognized. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognized the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. CANNON. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. ALLEN, of Mississippi. What I wanted to say was more in the nature of a matter of personal privilege than on the point of order: not personal to myself, but personal to the family name. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will be very glad to hear the gentleman.

Mr. ALLEN, of Mississippi. To pass this resolution, Mr. Chairman, or to entertain it, is to do what a friend of mine down in Mississippi would call "putting the brand of stigma on the Chair." [Laughter.] For the first time, sir, in the history of this Government it is proposed here, where the discussion of a point of order is pending before a gentleman who has reflected honor on the Chair, whose able and dignified rulings have gone out and made him famous before the world, to vote a want of confidence in him by sending this matter to the Committee on Rules. [Laughter.]

And now, sir, the names of "ALLEN, of Mississippi," and "ALLEN, of Michigan," are so nearly like each other, and occupying a position in the same Congress, too, that I am unwilling to have this "brand of stigma" put even upon the family name. [Laughter.] And I tell you gentlemen over there, who are fathering this thing that the gentlemen on this side charge has something else behind it, I charge you now and warn you when you attempt to cast opprobrium on the Chair that you are making an attack upon the name of Allen. [Laughter and applause.] And I hope, Mr. Chairman—why, sir, if I were you I would rule on this question anyhow, like the justice of the peace who did not propose "to have his own proceeding's squelched." [Great laughter.] When was there ever such effrontery? When was there such a proposition made to a presiding officer before, when a question of order has been discussed before him for a whole day—

Mr. MORGAN. Two days.

Mr. ALLEN, of Mississippi. Yes, for two whole days—

Mr. COLEMAN. But one of them was a holy day.

Mr. ALLEN, of Mississippi. Then to come up and face him with the proposition "You are not capable of doing this, sir, but the distinguished Committee on Rules"—a committee, I confess, that is capable of doing anything under God's heaven [laughter]—"will have to do it." But they are not the only people who are capable of doing anything. [Laughter.] And with this explanation of my personal attitude on the question, I will let you gentlemen do as you please. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. CANNON. Now, Mr. Chairman, I was not here on last Friday when this point of order was made against the bill and was discussed. But I have glanced my eye over the debate on Friday last and to-day I was present when the resolution was offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS]. It was entirely competent for the gentleman from Wisconsin to offer the resolution or any resolution touching this matter. The gentleman from Wisconsin did offer it; it was read at the Clerk's desk, it was discussed, and then the gentleman on that side offered an amendment to it. The point of order was made on the amendment, and the point of order sustained. There was further discussion, and then the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS] gets up and makes the point of order against the resolution offered by the chairman of the committee [Mr. THOMAS]. It is too late. An amendment had been offered to the resolution, and whether in order or not it is too late to make a point of order on the resolution, as all gentlemen can see at once by the mere statement of the proposition. I am not saying that the resolution is not in order, even if the point of order had been made in the first instance. I think it is entirely probable that the resolution is in order; and I want to call the attention of the committee just a moment now to the status of the whole question.

These claims covered in this bill are claims under the Bowman act, as I understand it, that have been accumulating for two or three, perhaps four, Congresses; certainly for two—

Mr. McCOMAS. For three Congresses.

Mr. CANNON. For three Congresses, my friend from Maryland says. From time to time they have been reported back to Congress; and I hold in my hand a statement that on the 19th of December, 1887, the then Speaker of the House [Mr. CARLISLE] held that certain claims then on the Calendar, which had been brought forward from the Forty-ninth Congress by operation of the preceding section, referring to the Bowman act, were properly there, and on the 13th of January, 1888, he held that such should stand first on the Private Calendar.

That gave them a status according to that decision. Subsequently—and I ask the attention of the committee—when one of these claims was reached for consideration, the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. COX] held that these bills, which were reported to a preceding Congress, while properly on the Calendar for such appropriate action as the House might adopt, could not be considered for final disposition. I recollect the decision very well and have it here. The question was made in Committee of the Whole, when the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HATCH] was in the chair, and the gentleman from Missouri at once stepped down and out. A report was made to the House, and then Mr. COX, the Speaker pro tempore, made that ruling, that notwithstanding Speaker CARLISLE's ruling that they stood at the head of the Calendar, they did not stand there for consideration. Consideration was refused absolutely by the decision of the then Speaker of the House, and that bill was not considered.

Now, in due course of time that Congress expired by limitation, and in this Congress certain claims under the Bowman act, in the shape of an omnibus bill, are reported to this House from the Committee on War Claims. The position is taken that these matters were never referred to that committee. They do not stand on the Calendar by virtue of the CARLISLE decision. It has been held, as Speaker COX held, that they can not be considered. They were reported under our new rules not in open House, but by handing to the Speaker or to the Clerk and referred to the Calendar, and came up on Friday last as to what disposition should be made of these bills. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS] said that this matter had never been referred to the Committee on War Claims, and there is no evidence on the face of the bill that they had ever been.

Mr. BYNUM. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question there?

Mr. CANNON. Certainly, with great pleasure.

Mr. BYNUM. I understand that the difference between the bills placed on the Calendar of the Fiftieth Congress and this bill is this: That the bills in the Fiftieth Congress never had been introduced in that Congress, but had been placed on the Calendar as having been on the Calendar in the Forty-ninth Congress. In other words, that they had not been considered in the Fiftieth Congress or considered as reported in this bill. But this bill has been considered by the Committee on War Claims and has been reported to this Congress, so that the two classes of bills are not similar.

Mr. CANNON. If the gentleman will allow me, it is alleged, and I understand such is the fact, that these bills were never referred to the Committee on War Claims in this House.

Mr. OUTHWAITE, Mr. McCOMAS, Mr. ENLOE, and others. That is a mistake.

Mr. BYNUM. It was the case in the Fiftieth Congress, and they could never come up.

Mr. CANNON. Now, I understand from several gentlemen on that side that it is a mistake, and that some of these bills were referred to the Committee on War Claims, and that some were not. Yet this omnibus bill is reported back, not by way of a substitute, in whole or in part, under any jurisdiction that was given to that committee—

Mr. ENLOE rose.

Mr. CANNON. And now, pending—if the gentleman will allow me one sentence—pending the point of order, which goes to the jurisdiction of the committee to report this bill, and consequently the jurisdiction of the Committee of the Whole to consider it—pending that point of order the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS] introduced a resolution that this Committee of the Whole report and recommend to the House that this whole question of these bills (those that were referred to the Committee on War Claims, if you please, and those that were not), under the rules of the House in connection with the Bowman act and in connection with the Calendar, be referred to the Committee on Rules, to be reported back as soon as practicable with such recommendation involving a change of rules as will enable the House to proceed of its own motion to get jurisdiction to cut this Gordian knot.

Now, then, my own belief is that, the point of order not being made when that resolution of the gentleman from Wisconsin was offered nor until after amendment had been offered to it, it is in order for that reason. I am inclined to believe that it is in order as a matter of privilege; and I believe in the present tangled condition, with other claims in this Calendar to follow, and for the consideration of these identical claims themselves, the most speedy way out of the difficulty is to adopt the resolution of the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. CANNON. Certainly; with great pleasure.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. If the Committee of the Whole had no jurisdiction to consider the bill, where does it get jurisdiction to close consideration by recommending that it be sent to the Committee on Rules? If it can not consider it, it can not recommend that it be recommitted to the committee, if it has no jurisdiction of the bill.

Mr. CANNON. If the gentleman will allow me, I have not said that the committee has or has not jurisdiction of the bill. I meant the Committee of the Whole. The point of order involving that question was made last Friday and is pending.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Yes.

Mr. CANNON. That has been argued. Pending that this resolution was offered and considered. Now, then, whether that point of order first made was well taken or not, I apprehend that the Committee of the Whole, finding the bill upon its Calendar, may adopt this resolution and send it to the House and let the House do as it pleases.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Now, the question I asked the gentleman, because he is a parliamentarian and a member of the Committee on Rules, is this: Does not the point of order raised by the gentleman from Iowa necessarily attach itself to this motion, because that point of order is that this committee has no jurisdiction? Now, therefore, when that motion is made it can not possibly supersede the point of order which goes to the very root of the matter; that is, the power of the committee to consider it, and it does not require any point of order.

We have, however, a point of order that was pending, and as soon as the motion was made a point of order was made against that motion as against all other motions; and now, therefore, in the interest of the Chair, meeting the responsibilities of that question and deciding it, let him rule, and, if gentlemen are not satisfied with his decision, upon an appeal let the committee affirm or reject his judgment. If the committee shall affirm it, then we have nothing further to do with the question. If it shall reject it, then that motion of the gentleman from Wisconsin would be in order, and we could consider it and take that course if we saw proper. That would relieve the tangle and make perfectly plain a solution of the question.

The question as to the jurisdiction could be determined, and if any gentleman desires to appeal from the decision he can do so, and that is an end to it. Then if the committee determines that we have jurisdiction let the gentleman from Missouri make the motion, and that relieves us of all apparent tangle, which is purely apparent, of undertaking to put a question of jurisdiction against a question of consideration.

Mr. CANNON. The Chair is perfectly able, I think, to take care of itself.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I am not taking care of the Chair. I am only saying what should be done with the resolution of the gentleman from Wisconsin, and in stating that I am giving my opinion what it is politic to do with a view of discharging the business of the House, including this business. Of course I wish to be understood as not intimating that the Chair is not able to take care of himself. I was trying as far as I could to relieve him of the guardianship of the gentleman from Wisconsin and the gentleman from Illinois, so that he might take care of himself. [Laughter.]

Mr. CANNON. I have always noticed how kind the gentleman from Kentucky is to volunteer in this and in many other matters. In fact, I do not know any gentleman so anxious to volunteer to get everybody out of trouble as the gentleman from Kentucky, and he always does it well. [Laughter.]

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. And I am exceedingly sorrowful that the occasion for it should arise so often in the parliamentary life of my friend from Illinois. [Renewed laughter.]

Mr. BYNUM. Mr. Chairman, I desire to be heard upon this question.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman desire to speak to the point of order?

Mr. BYNUM. I do.

A MEMBER. Which one? [Laughter.]

Mr. BYNUM. Mr. Chairman, I desire to submit a few remarks upon the point of order. I do not wish to discuss the merits of the bill, as I do not know whether I shall support it even if its consideration is had. I am free from any bias or prejudice as to the merits of the bill that might warp my judgment upon the point of order. I have no desire to trespass upon the time of the committee, who seem to be growing impatient, further than to call the attention of the Chair to the importance of this question and of the necessity of maintaining the correct rules of parliamentary procedure. In discussing the point of order raised by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS] I may be pardoned for contending that the Chair should have ruled the resolutions of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS] out of order for reasons additional to those assigned by the gentleman from Arkansas.

Clause 4 of Rule I, defining the duties of the Speaker, declares that—

He shall sign all acts, addresses, joint resolutions, writs, warrants, and subpoenas or orders issued by order of the House, and decide all questions of order, subject to an appeal by any member, on which appeal no member shall speak more than once, unless by permission of the House.

The duties of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole correspond, so far as questions of order are concerned, with those of the Speaker of the House.

Clause 8 of Rule XXIII provides that—

The rules of proceeding in the House shall be observed in Committees of the Whole House so far as they may be applicable.

When a question of order is raised in the committee relative to modes of proceeding with a bill referred to it by the House the Chairman must decide it, and decide it before any other question, except a question of privilege, can be entertained or further proceedings be had.

The Chair, as I understand, has, on a previous point of order, held that the resolution of the gentleman from Wisconsin is a privileged question; if so, under what rule of the House does it become privileged?

Rule IX defines questions of privilege, and we must look to its provisions, and to them alone, to sustain the motion or resolution upon that ground.

RULE IX.

QUESTIONS OF PRIVILEGE.

Questions of privilege shall be, first, those affecting the rights of the House collectively, its safety, dignity, and the integrity of its proceedings; second, the rights, reputation, and conduct of members individually in their representative capacity only; and shall have precedence of all other questions, except motions to adjourn.

Does the resolution of the gentleman from Wisconsin "affect the rights of the House collectively, its safety, dignity, and the integrity of its proceedings?" Most assuredly not! Does it affect the rights, reputation, and conduct of the members individually in their representative capacity only? No one will contend that it does! It is not a motion to adjourn or its kindred motion, which is applicable in Committee of the Whole House, a motion "that the committee rise." So far, Mr. Chairman, as the consideration of measures in Committee of the Whole is concerned there is but one privileged motion, and that is the motion "that the committee rise," which can be made at any stage of consideration or progress.

Clause 4 of Rule XVI provides as follows:

When a question is under debate, no motion shall be received but to adjourn, to lay on the table, for the previous question (which motions shall be decided without debate), to postpone to a day certain, to refer or amend, or to postpone indefinitely, which several motions shall have precedence in the foregoing order; and no motion to postpone to a day certain, to refer, or to postpone indefinitely, being decided, shall be again allowed on the same day at the same stage of the question.

No one will contend that these motions are proper or can be made in Committee of the Whole. The sole object and purpose in considering measures in Committee of the Whole is to avoid the operation of these different motions.

I call attention to these motions and to the fact that they are in order only in the House, so that there may be no controversy or question in the mind of the Chair as to whether there may be priority of motions in the committee as in the House.

I apprehend, however, that no precedent can be found or cited in support of the proposition that any motion in the House, except the privileged motion to adjourn, could be entertained or was in order while a question of order was pending. Such a procedure would at once set at naught all rules, all modes of procedure, and bring upon the House and the committee confusion and chaos. When, in the history of any parliamentary body, has a pending question of order been taken away from the chair and referred to a committee?

What is the House to do while the committee is deliberating upon the question and how is their determination to become the decision of the House? because all points of order may finally be decided by the House. Will the committee bring in a report? If so, when? Will the report be accepted by the House or will it be committed to some other committee? During the time these difficulties may arise what has become of the measure which has priority of right under the rules we have adopted for our government and to facilitate the proceedings of the House?

There is, Mr. Chairman, a well known parliamentary rule which, so far as my knowledge goes, obtains at all times and under all circumstances, which will be overturned should this resolution be entertained by the committee or by the Chair. It is a valuable rule and one that ought never be lost sight of, because in its violation all orderly procedure may be destroyed and the body involved in inextricable confusion. It is that cumulative motions are never in order. Similar questions can not be entertained or be pending at the same time. For this reason but one appeal can be entertained at the same time. While one appeal is pending another can not be taken. If such were not the case appeal upon appeal might be taken and it would become impossible to reach a decision that would relieve the body of the objectionable question and enable it to proceed with the question under consideration.

In this matter we are confronted with the same evil, with the same difficulty. One question of order is now pending, and while that is under consideration another matter is brought before the committee and another question of order is precipitated before us. I submit that no emergency, no exigency ought to arise that will for a moment influence the Chair or the committee to depart from the pathway of orderly procedure, which is so distinctly marked and so essential to the transaction of business. It is the duty of the Chair to decide questions of order as they may arise, and there is no other mode known to parliamentary law of getting rid of them.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, this point of order has been discussed as much, it seems to me, as there is any necessity for discussing the real point of order. The parliamentarians of the House, both young and old, have had a tilt at this question, and they have differed as widely as the poles. I have sat here for two days and listened to the discussion of the merits of this bill and of the questions involved in the different points of order, and I have become more thoroughly convinced to-day than I have ever been before that it is the object the parliamentarian desires to accomplish that influences the argument he will make. [Laughter.] Now, the point of order made by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS] is, to my mind, clearly correct. The entertainment of the resolution offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS] was clearly wrong, in my opinion, with all due deference to the judgment of the Chair.

But this discussion has gone beyond the merits of these different motions; it has gone into a criticism of the action of the last House of Representatives; it has gone into a criticism of the action of the Committee on War Claims, and in the case of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], a distinguished member of the Committee on Rules, it has gone to the extent of exemplifying what I have seen in all the proceedings of Congress since I have had the honor of being a member here, that the Committee on Rules and the other leading committees of this House try to grasp all the power and all the legislation of Congress. I am not astonished that the gentleman from Illinois should argue so vigorously in favor of the position that this resolution of the gentleman from Wisconsin is in order. Why, sir, he is a member of the Committee on Rules, and if that committee can throw out a drag-net and bring within the bounds of its jurisdiction all the powers of Congress, leaving only a very small part to the Committee on Appropriations, then I think that the ambition of the gentlemen who serve on that committee will be gratified.

The gentleman from Illinois in discussing this question to-day has exhibited an ignorance of the subject which is certainly lamentable for a gentleman occupying the position that he does before the country. Mr. Chairman, I have been "unfortunately," to use the expression of the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SIMONDS], a member of the Committee on War Claims in three Congresses; I say "unfortunately" because of the amount of work imposed upon that committee and because of the small results accomplished by that work so far as the final action of Congress is concerned. I have been a member of that committee, as I have said, in three Congresses—why I can not tell.

The questions presented to us are largely questions of law. I am not a lawyer; I am a farmer by occupation; but when I came here and was put on the Committee on War Claims I was compelled to enter into a study of the law bearing on these questions in order to be able to do my duty on this committee. The Speaker of the Forty-ninth Congress saw fit to assign me that duty and in the Fiftieth Congress I had the honor to serve as chairman of this committee. In the present Congress the Speaker went so far as to do me the particular honor of placing me upon no other committee than the Committee on War Claims. I have thus been compelled, perforce, in opposition to my own desires, to study the law governing this question of war claims; and I believe I am "posted" in reference to the action of the House on these questions from the beginning until the present time.

Having had this experience, having been compelled to investigate this matter as I have, I am astonished at the ignorance in this respect of gentlemen who have served longer on this floor than I have and who ought to know better than to make the mistakes they have made to-day. They tell you, in order to bring the influences to bear to refer this question to the Committee on Rules, that these claims have never been before Congress. Why, sir, I have no doubt that every page on this floor knows better than that. Certainly every member of Congress ought to know that these claims come here by the authority of a law of Congress. Every solitary one of them is introduced into this House by bill or petition. They are all referred to the Committee on War Claims; and the law of the land gives that committee power to refer these claims to the Court of Claims for investigation and report. That same law says in express terms that these claims shall continue pending from Congress to Congress until disposed of.

These claims came into the Fifty-first Congress upon bills introduced or reports or references made in the Fiftieth Congress. They went to the head of the Calendar by a ruling of the Speaker. Three bills at the head of the Calendar were passed before any question as to the authority by which they were put there was raised. Then the Speaker pro tempore decided that they were there for proper action by the House, not necessarily for final action until the House shall see fit to adjudge them. Then, Mr. Chairman, a bill was introduced and referred to the Committee on War Claims containing a few of those claims which were at the head of the Calendar. By the action of the House, under the provisions of the Bowman act, when these cases are reported from the Court of Claims they are referred to the Committee on War Claims. So that the statement made on the floor to-day that these claims have never been properly before the committee falls to the ground in the face of the facts. They have been before the committee, and before it rightly.

The committee, exercising the power given to it under the rules of the House, saw fit by a vote of all its members, with one solitary exception, the honorable chairman of the committee disagreeing with the remainder of the committee, to put these claims into one bill and report them back here.

It is said that there is no precedent for this action. Sir, in the Fiftieth Congress a large number of these claims were reported here in one bill, and this House spent every Friday for about two months in the discussion of those claims seriatim as they came up in that bill, and finally the last claim included in the bill was passed by the House. So that these claims are here to-day in this bill in accordance with a precedent set in the Fiftieth Congress.

The act creating the Southern Claims Commission made it the duty of the persons appointed commissioners "to receive, examine, and consider the justice and validity of such claims as shall be brought before them of those citizens who remained loyal adherents to the cause and Government of the United States during the war for stores or supplies taken or furnished during the rebellion for the use of the Army of the United States in States proclaimed as in insurrection against the United States."

This act created, in fact, a judicial tribunal limited to a particular class of claims, and contemplated that its proceedings should be conducted in accordance with judicial methods in common use in the courts of the United States. It was an inferior judicial body, and, like all such organizations acting under the authority of the Government, was bound to follow the decisions of the Supreme Court in its constructions of the statutes on all subjects upon which the commission was required to act. It was to "examine and consider the justice and validity"—judicial acts—of all claims that under the law could be presented to it, and the members could no more disregard the law of the land, as expounded and declared by the courts of the United States, in their examinations and decisions, than can arbitrators in civil cases disregard the laws under which they are acting.

Congress certainly never intended by the act in question to create a body and invest it with judicial power which should be above all law and know no law that interfered with the exercise of its own sweet will. Prior to the enactment of the statute, the Court of Claims and the Supreme Court had had under consideration the various laws of Congress requiring proof of loyalty, and had made a number of decisions defining loyalty and what constituted proof of it, and these decisions of the highest judicial tribunal known to the Constitution were a part of the law of the land, in full force when the law creating the commission was enacted, and became impliedly a part of the statute. Congress was familiar with these decisions of the courts, and the presumption is strong that the law was enacted with reference to them.

But these commissioners held that they were "a law unto themselves." They set themselves above the Supreme Court and ignored its decisions. They utterly disregarded all judicial methods common to the courts of the country, and established a system of their own which violated all the rules of evidence and set at defiance every well established principle of law affecting the rights of individuals.

While I do not wish to reflect unnecessarily upon the gentlemen composing the commission, I do not hesitate to say that the mode of proceedings adopted resulted in such a perversion of justice as was never committed by any other legal tribunal in this country. The truth is that the time was not auspicious for the investigation intrusted to their hands. The bitter feelings engendered by the war had not died out to any extent.

It was the common opinion all over one section of the country that all who resided in the insurrectionary States were disloyal to the Union and deserved to be punished as rebels. The commissioners were all from what are called the loyal States and were thoroughly impregnated with the opinions and prejudices of their section. They entered upon their duties with the conviction that it was their mission to protect the Treasury from a horde of rebels who, having failed to destroy the Union by force of arms, were now determined to bankrupt it by demands upon the national Treasury. They were regarded as Mulberry Sellers, in favor of "the Union and an appropriation."

The rules adopted by which testimony was to be taken and the eighty-odd interrogatories prepared to be propounded to the claimants were not only insulting to every man who became a witness, whether interested or otherwise, but plainly demonstrated that the cases were prejudged before being considered.

The testimony was taken by officers appointed by the commissioners, who were thoroughly in their interests and well knew what was required of them. They were sent South not merely to take the testimony of the witnesses called by the claimants, but they were to act and did act as attorneys for the Government, and they were thus rendered unfit to take the testimony impartially. The claimant and his witnesses were examined by the special commissioners separately and alone, thus being treated as though a criminal on trial. The claimants in many cases were not allowed to have an attorney present to protect their rights or to afford them the opportunity to explain any statement they had made; and it is not stating the fact too strongly to say that these special commissioners in many cases did not fail to report the testimony most strongly against the claimants. The accuracy of testimony taken under such circumstances, and by persons in the interest of one of the parties to the contest, may well be questioned.

Nor is this all. It was made a part of the duties of these special commissioners and special agents, in addition to taking the depositions, to hunt up testimony against the claimants and to report their views of each case.

The more active these special agents in securing all kinds of hearsay statements from irresponsible parties or, as has been suspected, from myths existing only in the lively imaginations of the agents, the greater favor those agents enjoyed.

That the claimants were not allowed to be present, either in person or by counsel, at the time of the taking of the testimony on behalf of the Government by the special commissioner, I need but refer to the statement of the commissioners themselves, in the case of Otey, No. 5174 (Commissioners' Report, 1877, page 34).

In disallowing this claim the commissioners use this language:

In justice to Mr. Edwards, who is charged by claimant with deceiving him in saying he might go to Memphis and the testimony would not be taken in his absence, when in fact Mr. Edwards proceeded immediately to take it in his absence, we deem it proper to say that as Mr. Edwards at that time, according to his uniform custom, did not allow any claimants to be present at the taking of the testimony and the examination of the witnesses we see no motive for deceit, as is alleged, and think that the claimant must have misunderstood what Mr. Edwards said.

Under the rules of the commission claimants were compelled to bring their witnesses to Washington. Of course this involved a great expense. After their witnesses were examined in open court their testimony was given to a special agent and that agent was dispatched to the home of the witness. There he could call witnesses to disprove the allegations of the claimant or he could examine the residents of the vicinage in the manner I have shown was done and make his report to the commission.

The claimant was compelled to bring other witnesses to Washington to disprove the statements in the agent's reports. Very few, if any, of the claimants were able in their impoverished condition to do this. The result was that most of the cases went to trial without the claimants having the opportunity to rebut the so-called testimony taken by the special agents, and the commissioners gave more weight to the unsworn statements thus reported by their special agents than to the legal testimony taken by claimants.

The agents of the Quartermaster-General adopted a similar policy, and the files of that bureau will show that the claims were rejected not upon testimony taken in accordance with the forms of law—not even upon ex parte affidavits—but upon the bare reports of the special agents of the bureau, without any verification whatever. It was not until Congress, by an amendment to the bill making appropriations for the payment of the allowances made by the Quartermaster-General, on June 13, 1880 (21 Stat., 536), that claimants or their attorneys were allowed to be present to cross-examine witnesses before the special agents of the Quartermaster-General. Their investigations were conducted secretly, and so reported to the Quartermaster-General. They were regarded by that officer as confidential communications, to which the claimant or the attorney was not permitted to have access.

It was a star-chamber proceeding in every sense of the word, and this practice continued for a period of sixteen years. Thousands of claims were disallowed without the claimant being advised of the grounds of disallowance or furnished the opportunity to meet the charges thus alleged against him. In many instances the special agents withheld the names of their informants, stating in their reports that the names were withheld for "prudential reasons."

Now as to claims before the Commissary-General, some of which are included in the bill now before the committee. None of these claimants ever had a hearing before the Commissary-General. None of them ever had the opportunity to take any testimony to establish their claims. Congress failed to make any appropriation for the appointment of agents to investigate this class of claims, and only those were allowed by the Commissary-General that were supported by vouchers or affidavits furnished by officials. Upon this subject the Commissary-General, in his report of 1873, says:

It will be impracticable to properly investigate the claims presented under the act of July 4, 1864, unless an appropriation be made for the employment and transportation of officers and agents to investigate the claims.

And no such appropriation was ever made. These cases, then, never had a hearing by, nor were they ever investigated before the Commissary-General, and the facts in each case for the first time are developed in the findings of the Court of Claims.

But, Mr. Chairman, this is not the worst, and yet this is bad enough. To return to the conduct of the commission, I here make the broad assertion that the great majority of the cases before that body were never legally adjudicated. The act creating the commission provided that two of the three commissioners should constitute a quorum, and no claim could legally be adjudicated or rejected but by the concurrence of a majority of the commission. The fact is, however, and I make the statement upon the authority of an officer of the commission, that the commissioners entered into an agreement that no claim should be reported favorably except upon the concurrence of each member of the commission, thus conferring upon one of the body the power to nullify the action of the majority, which was in itself a violation of the statute. Then the cases were parceled out among the commissioners, and if any one of them reported against a claimant—found him disloyal—the claim was at once laid aside as rejected, without any examination by the others.

Thus one commissioner did what the law required to be done by at least two of them; there was no valid examination of the testimony, and claims were rejected in violation of the letter as well as the spirit of the law. And the records of the commission abundantly sustain the assertion I have made. Those records show that few of the decisions are signed by all of the commissioners; that some are signed by only two; a good many by one only; while many are not signed by any of the commissioners at all, thus proving that they were never considered and adjudicated by the commission. These are stubborn facts, supported by records of the commission, and demonstrate that the claimants have not been justly dealt with, after having been put to great expense to prove up their cases.

As one who served in the Confederate army and as representing in part a State which furnished many soldiers to both armies, I am not here to advocate particularly the claims of men residing in the Southern States during the war who claim to have adhered to the United States and to have opposed the Confederacy throughout that conflict. But Congress, by the act of March 3, 1871, which created the Claims Commission, held out to this class of our citizens the promise of payment for the stores and supplies furnished the Federal military forces during the progress of the war which the Government, by reason of their remoteness from their base of supplies, was unable to supply. The Bowman act, by means of which the cases rejected by the Claims Commission have been referred to the Court of Claims, renewed that promise. Some of these claimants are from my State, some my constituents, and I should be wanting in duty to them if I did not insist that they shall receive that justice to which they are entitled under the law.

Mr. Chairman, as a member of the War Claims Committee I concurred in the report made by the majority of the committee, recommending the passage of the bill now before the House. While the amount proposed to be appropriated is a large one, it must be remembered that the sum covers the findings of the Court of Claims under the Bowman act, which was enacted more than seven years ago. It is the result of the labors of that court in this class of cases during the whole of that period of seven years, and if appropriations had been made annually to pay these awards, as is done in the case of judgments of that court, they would have amounted to less than $100,000 per annum. At the first session of the last Congress this House passed a bill making an appropriation to pay the awards rendered up to that period, but the bill never was reached in the Senate.

That question has been fully discussed by the committee who reported this bill; and your committee, waiving the question of the abstract right of Congress to review the action of the Court of Claims, reached the conclusion that effect could only be given to the Bowman act by imitating the ruling of the Supreme Court in analogous cases, and holding the facts thus found by the court "to import absolute verity and conclude each party to the controversy." This is the rule adopted by the Supreme Court in all appeals from the Court of Claims, and is the only practicable rule in the case of private claims before Congress. It is consonant, too, with the purposes of the Bowman act. It was the avowed object of that statute to afford relief to Congress in the investigation of private claims by leaving the ascertainment and determination of facts to a judicial tribunal, where testimony could be taken according to the rule of evidence, the witnesses cross-examined, the parties fully heard, and each case decided in accordance with the facts and the law.

This is the course of proceedings adopted by the Court of Claims; each case is determined in accordance with judicial methods, methods followed in every impartial legal tribunal and which the experience of ages has demonstrated to be the best adapted for the ascertainment of truth. All these cases have been thus heard and determined by the Court of Claims, and the findings reported here, and the awards made, are before us as required by the Bowman act, and are the deliberate result of its best judgment. Are we not morally, if not legally, bound by this action of the court? To repudiate that action, by refusing to appropriate money to pay the awards thus made, would be not only to impose hardships upon the claimants, who have been put to great expense in taking additional testimony to prove up their claims and establish their loyalty, but an implication upon the court and a virtual nullification of the Bowman act itself.

I regret to say that my friend from Wisconsin, the chairman of the War Claims Committee, differs with all the other members of the committee on the binding effect of the findings of fact by the Court of Claims and has made a minority report in opposition to the passage of the bill. His theory is that the decisions of the court are advisory only, and not conclusive, and he complains that in the "preparation of the bill the committee has not considered a single one of the findings of fact or conclusions of the court;" in other words, he insists that the War Claims Committee should act the part of an appellate tribunal and review the decisions of the court, affirming or reversing its action as, in the judgment of the committee, we may approve or disapprove its decisions.

The committee do not deny the right of Congress or the committee to ignore the action of the court, but they deem that course impracticable and unsafe as well. The truth is that it is utterly impossible for any one committee, however industrious its members may be, to examine all these cases in detail, without utterly neglecting other equally important duties as members of the House. And not only this, but, if you adopt the theory that the findings of the court, when in favor of the claimants, may be ignored, the reasons are equally strong for ignoring its decisions when made in favor of the Government.

The claims included in the bill number 284. Of this number there were disallowed for other reasons than alleged disloyalty 163. And of this number there were rejected because the proof of loyalty was not deemed satisfactory 121.

Mr. THOMAS. Does it include all the decisions of the Court of Claims?

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Not all.

Mr. THOMAS. No, not half of them.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Not all. It is only for stores and supplies which are included in this bill. The percentage allowed by the Court of Claims is only about 7 per cent. of the amount referred to them. You go beyond that; you impeach the court; you impeach next to the highest tribunal in the United States by this action.

Mr. ENLOE. I ask the gentleman from Kentucky whether it is not a fact that this bill does not include any class except those under the Southern Claims Commission, and which were embodied in an omnibus bill at every session under the 4th of July act.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. They are all of the very same character of claims, paid by bills amounting to $600,000 as coming from the Southern Claims Commission and passed here at every session of Congress as coming from the Quartermaster-General's Department.

And it is thus shown that more than half of the claims rejected by the Southern Claims Commission and the Quartermaster and Commissary Generals were so rejected, not for want of sufficient proof of loyalty, but for entirely different reasons, some of the reasons being that the claimants were not shown to be citizens; that some were naturalized citizens, but the legal evidence of the fact had not been produced; others because it appeared that the claimants had become bankrupt and the assignees had not been made parties; and others for the reason that the loyalty of the heirs and creditors of deceased claimants had not been established.

We are next told by the gentleman in his minority report that after these cases are transmitted to the Court of Claims they are "reopened and testimony unheard of at the time of the first investigation, and it is claimed not in all cases entirely reliable, is brought forward, establishing, in the opinion of the court, the conclusion that claimants are loyal and should be paid vast sums out of the Treasury."

From whom comes this suggestion? Certainly no information has been laid before the committee upon which to base the statement, and it appears for the first time in the report of the gentleman. None of the new witnesses, whose testimony is thus assailed, have been impeached by the attorneys representing the Government, and their integrity stands without question. The gentleman kindly says that he "does not censure the court for this."

Why should the gentleman censure the court? What right has he or I to sit in judgment upon the acts of this court, second only in dignity and power to that august tribunal the Supreme Court of the United States, and second only to it in the character and ability of the men chosen to constitute it?

Mr. Chairman, what is the court? A body of able lawyers before whom, and before whom only, a citizen of the United States may come and say to the Government, the sovereign, "Pay me that thou owest." Within the precincts of this court, and there alone, the citizen and the Government are placed upon an equality. There the greatest nation of the earth delegates its sovereignty, and laying aside its power says to the citizen, "Prove that I am indebted to you and I will place no privilege against you. I am here as your equal, not as your sovereign."

The Constitution of the United States created the Supreme Court and vested Congress with the power to create other needed tribunals. Congress has exercised that power and has created numerous courts with limited powers. The district courts are limited to suits involving not more than $1,000 as against the United States and between the citizens of different States; the circuit courts, to $10,000. But this court has no limit to its jurisdiction either in the amount involved or the class of cases. It has jurisdiction in law, equity, and admiralty, as is shown by the following extract from the law:

All claims founded upon the Constitution of the United States or any law of Congress, except for pensions, or upon any regulation of an Executive Department, or upon any contract expressed or implied with the Government of the United States, or for damages, liquidated or unliquidated, in cases not sounding in tort, in respect to which claims the party would be entitled to redress against the United States either in a court of law, equity, or admiralty if the United States were suable.

Look at a few of the cases which this court has considered. The Hot Springs case, involving property claimed by individuals and the Government worth not less than $6,000,000. The Supreme Court sustained its action. Take "the great Choctaw case," but recently decided by the same judges now on the bench. The Court of Claims held that the Government was indebted to the Choctaw tribe about $300,000. The Supreme Court upheld the findings of law, but said the amount due the Indians was nearly $3,000,000.

It can not be charged that the judges of this court have any sectional sympathy with these "rebel claims," as some people choose to designate the class of cases now under consideration. None of the judges are from that section or sympathized with the rebellion; but, sir, you will find no man from the South complaining because of this. We believe the judges to be honest, impartial, able, and experienced. That they are painstaking in the examination of the cases brought before them is abundantly proven by the records of the War Claims Committee.

Over one thousand cases have been examined and reported upon within the seven years since the Bowman act was put into operation, and over 90 per cent. of the cases have been decided in favor of the Government. This does not show any dangerous bias of the court in favor of claimants. Less than one dollar in ten of the sums claimed have been allowed and we are asked to pay this allowance. The court has evidently weighed well and examined carefully the cases before it, and has carefully considered the rights and interests of the Government.

Mr. Chairman, there is one way in which this Congress can "censure the court" and besides do a great injustice. The court was constituted to attend to and adjudicate this class of cases. We made the court. We authorized the claimants to enter it and prosecute the Government. In doing that we entered into a contract to pay the awards made by the court. We have neither the right nor the power to change that contract.

Alexander Hamilton, one of the greatest men this nation ever produced, said:

It is in theory impossible to recognize the idea of a promise which obliges, with a power to make a law which can vary the effect of it.

We contracted with the claimants in these cases that if they would go into this court of ours, to which we gave power and jurisdiction greater than those we have ever conferred upon any other court, and there establish, first, loyalty, and, second, the value of the articles proven to have been used by the United States, we would pay for them. The claimants accepted our terms when they filed their petitions. They expended large sums of money to establish the facts.

The court has discharged its functions, and we not only insult the court, do injustice to the claimants, but we violate law if we refuse to appropriate money to pay these awards, because Chief-Justice Waite, in rendering a decision of the Supreme Court, said:

The United States are as much bound to pay their contracts as individuals.

And Justice Strong, in giving another opinion, said:

Where is the power of Congress to add new terms to any contract with the United States? Where is the power to annul vested rights? It is certainly not to be found in the Constitution.

And we entered into a contract with these claimants and gave them vested rights in the awards of this court.

But the chairman of the committee, while not censuring the court, is not so considerate of those who represent the Government at its bar, for he says in his report:

The testimony is taken by deposition, and the court has no means of knowing how much of it is false or whether there has been collusion between the claimants and the agents of the Government in any particular case in the taking of it or no.

I have no disposition to assail men who can not be heard in their own vindication, at least until I am furnished with some tangible evidence of their misconduct. I have reason to know that these agents of the Government thus assailed have been instructed to make vigorous efforts to defeat claims of the character embraced in the bill and to examine the witnesses thoroughly; and the depositions taken by the claimants show that the cross-examinations were most rigid and that these agents faithfully obeyed their instructions.

If it is intended to charge that there was corruption or fraud perpetrated by the agents of the Government in any case favorably reported here by the Court of Claims, then the answer is that it is not too late to prevent the consummation of that fraud. If any such fraud or corruption has been discovered, it is only necessary for the Attorney-General to make the fact known to the court or to Congress, and in that case, I doubt not, the court will promptly recall the case, revoke its findings, and punish the delinquents. Until such a case is pointed out I can only regard the insinuation of the chairman of the committee as a gratuitous attack upon those who have been afforded no opportunity to defend themselves, and one not warranted by the facts.

The gentleman then complains that the committee have neglected and refused to investigate each case, and then makes this declaration:

If in each case the testimony taken by the court and the testimony taken by the Southern Claims Commission or the Quartermaster-General's Department had been compared, the conviction in many instances would have forced itself upon the committee that the case was rotten from top to bottom and that claimants were well known during the entire war as disloyal.

This, Mr. Chairman, is a very broad assertion, and should not have been uttered without indisputable testimony of its truth. Not a single case is produced to establish so bold a proposition. If any such case exists, it has not come to my knowledge.

As chairman of the War Claims Committee of the last Congress and as a member of this committee in this Congress, I have had occasion to examine a large number of these cases. I have found some in which there was failure to prove that the claimants adhered to the United States throughout the war or that they refused to aid the Confederate cause. There may be many such cases, but none such, to my knowledge, ever passed the committee or were reported favorably by the Court of Claims. Besides, the assertion of the report is not a frank one, for it leaves the inference that the testimony taken by both the Court of Claims and the Quartermaster-General was not before that court when each case came before it for consideration.

All the papers in these cases were on file in the office of the Clerk of this House. When a case is sent to the court, under the provisions of the Bowman act, all the papers, including testimony of every description, is transmitted with the order of transfer; and when the case is tried in the Court of Claims, all the testimony and other proofs, whether on the part of the claimant or the Government, is before the court, and that court does what the chairman complains of the committee for not doing, namely, compares not only the new testimony offered, but all the testimony used on former hearings, whether before the Claims Commission or the Quartermaster-General.

In other words, the court investigates and determines the facts from all the testimony before it, just as the Bowman act requires it should do, and does the work far more fully and completely, and with more consideration, than any committee of Congress ever can. As I have already remarked, the testimony in many of these cases is very voluminous; there are many such cases; small ones, as well as large ones, require time and seclusion to investigate properly; and it must be apparent to the House that to require such examination from the committee would occupy the whole time of the members, to the utter neglect of their other equally important duties.

But, Mr. Chairman, suppose I concede, for the sake of the argument, that the court has erred in a few cases—and I know of none—and that awards have been made when the proof was insufficient and the claims should have been rejected. Should an error of this kind invalidate other claims against which no such complaint has been or can be made? Errors of this kind will occur so long as judges, as well as men, are fallible. They occur in every Department of the Government. How many pensions have been granted that have proved to be fraudulent? How many land patents have been issued that had no valid foundation to rest upon? It is well known that the grossest frauds have been perpetrated upon the Treasury in cases in which the fraud could not have been successful if the cases had been before a court and passed through a judicial examination.

Errors of this kind and the mistakes of clerks are sometimes the result of carelessness, but more of them are caused by the haste in which the public business is transacted, and not from corrupt intention. Because of such errors shall we refuse to grant pensions or to issue land patents? The answer to this argument by the author of the minority report is that, if he can point out a single claim in the bill in which an award has been made by the court which is not supported by the testimony in the case, strike it out, refuse to appropriate money for its payment; but the fact that such a case exists is no sufficient reason for refusing to pay other claims to which an objection can not be raised.

It is somewhat ungenerous, to say the least, to attack a whole body of claimants because some one of them may not be justly entitled to be paid; and this the chairman of the committee does in the closing paragraph by his assertion that "the real fact is that in very many of these claims the claimants were disloyal, and for that reason should be excluded under the act from receiving compensation"—a reflection upon the Court of Claims.

I have dwelt too long, perhaps, upon the subject, but I desired to fully inform the committee as to the true status of these claims, to show the treatment to which they had been subjected by the Claims Commission and the Quartermaster and Commissary Generals, and to assure the committee that they had never had a fair and impartial consideration until submitted to the Court of Claims under the Bowman act for re-examination. The labor of the court is now before us in this bill, and the simple question is, will Congress pass the bill and make an appropriation for the payment of these claims?

And, if not, why not? These claims are all for stores and supplies furnished for or taken by the Federal forces during the war, and were necessary for their subsistence. These supplies performed no insignificant part in the success of the Union armies. The soldiers had to live, and, if to live, they had to eat. With intervening hostile armies between them and their base of supplies, the Government was unable to reach them with the rations required for their support, and they were compelled to live upon the country through which they marched. The Union generals have all, more or less, recognized the aid received from this source. Without these supplies the "march to the sea" would have proved a failure. The soldiers would have perished from hunger and exhaustion.

If these claimants throughout the conflict maintained their allegiance to the Union cause and contributed no aid to the Confederacy, and the court has adjudged that they did—and that judgment is conclusive upon us unless we repudiate the action of a court of our own selection for the solution of the question—these claimants are entitled to compensation. And it may be well to inquire who these claimants are. As the records of the commission show, some of them were foreigners who took no part in the conflict of arms, but remained neutral, and under treaties with the nationalities to which they belonged were entitled to protection; others, again, were widows and minor heirs; while some were negroes, all of whom were faithful to the United States and awaited the boon of freedom which they confidently believed would follow the triumph of the Federal arms.

All of these were non-combatants, and being such their private property was exempt from capture as booty of war. In the case of Klein vs. The United States, 13 Wallace, 138, the Supreme Court went even further than this, for in that case the court held that "the Government recognized to the fullest extent the humane maxims of the modern law of nations, which exempt private property of non-combatant enemies from capture as booty of war." And the court adds, "The cases were few indeed in which the property of any not engaged in actual hostilities was subjected to seizure and sale." Much of the property was furnished or taken upon promises of payment by military officers high in command, as the testimony in many of the cases shows, and these promises strengthen the equitable claims of the claimants.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, we have held to these men "the word of promise to the ear;" shall we "break it to the hope?" By the several acts to which I have referred in the course of my remarks Congress has given them to understand that if they established their loyalty they would be entitled to pay for the property used for the subsistence of the Army in the field; and the honor and dignity of the nation demand that the promise should be sacredly fulfilled.

Mr. Chairman, I have endeavored as briefly as possible to give the facts and the law in these cases. So far as the facts are concerned, I know them to be correct. I believe I have not misstated the law. When the idle, the vicious, and unfortunate violate the law and set justice aside, the danger to the community is remote. But the patriotic heart feels a pang when the law-makers of the country, upon the floor of this House, through honest ignorance, catering to sectional prejudices or spurred on by the ambition of the demagogue, propose to violate the Constitution, to break the contracts we have made, to take private property without just compensation, to set aside the decrees of the courts, divest vested rights, and trample with ruthless feet upon principles of law and canons of right consecrated in every virtuous heart for centuries. I yield the floor.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I made this point of order, and I believe I am the only one who has not been permitted to discuss it.

Much has been said about the delay involved in the discussion of the point of order, but justice compels me to state that most of the delay has been occasioned by speeches made upon the other side, evidently with the impression that unless their case was presented very strongly the decision of the point of order would be against them.

Now, Mr. Chairman, this point of order is no new matter. My position on this question is by no means a new one. This question was discussed in the last Congress on a point of order made by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM]; the ground was all gone over, and I am not surprised at the position taken to-day by the gentleman from Kentucky, in view of the fact that in the last Congress he went so far as to say that this House had jurisdiction of a bill of the Forty-ninth Congress, and to pass an act for the payment of a claim that had never been introduced in the Fiftieth Congress or had never been framed in a committee of that Congress, and found fault then because that bill was not passed.

That question was brought to the attention of the House and the same length of time, about, was consumed in the discussion of it as has been consumed on this point of order; and in reference to that I made an inquiry in the following language:

Let me ask the gentleman this question—

Referring to Mr. Dunn, of Arkansas—

Can any bill be passed by this Congress to carry out recommendations of the Court of Claims, in any given case, without first having the bill introduced and properly referred in this Congress?

Now, that is the point of order I made in this case. I hold that either there must be some act of this House authorizing a committee to assume jurisdiction or else the matter must be referred to that committee in order that it may be authorized to act upon it.

Mr. ROGERS. Will the gentleman from Iowa permit me just there a word?

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Certainly.

Mr. ROGERS. In connection with that point I desire to ask the attention of the gentleman to the second paragraph of Rule XXIV, which reads as follows:

Reports and communications from the heads of Departments, and other communications addressed to the House, and bills, resolutions, and messages from the Senate may be referred to the appropriate committees in the same manner and with the same right of correction as public bills presented by members.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Yes—

Mr. ROGERS. Now, I just want to take a moment on that point, with the gentleman's permission.

Here, then, is a report made in pursuance of the act of Congress to the House, and the Speaker, under this rule, refers it to the proper committee. The committee assumes jurisdiction and reports it back. Now, is that not as regular as the jurisdiction of the Appropriations Committee, acquired by virtue of the estimates sent to that committee, or the President's message referred to it, under the act of Congress or under the Constitution, as either may apply to the respective case?

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. But we have no evidence that the reports of the Court of Claims have ever by any action of the House been referred to that committee.

Mr. ROGERS. I have not myself examined the report, but that is conceded.

Mr. RICHARDSON. There is no question about that.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. That is not conceded, but, on the contrary, the report of the committee as presented by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. ENLOE] leads to the conclusion that no such matter was referred. Let me read. The report goes on to say:

The Committee on War Claims, having classified all claims for quartermaster stores and supplies furnished for the use of the United States Army during the late war and reported from the Court of Claims with favorable findings has embraced all such claims in the accompanying bill, and reports the same with the recommendation that it pass.

Mr. ROGERS. My friend wants to be entirely fair, I am sure.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Certainly.

Mr. ROGERS. I understand from gentlemen interested in the bill—I am interested only in the point of order—that every single case was reported to the House and by the Speaker referred to the committee.

Mr. RICHARDSON. And bills offered in nearly every one of them.

Mr. THOMAS. That is not the case.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. I deny that, and I make the denial by authority of the chairman of the Committee on War Claims. Fully one-half of these bills were never reported to the committee.

Mr. ROGERS. Never referred to the committee, you mean?

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Never referred to the committee.

Mr. THOMAS. If the gentleman from Iowa will permit me a moment. As I understand it, in the Forty-eighth, Forty-ninth, and Fiftieth Congresses the Court of Claims reported back their findings in these cases; but in a very large number of cases in this omnibus bill, at least one hundred and twenty, no other action has been taken, no reference by any officer of the House, by any committee of the House, by the Speaker of the House to anybody has been had until they were found in this omnibus bill; and that is the exact situation.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Now, Mr. Chairman, I am not making that statement without authority.

Mr. ENLOE. Will the gentleman permit me just a moment?

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. ENLOE. I wish to say that the statement of the chairman of the committee is substantially correct so far as the reference of the findings is concerned. There are about one hundred and thirty-nine cases in this bill, or one hundred and forty, where bills have been introduced; and probably twenty-five or thirty, maybe fifty, I can not remember the exact number, that have been referred from the House at this session, the others having been reported at previous Congresses.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Now, I have quoted the report of the committee, and in that they seem to base their jurisdiction entirely on the fact that these claims have been acted upon by the Court of Claims.

That whole matter was discussed in the last Congress, and it was claimed that, because the Speaker [Mr. CARLISLE], on the 19th December, had held that the claims were properly on the Calendar, it followed that they were properly before the House for consideration. The question was discussed on the 29th day of January, 1888, and in that discussion a number of gentlemen on the other side participated. The point of order, as I said before, was raised by Mr. LANHAM, and the late Mr. Cox, then in the chair as Speaker pro tempore, made this decision:

The Chair is ready to decide the question. After hearing attentively the argument in the Committee of the Whole, the present occupant of the chair would decide that the class of bills of which the bill referred to is one were reported to the Forty-ninth Congress with accompanying reports from the Court of Claims. They were, by direction of the Speaker, during the present session, ordered to be placed on the Private Calendar for consideration on Fridays. In the opinion of the Chair it does not follow that these bills of a former Congress are here for passage by the present House without the formalities contemplated by our rules. They are on the Calendar for appropriate action. What is that appropriate action? It may be the reference of them to a committee—

Now, I make the point of order that fully one-half of these bills have not been referred to any committee—

It may be to lay them on the table. The reference of bills to the Calendar does not necessarily imply that they are to be passed or to be considered with a view to final disposition. Even messages from the President are directed to be placed on the Calendar; but no one would suppose that because a message of the President is placed on the Calendar of the Committee of the Whole the committee should at once consider, for instance, the question of the tariff, presented in that message, without such preliminary steps as the rules contemplate.

Now, that was the decision made when Mr. Cox was in the chair as Speaker pro tempore.

Mr. REILLY. But as a matter of fact were not the bills placed on the Calendar without any action of the House?

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. I say this, that there is no evidence in anything I have heard that there has been any action of the House with reference to these bills.

Now, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MCCREARY] the other day mentioned the fact that he had introduced one bill, and that that bill was in this list. I hold that the Committee on War Claims had no right to endanger the bill of the gentleman from Kentucky by putting it in an omnibus bill with two hundred and fifty other claims.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Certainly.

Mr. WASHINGTON. I introduced two other bills that are in there as pending, and as there are a great many others in this omnibus bill which were regularly introduced and referred to the Committee on War Claims and reported back, why do you object to their consideration?

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Mr. Chairman—

Mr. WASHINGTON. Let me get to the point. Why not proceed with the consideration of this omnibus bill, and then, if your objection holds to these claims that have not been introduced formally, strike them out and let the other claims in the bill be considered.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Let me tell you that when we go into Committee of the Whole and move to strike these claims out gentlemen have their claims in there and are associated in this omnibus bill. They will all vote against striking out these items. Now, what is the remedy? We can not have a vote in the House on it.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Your remedy is in a point of order. You make a point of order on any of those items, and it goes out.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Well, I have made a point of order on all of them. I made the point of order on all the claims involved in this bill, and it certainly ought to be sustained.

Mr. WASHINGTON. But you are making it against all these amounts claimed in this bill, in which bills were presented as well as those in which bills were not.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. It ought to be sustained. The question is whether a committee of this House shall have jurisdiction to group a large number of bills, bad, good, and indifferent, place them in an omnibus bill, and have the good ones ride the bad ones through.

Now, I think the point of order is right. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS], chairman of the committee, proposed to leave this to the Committee on Rules. I wish to call the attention of the House to a clause of our present rule which authorizes the reference of these matters to the Committee on Rules. I call attention to clause 45 of Rule XI:

All proposed action touching the rules, joint rules, and order of business shall be referred to the Committee on Rules.

I hold that under this provision of Rule XI the motion of the gentleman from Wisconsin was in order, and that it ought to be sustained.

Now, Mr. Chairman, in regard to the Bowman act itself. I deny that the Bowman act authorizes these bills to be placed on the Calendar; and, if it did authorize it, the rules of this House make it void. No body of men anywhere have the right to dictate to this body under what rules it shall proceed. That argument was forcibly made, if I mistake not, by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS] in the last session of Congress.

Mr. ROGERS. I agreed to that.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. I say there is no difference between the old rules and the new rules as to the committee getting jurisdiction. The only difference is this: That in the rules of former sessions a bill had to be read in open House, whereas under the rules we have here they may be read and referred by the Speaker. But there is no change in the rules with reference to what is necessary to give jurisdiction. There must be a bill and a reference.

Mr. ROGERS. My friend certainly does not comprehend the rule I just read. It says that "all communications addressed to the House shall be referred as other bills;" and the Speaker refers it in that way.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Now, in regard to the Bowman act. It prescribes that when the facts shall be found the court shall not enter judgment thereon. The law expressly denies jurisdiction in the court to enter judgment thereon. Why? Because it was believed that this body should consider the question and determine upon the merits as to whether or not they ought to pass, and Congress denied to the court the authority to enter judgment. The law says:

Who shall report the same to the committee or to the House by which the case was transmitted for its consideration.

The law further provides that if a bill is not disposed of in that Congress the court shall report again to the next Congress all bills not disposed of in the former Congress.

Now, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] the other day spoke of the Tucker act. The Tucker act has no reference whatever to any of these claims. By an express provision of the Tucker act no claim can be considered unless it arose within six years before the time it was presented; so that it can have no application to matters that arose more than twenty-five years ago. Now, this report expressly excludes and the bill expressly excludes from the consideration of the House the merits of every case. The court are in duty bound to report to us the facts in the case, so that we will know upon the presentation to Congress of the report as to whether the bill ought to pass the House or not. Here we have presented to us in a single omnibus bill two hundred and fifty claims in a body, without a single reference as to many of these cases.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is prepared to rule upon the question of order raised by the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. ENLOE. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will proceed with the ruling.

Mr. ENLOE. Mr. Chairman, I want to say this: I had the promise of the Chair that I should be recognized on this resolution before the matter was wound up.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to say that gentlemen on that side who were recognized by the Chair occupied so much time that it is now impossible to recognize the gentleman from Tennessee, the hour for recess having nearly arrived. It is not the fault of the Chair.

The point of order raised by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS] is that the resolution offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS] can not be entertained until this bill has been considered by the Committee of the Whole, paragraph by paragraph, and amendments offered if desired. The Chair thinks he states the gentleman's position correctly.

Mr. ROGERS. I think that is a fair statement of it, but if the Chair will permit me, I would rather put it in this way: Until the committee has entered upon the consideration of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. In other words, until the committee has entered into the merits of the question. The Chair holds that the resolution offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS] is a privileged motion, and as such takes precedence of everything except a motion to rise. The Chair is not prepared to hold that he will not consider, or allow this committee to consider, a privileged motion or resolution as soon as presented, and in support of his ruling the Chair will have read from the Digest what is there said under the head of "Questions of Privilege" upon this question generally. Of course it is for the committee to say whether they wish to adopt the resolution offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin, but it is not for the Chair to withhold, or in any way to impede or retard, a privileged motion. The Clerk will now read from the Digest.

The Clerk read as follows:

Whenever the Speaker is of the opinion that a question of privilege is involved in a proposition he must entertain it in preference to any other business, such opinion, of course, being subject to an appeal; and when a proposition is submitted which relates to the privileges of the House it is his duty to entertain it, at least to the extent of submitting the question to the House as to whether or not it presents a question of privilege.

The CHAIRMAN. This statement in the Digest is followed by a long list of references to decisions bearing upon the question in all its aspects. Now, a point of order is addressed to the Chair, and it is for the Chair to consider and pass upon it; but a question of privilege is a very different and a far higher question, and the Chair, considering that this resolution is such, felt it his duty to entertain it, notwithstanding the fact that in so doing it interfered with the question of order raised by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KERR]. For these reasons the Chair overrules the point of order made by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS] upon the resolution offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS].

Mr. ROGERS. And from that I appeal.

Mr. SPRINGER. Pending that I move that the committee rise. It is but a minute before the regular time when the committee has to rise under the rules.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee according rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan, from the Committee of the Whole, reported that they had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 7616) for the allowance of certain claims for stores and supplies taken and used by the United States Army, as reported by the Court of Claims under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1883, known as the Bowman act, and had come to no resolution thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. LESTER, of Virginia, for four days, on account of important business.

To Mr. DIBBLE, for ten days, on account of important business.

The hour of 5 o'clock p. m. having arrived, the House, under the rule, took a recess until 8 o'clock p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House reassembled at 8 o'clock p. m.

The House was called to order by Mr. MORROW, who directed the reading of the following communication:

SPEAKER'S ROOM, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, April 4.

Mr. MORROW is hereby appointed Speaker pro tempore for this evening's session.

T. B. REED, Speaker.

Mr. MORRILL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of bills on the Private Calendar under the special order for Friday evening sessions.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. PETERS in the chair.

HARRISON WAGNER.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole for the consideration of business on the Private Calendar under the special order. The Clerk will report the first bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 645) granting a pension to Harrison Wagner.

Mr. YODER. Mr. Chairman, I reported that case and last Friday evening I asked that it be laid aside. I now ask unanimous consent to withdraw it for the present.

There was no objection.

JAMES H. FLEMING.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 2044) granting a pension to James H. Fleming.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James H. Fleming, of Company E, One hundred and fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry.

The report (by Mr. LANE) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2044) granting a pension to James H. Fleming, submit the following report:

The soldier in this case enlisted August 11, 1862, and was discharged June 3, 1865. The basis of this claim is injury to knee in battle at Jonesborough, Ga., which finally resulted in amputation of the leg.

The claim was rejected by the Pension Office for the reason that the injury was not due to the service. It is in evidence that this man was sound and healthy when he entered the Army, and he was in the battle of Jonesborough, Ga., and he swears that while on a double-quick in that battle he fell on his knee and received the injury in question, but no one saw him just at that moment. It is in evidence by several comrades that just after the battle he complained of the injury to his knee, and after this several witnesses testify during several years after the war as to the injury of the soldier's knee, until it became so affected that amputation was necessary in order to save the soldier's life.

This claimant was in the Army over three years, and in the absence of any testimony that he ever received any injury but in the battle mentioned, it is not asking too much to believe the sworn statement of this soldier, and the committee resolve the doubt, if there is any, in favor of the soldier, and recommend that the bill do pass.

Mr. ENLOE. Mr. Chairman, upon this bill I submit the resolution which I send to the desk.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee of the Whole House report House bill 2044 to the House with the recommendation that it be referred to the Committee on Rules, the committee to investigate the status of said bill in connection with the practice of the House, as early as practicable to make such recommendation in the premises as they may deem proper for the consideration of the House, including any change of rules deemed by them necessary for just action on the part of the House as to this and similar bills.

Mr. LANE. Mr. Chairman, I move to lay that motion on the table.

Mr. ENLOE. I would like to know if the Chair entertains that resolution.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LANE] moves to lay the resolution on the table, but the Chair will state to the gentleman that a motion of that kind is not in order in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. ENLOE. Do I understand that the Chair rules that resolution out of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has not made any such ruling. The Chair has simply stated that the motion of the gentleman from Illinois is not in order.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I raise the point of order that the resolution is not in order. It sets up no alleged or real facts as a reason why the bill should be referred. It is a bare, naked resolution to refer a bill now on the Calendar of the Committee of the Whole to a committee of this House. No reason is given for such action, and hence this is not a privileged motion and should not be entertained by the Chair at all at this time. In other words, the motion is out of order. It is not a privileged motion. If the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. ENLOE] wanted to be as brilliant as this attempt would indicate, he should have gone further and made his motion a privileged one, which he has entirely failed to do. You can not by any possibility offer a simple resolution to refer a bill to any committee while we are in Committee of the Whole; you can only recommend that it be done. There must be some reason alleged and that reason sufficient to make it a privileged question, going to the rights and privileges of some member of this House, of the House itself, or of some committee of the House, to make it analogous to the one partially copied. I give this parliamentary exposition gratuitously for the benefit of the gentleman from Tennessee, who evidently wants to undertake to repeat here this evening the afternoon's proceedings, but he has not undertaken it in such a way as will stand the test.

Mr. ENLOE. Mr. Chairman, I am very much obliged to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. ALLEN] for his reference to the supposed fact that I would like to display some of my brilliancy by offering this resolution, and I am also very much obliged to him for giving us some further evidence of his own brilliancy in addition to that which he gave while he was presiding in Committee of the Whole to-day. The resolution I have offered is the same in terms as the one which the gentleman, while he occupied the chair to-day in Committee of the Whole, decided to be in order. It makes no difference whether it is a privileged question or not. I got the floor to offer this resolution, and I did not need to make it a privileged question. There is as much privilege in it as there was in the resolution which the gentleman ruled to be in order to-day. He decided that a resolution in these identical terms, to take a bill out of the hands of the Committee of the Whole and send it to the Committee on Rules, was in order.

I am here to-night to commend to the gentleman's lips the chalice from which he made me drink to-day. And the question upon this resolution will be decided. Either the Chair will rule it not in order or he will rule it in order, and then I will proceed to take the same course that has been taken here with reference to the bill I had the honor to report to this House from the Committee on War Claims. I say there is as much ground, as much right, as much parliamentary law for taking this bill out of the hands of this committee and referring it to the Committee on Rules as there was for taking the bill that I had in charge to-day out of the hands of the Committee of the Whole and referring it to the Committee on Rules. What was good sauce for our goose to-day is good sauce for your gander to-night, and I propose you shall take it.

The gentleman says this is a plain bill and there is no reason for referring it. So was the other a plain bill, and there was no reason for referring that, except that the gentleman, as occupant of the chair, found himself involved in parliamentary difficulties out of which he could not extricate himself, so that he needed the advice of the Committee on Rules, or else because there is behind this movement a deeper purpose, because certain gentlemen who are undertaking to influence, shape, and control the action of this House in regard to the class of claims presented in the bill that I had in charge to-day want to take it out of his hands and have it referred to them. For what purpose? To settle any legitimate question; to settle the parliamentary status of the bill? That was the duty of the Chair. To make a new rule? The Committee on Rules had that opportunity for three weeks, but they would not report any rule in regard to these cases. Is it because these claims are not just? There has been no man here who could successfully impeach their justness. Insinuations and false charges have been made, but we have had no opportunity to present the facts, and we are not to be given that opportunity.

These claims, coming as they do from eleven of the Southern States, are just claims of loyal citizens against the Government—adjudged to be loyal by a loyal court, after the Government has had its day in court, has made its defense, and has had access to every department of the Government for the purpose of making that defense; and yet by this parliamentary legerdemain and trickery the bill is to be taken out of the status given it under the rules of the House and referred to that graveyard for just measures, the Committee on Rules.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Ohio. I would like to make a parliamentary inquiry. I would be glad to know whether we meet to-night to discuss the question of pensions or the Southern claims bill.

Mr. ENLOE. I am very much obliged to the gentleman for the question. I will answer it. I will state to the gentleman that I am proceeding simply in accordance with the rules that have governed this House for two Fridays, when every gentleman who has taken the floor has talked about everything else than the point of order. I have not attempted to discuss that question on these two Fridays, because I wanted a vote; I wanted action on the bill; I wanted a decision from the Chair. I have appealed to the Chair time and again to stop the discussion, to say that he was satisfied on the point and ready to render his decision.

If it is permissible on Friday to talk the day away on everything except the business before the House, I suppose it is strictly in order on Friday night to repeat the performance.

I will have something to say about the merits of that bill when it comes up. I am prepared to defend the action of my committee and my action in this House when I get an opportunity to do so. But I have not been willing, under pretense of discussing the point of order, to talk about the merits of the claims involved in that bill. I am obliged to the gentleman for calling my attention to the point now.

A MEMBER. Sit down.

Mr. ENLOE. Yes, I will sit down and let the Chair rule. I have said all that I want to say at present, but I am going to have a vote taken upon it.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. But I would like to say a word in answer to what has been said by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. ENLOE]. That gentleman has failed to comprehend either the resolution he has now sent to the Chair or the question that was before the Committee of the Whole this afternoon. The resolution sent to the Chair by the gentleman is a naked request on the part of the mover that a certain bill be referred to the Committee on Rules. That motion is entirely out of order. But the gentleman seems to think that it is similar to the question raised this afternoon; and in his criticism of those who have spoken to-day, who, by the way, were two to one upon his own side of the House, and his criticism of the then occupant of the chair, he has undertaken to show that the two propositions are similar and that the present occupant of the chair must rule as the occupant of the chair did this afternoon.

The motion this afternoon, reciting that a bill which the gentleman himself reported contained matters never submitted to his committee (a grave charge against him and his committee), presented a question of the highest privilege, which any man of candor and brains must at once recognize as a question of privilege. And that is the difference between the resolution of to-day and the resolution to-night. The resolution of to-day charged the gentleman impliedly with introducing into this House a bill which he had no authority to introduce. That raised the question of privilege at once, and to shield the gentleman, to shield his committee, to give members who were thus charged an opportunity as a matter of privilege to refute this charge, the motion was entertained as a privileged motion, not in the interest of delay, not against the bill, but to see to it that the rules should not be violated, that when a privileged question comes up it shall be entertained.

But the motion before the House submitted by the gentleman from Tennessee has none of these elements. If the gentleman had intended to raise the question he should have gone further and put into his resolution, what if he had put into it he would have known to be false, that this bill got upon the Calendar to-night under false pretenses. He did not dare do it, and there is nothing for the Chair to do but to rule the motion out of order. It has no privilege.

Mr. ENLOE. Mr. Chairman, I want to say in reply to the remarks of the gentleman from Michigan that he has given convincing evidence, ever since he has been called upon to preside in Committee of the Whole, not only to this House, but to the whole country, that upon questions of parliamentary law he is par excellence the authority in the United States. He undertakes to say that there was a grave charge against the Committee on War Claims. I say in reply that there is no charge contained in the motion or any proposition that is pending before this House that in the least degree reflects upon the action of that committee. It is a parliamentary question simply, going to the jurisdiction of the committee over this bill.

But I am not astonished that the gentleman from Michigan is not able to draw a distinction between a parliamentary question and the right of the committee to embody the claims in the bill. It is a convincing evidence, if any further evidence was required, that the gentleman does not know a parliamentary question when he meets it in the road.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Do not scold; do not scold. That is an old lady's prerogative, and not that of a member of Congress.

Mr. ENLOE. I am not going to scold; not going to scold at all. I am simply following the example set by the gentleman himself. He has criticised my opinion. I am criticising his.

So far as raising any question of privilege is concerned, I want to say to the gentleman that it is impossible a question of privilege should be raised upon the jurisdiction of the Committee of the Whole to consider a bill because the committee reporting that bill had transcended its authority. That is all there was in the bill. There was nothing in the proposition to-day more than there is in the proposition to-night to give that resolution a parliamentary standing before the Committee of the Whole. And I want this Chair to decide upon the same point that was presented to the occupant of the chair to-day, so that we may be able to see what is to be done in respect to questions that may arise when a bill is in the Committee of the Whole upon motions of this character, taking it out of the hands of the committee, referring it to some other committee than that from which it originated, or refer it back even to the committee in which it had originated before being considered by the committee or its consideration entered upon before the House.

Now, I will yield the floor and ask the Chair for a ruling upon the point of order raised.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not think the motion of the gentleman is in order, and therefore sustains the point of order made against it.

Mr. ENLOE. From that decision, Mr. Chairman, I take an appeal.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the committee?

The decision of the Chair was sustained.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the bill will be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

THOMAS J. CASSIDY.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 3043) granting a pension to Thomas J. Cassidy.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas J. Cassidy, late of Company B, Thirtieth New York Heavy Artillery.

The report (by Mr. LANE) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3043) granting a pension to Thomas J. Cassidy, submit the following report:

The soldier enlisted August 10, 1863, and was discharged August 24, 1865. The basis of the claim is gunshot wound while returning from furlough and on board a boat between Baltimore and Fortress Monroe, about January, 1864, which gunshot wound was accidental.

The claim was rejected first on the ground that the incurrence of the alleged wound was not while in line of duty, which ground of rejection was afterwards changed to the claimant's inability to furnish the proof necessary to establish his case.

Two of his comrades testify in the record that the soldier was wounded accidentally, through no fault of his own, on a boat between Fortress Monroe and Baltimore, in January, 1864, by a gun falling from a stack of guns and being discharged by such fall, and the ball of said gun striking him in the right breast and coming out in his arm just below his right shoulder. These witnesses were there present and saw this matter themselves, and these facts are not disputed. The examining surgeons in their report state that this soldier's disability is three-fourths total, incapacitating him from performing manual labor.

We see no good reason why the name of this soldier should not be placed on the pension-roll, and therefore recommend that the bill do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ELIZA RICHARDSON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 3531) granting a pension to Eliza Richardson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Eliza Richardson, mother, by adoption, of Thomas Marmaduke Hogg, who enlisted under the name of Thomas Marmaduke in Company D of the Tenth Regiment of Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and who died on the 18th day of February, A. D. 1863, and that said Secretary cause to be paid to said Eliza Richardson a pension of $12 per month.

The report (by Mr. LANE) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3531) granting a pension to Eliza Richardson, submit the following report:

The claimant in this case is eighty-one years old. She was the mother, by adoption, of Thomas Marmaduke Hogg, who enlisted in Company D of the Tenth Missouri Infantry under the name of Thomas Marmaduke.

Gilbert D. Gray, who was first lieutenant in said company, states that the soldier enlisted in July or August, 1861. That shortly after enlistment, while on march, by an accident, he was ruptured very badly. That in February or March, 1862, he was taken sick and sent to the hospital at St. Charles, Mo., and thence to hospital at Keokuk, Iowa, from which he was discharged.

The claimant states that the soldier contracted catarrhal fever and pleurisy in the service as the result of an attack of measles; that he died February 18, 1863, and left no widow or child.

That her husband is seventy-eight years old and unable to work; that she has had no child other than this one by adoption.

S. V. Elliott states that the soldier's health was much broken when he came out of the service, and that he was never married.

D. R. Thomber states that he was intimately acquainted with the soldier before and after his service, and that his health was much impaired by the service, and that he was never married; that from infancy he was intimately acquainted with the soldier up to the time of his service and after; while he was in hospital at Keokuk and after his discharge; that he visited him at the hospital and he was then suffering from wounds. After his discharge he frequently complained of catarrh and pleurisy, and at times was totally disabled; that he was the chief support of his parents by adoption; that both parents are unfit for labor, and the mother is an invalid and a cripple; that their means of support is a small farm of 25 acres; that he firmly believes the soldier died from diseases contracted in the service.

Thomas Powell states he is a physician; is a near neighbor of claimant, and has known the family for twenty-five years, and for twenty years has been their family physician. The family consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Richardson and their adopted son, the soldier; they never had any other children. That since his service the soldier was troubled with catarrh and pleurisy, and on February 18, 1863, he died from those diseases; that the father is feeble and often confined to his room. The claimant is lame and feeble.

Other witnesses make similar statements to the above recited. While he was in the service he sent money home to his adopted parents.

Your committee believe the case is meritorious and recommend the passage of the bill, but amend said bill by inserting after the words "pension-roll" the following words: "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws," and strike out the last two lines of said bill.

The amendments recommended by the committee were adopted.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

JOHN C. BADDELEY.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6292) for the relief of John C. Baddeley.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John C. Baddeley, dependent father of James Baddeley, who was killed in the battle of Jonesville, Va., while fighting as a private soldier in the Sixteenth Illinois Cavalry.

The report (by Mr. LANE) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6292) granting a pension to John C. Baddeley, submit the following report:

The committee find that James C. Baddeley, a son of this claimant, entered the Army in 1863, then but seventeen years of age, and that he was too young to be mustered into the service and was not mustered in, but notwithstanding this fact he joined Company I, Sixteenth Illinois Cavalry.

That evidence shows that in all battles in which said regiment was engaged said James C. Baddeley took a part and was with the regiment at the battle of Powell's Valley, November, 1863; also in the battle of Jamesville, Va., January 3, 1864, in which battle he was killed while doing a soldier's duty in the ranks. The father is now seventy-two years of age and has been totally paralyzed since 1860, and that the soldier's mother is sixty-eight years of age, and that they have no means of a livelihood, and that if said son was now living they would both be depending on said son for their support. The mother's name is Ellen Baddeley.

These facts are incontestably proven in this case, so the committee recommend that said bill be amended by striking out the name of John C. Baddeley from said bill and insert in lieu thereof the name of Ellen Baddeley; and also strike out the word "father" in the sixth line of said bill and insert in lieu thereof the word "mother," and that the title of the bill be amended accordingly, and that the bill as so amended do pass.

Mr. KILGORE. I would like to have some member of the committee in this case explain why the mother is made the beneficiary instead of the father.

Mr. LANE. That is the law now.

Mr. MORRILL. The father can not be the beneficiary while the mother is living.

Mr. KILGORE. Is that the rule?

Mr. MORRILL. That is the law.

The amendments recommended by the committee were adopted.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

DOUGLASS SMITH.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5915) granting a pension to Douglass Smith.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Douglass Smith, of Cedar Falls, Iowa, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The report (by Mr. SAWYER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5915) granting a pension to Douglass Smith, submit the following report:

The beneficiary was employed as an officer's servant by Bvt. Maj. Gen. William W. Averell, United States Army, from November, 1861, to December, 1863, under the then existing laws and regulations of the Army. That on the 19th of December, 1863, near Covington, Va., while accompanying said General Averell on the "Salem raid," and while, by command of General Averell, he was taking care of Capt. L. Markbrut in an ambulance, the said Smith and said captain were both taken prisoners, and said Smith was taken to Andersonville prison, Ga., where he remained about sixteen months, the said Smith being one of the eleven survivors of the ninety soldiers captured at the same time from the command of General Averell.

General Averell says of him:

"He was a very active and intelligent man, who, besides performing the duties of an officer's servant in an acceptable manner, carried arms, and was frequently employed by me to carry orders when it was important they should be delivered clearly and intelligently. He was fearless and cool-headed in action, and, being a competent and skillful nurse, frequently gave attention to wounded officers and men.

"The hardships, privations, and horrors of the prison left him an emaciated, demented, human wreck, who came back to me in 1865 covered with sores."

He was not an enlisted man, but an officer's servant, whose status is recognized by the Rules and Articles of War and the Regulations of the Army. His employment was authorized and his conduct regulated by law. He performed his duties as an officer's servant, and often those of a soldier, faithfully and well, and it was as orderly that he was captured and held a prisoner. He is found so reported namely, "General Averell's orderly," by the enemy. His physical condition has not materially improved.

Your committee, believing this to be a very meritorious bill, would recommend its passage.

Mr. TARSNEY. Mr. Chairman, I would like to inquire of some member of the committee in what years this soldier was sixteen months in Andersonville prison. This prison was established in February, 1864, and General Sherman was in that part of the country in the fall of the year.

Mr. MORRILL. That is probably a clerical error in the report.

Mr. TARSNEY. For he could not have been there sixteen months.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

EVELINE M. ALEXANDER.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4411) granting a pension to Eveline M. Alexander.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Eveline M. Alexander, and rate her pension at $30 per month, which shall be in lieu of the pension she now receives.

The report (by Mr. SAWYER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4411) granting a pension to Eveline M. Alexander, submit the following report: That a bill similar in all respects to the present one was introduced into the last Congress and referred to this committee, and by them favorably reported upon. The bill failed to pass the last Congress.

The committee, believing this to be a meritorious case, would adopt the report of the last Congress, hereto annexed, and recommend that the bill do pass.

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4578) granting a pension to Eveline M. Alexander, widow of Bvt. Brig. Gen. Andrew J. Alexander, submit the following report:

It appears from the report of the Adjutant General, on file in the Pension Office, that General Alexander entered the regular Army of the United States July 25, 1861, as second lieutenant, and remained until May 4, 1867, when he died, holding the rank of lieutenant-colonel. He served as adjutant-general of the Third Army Corps of Army of the Potomac and of the Seventeenth Corps of the Department of the Tennessee. Served as chief of staff to General Stoneman, commanding Department of the Tennessee, and also as inspector-general in 1865. Subsequently served with his regiment and in other capacities in Arkansas, New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, Texas, and Montana. That in 1864 he was retired from active service in consequence of disabilities incurred in the line of duty as an officer of the Army.

It appears that in 1865 he commanded the Second Brigade, Fourth Division Cavalry Corps, Military Division of the Mississippi.

Mrs. Alexander is now receiving a pension of $30 per month as the widow of a lieutenant-colonel.

The evidence shows that she is a lady in ordinary circumstances, with a young son, about twelve years of age, and at that age when the expenses of education are rapidly increasing.

The letter from General Wilson, one of the most distinguished cavalry officers of the Army, addressed to one of the committee, is annexed hereto and made a part of this report.

The committee believe that this lady, the widow of so distinguished an officer, who bravely commanded a brigade while in active service, who was in fact a brevet brigadier-general, there being no vacancy in the full rank, is under the circumstances fairly entitled to the relief this bill seeks to give, and therefore recommend that the bill pass.

WASHINGTON, March 14, 1888.

Sir: I beg to call your attention to the claim of Eveline M. Alexander, widow of the late General Andrew S. Alexander, for an increase of pension.

It was my good fortune to know General Alexander during the rebellion—appointed into the Army from Missouri, and by conspicuous merit rose to the command of a brigade of cavalry in the corps which I had the honor of organizing and commanding. Prior to that he was a lieutenant-colonel and assistant adjutant-general of the Seventeenth Army Corps, on the staff of his brother-in-law, Maj. Gen. Frank Blair.

After serving with me as chief of staff through the Nashville campaign, during which he rendered most valuable service, I secured for him the rank of brevet brigadier-general (it being understood that he could not be appointed to the full rank because there were no vacancies in that grade) and assigned him to the command of a brigade of cavalry in Upton's (Fourth) division, which command he held during the final campaign through Alabama and Georgia, with which the war was ended. He greatly distinguished himself in the battles at Montevallo, Ebenezer Church, the assault and capture of Selma, the passage of the Alabama, the assault and capture of Columbus, Ga., and finally in the operations which resulted in the capture of Jefferson Davis.

In all these battles and operations he was conspicuous for the energy, courage, activity, and ability with which he commanded and led his brigade. He was constantly under my observation, and I most cheerfully bear witness to his high qualities and character, as well as to the untiring industry and persistency with which he performed every duty.

I was personally a witness to an incident which I do not doubt was proximately the cause of his death. During the passage of the Alabama by the corps on a ponton bridge, built for the occasion, Alexander, with a small boat and crew, was trying to protect the bridge from the drift-wood with which the river was filled by the rapidly rising flood. An enormous tree caught his frail craft between it and the bridge, overturned the craft, threw the general into the water, and as he arose to the surface and seized the bow one of the pontoons caught and crowded him almost to death. He was rescued with great difficulty; two of his ribs were broken, his back was severely injured, and his lungs badly bruised.

Twenty-two years afterwards, while suffering from disease directly the result of his long and faithful services, he died from the bursting of an abscess on his lungs, which I doubt not had its origin from the injury just described. He was at the time in the line of his duty as a brigadier-general, and it was not his fault that he did not hold the full rank. He was regularly assigned to command before that date as a brevet brigadier-general, and for all purposes of the military service and for the law he was just as much a brigadier-general as a dozen appointments to that grade could have made him. He commanded and was obeyed as such, he was injured as such, and now that he is dead, leaving his wife and young son dependent upon the justice and liberality of his country, I submit that they should receive a pension according to his services and command as a brigadier-general, and not according to the literal rank he had when he died.

I am well acquainted with Mrs. Alexander and her father's family, one of the most distinguished in New York, and as such she has no support and no means of educating her young son except what she derives from the small pension now allowed her and from the meager savings from her husband's army pay, which he invested several years before he became disabled.

She needs, and ought to have, the largest pension ever paid under such circumstances, and no one who will take time to read the little volume I prepared and which his wife published, giving an account of his life and services, can doubt the justice of this conclusion.

He was a brave, virtuous, heroic soldier, and of the highest character in all the relation of life, and as the actual commission of brigadier-general of volunteers could have imposed no additional service, danger, or command upon him, I trust his widow's petition may be promptly granted. He who gives quickly gives twice. In this case I hope there will be no delay.

If deemed necessary, I will cheerfully make affidavit to the truth of the foregoing statement.

Perhaps I should add that General Alexander was also the brother-in-law of Major-General Upton, of New York, and that young Upton Alexander is now the sole representative of those two most gallant and patriotic soldiers, and is dependent upon this increased pension for the education a boy of such lineage should receive.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES H. WILSON,
Lt. Maj. Gen. Vol., Comdg. Cav. Corps M. D. M., and Brevet Maj. Gen., U. S. A.

HON. JOHN G. SAWYER,
House of Representatives.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, I do not understand exactly what is the amount carried by this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. It is $50.

Mr. KILGORE. The habit has been when a bill of this size has been brought before the committee to require that it be reported to the full House for consideration when a quorum is present. I think it is well enough to adhere to that practice.

Mr. PAYNE. I want to suggest to the gentleman from Texas that this would be a good time to make an exception to that rule and to let it go. There will be enough bills that will go back to the House in all probability, and I think he had better let this case go through.

Mr. KILGORE. I am very much obliged to the gentleman from New York for the suggestion just made, but still I am not inclined to take it.

Mr. PAYNE. I am very much surprised that the gentleman is not inclined to take a good suggestion.

Mr. KILGORE. There are a great many good things that I do not take. [Laughter.]

Mr. PAYNE. Not when they are so easily within reach. [Laughter.]

Mr. KILGORE. Now, I say this, that something may turn up that will bring on an investigation, and it may turn out to be not as meritorious a case in the mind of the House as it is in the mind of the gentleman from New York. We had an exhibition of that to-day in a case brought over from the previous Friday night, where it was proposed to increase a pension from $25 to $50. When the question was submitted to the full House by a large majority it refused to agree to the report of the Committee of the Whole. That change occurred by an investigation in the time which intervened between Friday night's session and the action of the House to-day.

Now, I am willing to accommodate the gentleman. Of course I could prevent him taking any course with it, but I am not inclined to. So long as I am in good humor I am not going to do so. [Laughter.]

Mr. PAYNE. Oh, let it go through.

Mr. KILGORE. I make the motion that the Committee of the Whole report this bill back to the House with the recommendation that it be considered in the House on Friday next with the previous question ordered, the right of amendment and of discussion of fifteen minutes on either side reserved.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, I desire to make a suggestion before the motion is put. To-day is Friday—Good Friday. We took up about half of Good Friday's regular session in passing bills that came over from last Friday night relating to pensions, and all the balance of this Friday and all the balance of last Friday was taken up in discussing points of order with reference to a bill providing for paying loyal claimants in claims that are pending and coming from the southern portion of the country.

Now, I suggest, therefore, that this claim shall not go over till next Friday, or any other Friday, until we have some disposition made of the bill that we had up to-day, unless you get a quorum. And, of course, when you get a quorum you can do as you choose. When this session opened we proceeded under general parliamentary law, and things worked in a way to suit the Speaker. Then we got a code of rules, a Draconian code of rules; and even when we come to-day under them to a measure that is on the Calendar, then we are switched off to one side and side-tracked. We have been told that for the last six years we have not had rules that could dispose of the business of the House, and the rules have been changed. We are told that under these new rules business can be done, and when we come to the consideration of these bills the whole of this day is consumed without reaching the bill. So I state that these bills shall not go over until Friday unless you have a quorum to do so, and when you get a quorum you can take them up and dispose of them, and there will be no necessity for them to go over; but you can take any other day, Sunday or any other day, and dispose of them, if you like, except Friday.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Ohio. I would like to ask the gentleman to explain to this House why, in the Fiftieth Congress, which had a large Democratic majority, under the rules they loved so well, they did not take up and pass a similar bill?

Mr. ROGERS. In answer to that I say we did do it. We passed the bill and it went to the Senate, and there it perished. These are claims for the people in the southern portion of the country, and we are not asking you to vote for them, but we are asking you that they shall be considered. You gentlemen are always pretending friendship for loyal men, not only in the South, but all over the country, and declaring everybody else disloyal, and with these men interested in these claims to be loyal was worth something; but when any measure comes up here for their relief and provision is made so that they are to get a just allowance of their claims out of the great taxation that has been imposed upon them in common with all others, you propose to switch them off and side-track them and not meet the issue at all. Now, I want to fight it out. I do not care which way it goes, but I want the issue to be met.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Ohio. I have voted for every claim that was ever brought to the attention of this House from the committee wherein the loyalty of the claimant was established, and I expect to do so.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, I do not care how the gentleman voted, whether he voted for them or voted against them. What I insist upon is that you consider the bill, and say whether you want to pay these people or whether you will not pay them. So far as I am personally concerned, I believe that with one exception there is not one of those parties mentioned in that bill known to me. The one that I do know is a man who had lived in Tennessee and has moved to my district, with whose claim I became acquainted from correspondence that has taken place. I find his matter in this list, so I insist that this arrangement shall not be made. I insist on it in the interest of fair play. I have already learned that those who want to get anything here have to fight for it, and I have the war-paint on and mean to fight from this time forward until justice and right shall be done in the disposition of public business.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. ROGERS. I will.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Would the gentleman be willing to hang about two hundred and fifty pension claims together in one bill and pass them all, all in one, without giving any opportunity for investigation?

Mr. ROGERS. I propose to "hang" a thousand of them until you gentlemen suffer the consideration of this bill to pay the claims of loyal men at the South. That is all there is about it. Now if you are willing to deal fairly, rightly, and properly and to consider these issues I am willing to do it. I have never come here to obstruct the passage of pension bills, and I do not want to do it to-night, but I am not willing to let you take up next Friday and every other Friday with other business, so as to prevent the consideration of this one bill which you evidently propose to side-track so as not to have to meet the issue that is involved.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. ROGERS. I will yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Ohio. I want to say to the gentleman that it is too late, we have passed along in civilization too far, to allow threats from the South or from any other portion of this great country to sway the action of the House of Representatives.

Mr. ROGERS. I have made no threats, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Ohio. I do not understand the English language if the gentleman was not threatening the House in language that I thought was entirely uncalled for.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, nobody disputes the gentleman's not understanding the English language. [Laughter.] I agree to that. I do not say that we are going to threaten you with anything. What I do say is that you must do this business according to the rules of the House; your own rules, not ours; the rules that you said you adopted for the purpose of "doing business." All I ask is that you will consider these claims. Vote them down or vote them up, as you choose; it does not make any difference to me.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Ohio. I understand that that is what we are doing.

Mr. ROGERS. I understand that you are side-tracking them off. You have spent forty-eight hours here in the discussion of points of order.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Ohio. The only difference that I observe is that the occupant of the chair to-day ruled against the gentleman's points of order.

Mr. ROGERS. The gentleman says that he understands that the only difference is the difference between the Chair and myself. There is no difference between the Chair and myself at all. It is perfectly manifest, Mr. Chairman, what this thing means, and we had just as well understand it to-night as at any other time. The French spoliation claims stand upon the very same basis in a parliamentary sense as the bill about which I have been speaking. If the point of order had been sustained, away would go the French spoliation bill and away would go this bill; but there is a certain party in the House who want the French spoliation claims to pass and who do not want these claims to pass, and therefore they can not afford to have this question ruled upon. And this remark applies not only to the French spoliation bill, but to a good many others back of that.

Now, as far as I am concerned, I always thought the French spoliation claims should go to the Supreme Court, because they involved a great constitutional and international question, the first of the kind ever presented to the judiciary of this country. If the Supreme Court decide that those claims should be paid, I am for paying them, as I am for paying every other claim that is passed upon favorably by that or any other competent tribunal. But it has been decided otherwise, and therefore I am disinclined to see those claims paid until they do go to the Supreme Court. Upon the question of these loyal claims I am disposed to consider that the findings of the Court of Claims as to the question of fact ought to be final, and that we ought to apply the rules of law to them so as to do justice to these claimants.

But it can be seen at a glance that, if gentlemen can side-track this bill and get rid of it in that way, they can bring up the French spoliation bill, have a similar point of order overruled, as it should be in this case, and have that bill passed. I do not intend that that shall be done. If you gentlemen want to do business, let us do business. The Speaker of this House has lectured us oftener in the last six years than any school-teacher ever lectured his pupils about "doing business," about "obstruction," about "filibustering," and about the necessity of rules under which we can do business. Now you have got your rules. We are not obstructing you.

We want you to go forward and keep your pledges to the people of this country, not treat them as you did your promises about the Blair bill, by defeating it. Pass your French spoliation bill; pass these loyal claims; pass your direct-tax bill; pass your pension bills; pass them all according to your promises made to the people, and do not undertake to side-track them or switch them off as you have attempted to do with this bill. If you do, I insist that the country shall understand your true position; and, as to this case, I insist that you shall not dodge it, but back out of it, refuse to do it, break your pledges or face the issue, one or the other. Now I yield to my friend from Michigan.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I was going to put a question to my friend from Arkansas, for whom I have a very high regard.

Mr. ROGERS. It is reciprocated entirely.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I think my friend is himself "side-tracking" these matters a little—

Mr. ROGERS. That is what I came here for. [Laughter.]

Mr. CUTCHEON. There are on this Calendar, I suppose, something like two hundred and fifty private pension bills; I have not counted them. I suppose there is not a shadow of doubt about the loyalty of every one of these pension claimants. These cases have been before a court of claims consisting of fifteen members of this House, all good and true men. They have reported in favor of every one of these bills.

Now, I want to ask my friend this question: Suppose the chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions should "pool" these two hundred and fifty bills all together into a single bill; suppose he should bring here in one indivisible bill two hundred and fifty claims, the loyalty of every claimant established, every case favorably reported separately and individually, but the claims "pooled" in a single bill so that we could not separate them. Would the gentleman feel like voting on that bill in a lump?

Mr. ROGERS. I might not want to vote for any part of the bill; but I should not be here voting against the consideration of the measure. And I think there is just the same right to bunch claims from the Pension Committees as there is for bunching these loyal claims. But I am not opposing any of these claims—

Mr. CUTCHEON. I am perfectly willing, of course, that your bill shall be considered.

Mr. ROGERS. I am not opposing any bill on this Calendar. I do not know that there is a single pension claim on the Calendar that is not just and meritorious. I am bound to presume, in the absence of any knowledge on the subject, that they are just and proper claims, for they have received the sanction of a committee of this House who, it is to be presumed, have investigated them. The proposition with which I started out was that you shall not take up Friday (which is now the only day of the week, under our rules, devoted to private business) with the passage of bills coming over from night sessions. If you want to take up these bills next Saturday, next Sunday, or next Monday, you can come here and do so.

Mr. CUTCHEON. The point of my observation is that it is not fair to obstruct the consideration of these private pension bills, each one of which comes here separately on its merits—

Mr. ROGERS. I am not obstructing any of them. The motion of the gentleman from Texas is that this bill shall go over until next Friday. To that I interpose my objection, and say that it shall not be carried over until next Friday unless you have a quorum here; and, furthermore, that you shall never do it until you have come to a disposition of that bill now on the Private Calendar upon which already the last two Friday sessions have been consumed.

A MEMBER. The discussion was on the point of order.

Mr. ROGERS. That does not make any difference. The Chair could have cut off the debate at any moment and could have ruled on the question. Instead of having a ruling, we have had a lot of parliamentary legerdemain for the purpose of getting rid of the question without a ruling.

Mr. PAYNE. I want to make a suggestion. The matter pending here now is simply a little pension claim. I do not want to have it involved with the fight upon the bill embracing the claims from the Court of Claims. I suggest that this bill go over until to-morrow morning, instead of next Friday, and that the previous question be considered as ordered.

Mr. ROGERS. I have no objection to that. I do not care what disposition be made of this bill so that it be not placed in such a position as to consume a part of the day session of Friday.

Mr. PAYNE. I suggest also that there be a provision in the order that fifteen minutes' debate be allowed on each side.

The CHAIRMAN. The proposition, then, of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] is that this bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with a recommendation that the previous question be ordered, and that it be considered by the House to-morrow morning immediately after the reading of the Journal, with the privilege of amendment and with fifteen minutes' debate on each side.

Mr. KILGORE. I am very peaceably inclined myself, but I have a considerable hankering for the man who kicks up a row in the House. I am generally ready to co-operate with any member of the House who undertakes to make legislation difficult. It is much too easy now, and this is a great and growing evil.

To-day I was with the Republican side of the House in opposition to the omnibus claims bill. To-night I am with a Democrat or two who appear to have a grievance and who are inclined to discuss pending legislation and ventilate the opposition. To-day I agreed with my friend from Iowa [Mr. KERR] in his opposition to the consideration of the omnibus bill embracing all these Southern war claims, some two hundred and fifty in number, involving over $500,000. There may be in that long bill claims for which I would be willing to vote. I have seen very few of these Southern war claims that I would be willing to support. There are some, however, and there may be a number of such in that bill.

But I think it is the judgment of this House that the Committee on War Claims should treat cases of that character just as the Committee on Invalid Pensions treat private pension bills. They should be presented like other similar questions; that each claim should stand upon its merits; and in that view and to that purpose each claim should be reported in a separate bill; that a bill should be first introduced providing for each claim separately; that it should be referred to a committee, that the committee should report upon it separately, giving all the facts and circumstances upon which the House must act in passing upon the matter. That has not been done in relation to the claims embraced in this omnibus bill. This is a fundamental objection to the bill—one which I am unwilling to yield, however zealous and earnest may be the friends of the measure in urging it.

The committee present simply a short report, saying in substance that the Court of Claims has passed upon these claims; that the court has found that the property claimed by the beneficiaries in this bill was taken by or furnished for the use of the Army during the war, that the claimants were loyal to the Federal Government, and they have ascertained and fixed the amount involved in each claim. Upon that brief report, and that is all it contains, the friends of the measure in the House demand that Congress shall pass upon this great mass of claims without the right, without the liberty or the opportunity to investigate the facts of each case for themselves and determine the question of the liability of the Government.

Why, Mr. Chairman, they insist, or it was insisted by the friends of the measure to-day, that the House had no discretion and was bound to make the appropriation. If that be the correct view of the case, then let me ask why should Congress be called on at all to act in the matter? Why not authorize the Treasury officials to pay the judgment of the Court of Claims without special appropriations on the part of Congress? If the House has to act on it at all it must exercise its own judgment and discretion on a full examination of the question presented; and if it must do that—and no one questions the duty of the House in that respect—it must have the facts before it, for it can not exercise that right, it can not pass upon the claims intelligently without being in possession of all the facts. Yet the committee choose to withhold the facts, and this committee, instead of reporting each claim separately for the House to act on separately, report all in one bill, with a brief report, not referring to specific items of the bill, but in general terms to the whole batch, good, bad, and infamous.

Mr. LANE. I rise to a question of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LANE. The rules of the House require the gentleman to address himself to the subject before the House for consideration. Now, I have listened to a great deal that has been said to-night, and I have seen a great deal of time wasted on matters entirely outside of the purpose for which we meet. The gentleman from Texas is not addressing the committee on the question before it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair hopes the gentleman from Texas will confine himself to the question.

Mr. KILGORE. Well, sir, if the gentleman wants to cut me off, of course he can do so, but it would be much better to let me have my own way awhile anyhow. [Laughter.]

Mr. LANE. I do not want to cut the gentleman off, but this is pension night and our time is limited.

Mr. KILGORE. Well, I will leave it to him to say, after listening to the discussion to-day, whether or not I am quite as much out of order as other gentlemen who have addressed the House during the last twenty-four hours. It is his right, of course, and I have my remedy. [Laughter.]

Mr. LANE. You can exercise it, then.

Mr. BAKER. Will not my friend from Texas consent to cut himself off and let us go on with the pension business?

Mr. KILGORE. Yes; I will yield in a moment. I have about finished what I wanted to say.

Mr. ENLOE. I suppose the gentleman from Texas will not object to a question from me that is pertinent to the subject he is discussing?

Mr. KILGORE. I reckon not. But I will have to be brief in answering it.

Mr. ENLOE. I wish to ask the gentleman what was the object of Congress in referring these claims to the Court of Claims, if it was not for the purpose of having a judicial determination of the law and the facts, to be reported back to Congress so that the appropriation could be made?

Mr. YODER. I rise to a question of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. YODER. If the gentleman from Texas and the gentleman from Tennessee can not confine themselves to the business before the House, would they not be willing to retire to settle their little matters? [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks the gentleman does not present a question of order.

Mr. KILGORE. Now, in answer to the question of the gentleman from Tennessee I will say, and this will conclude my remarks on this question, and I think it is due me that I should put myself right on record on this point—

Mr. BAKER. You are all right now.

Mr. KILGORE. Because the gentleman from Arkansas has defied the Republican side of the House on this question to-night. He has discussed it, and as I have been acting with that side to-day I am included in the defiance. [Laughter.]

Mr. FLOWER. May I ask you a question?

Mr. KILGORE. Let me answer the question of the gentleman from Tennessee first.

Now, the gentleman from Tennessee propounds this question: "What was the purpose of referring these claims to the Court of Claims if not to have the court determine the law and facts of each case?" I say that was not the purpose of the reference; because the law under which these claims were referred forbids the Court of Claims from rendering a judgment upon the law and facts.

They simply find the facts, the three facts. They find first on the question of the loyalty of the claimant; that is the fact which gives the court jurisdiction. If the finding is against the loyalty of the claimant, that is the end of the case. If the loyalty of the claimant is established to the satisfaction of the court, then it proceeds to determine, secondly, whether the property was taken or furnished to the Government for the use of the Army or not, and, thirdly, the amount of property involved. These are the facts to be determined by the court. The question of the liability of the Government is a question of law and is wholly within the discretion of the House; the court is forbidden to find upon that question. It is a matter on which the House must exercise its own discretion. It is not concluded on the facts by the finding of that court. It may disregard the case made by the finding of the court. It may act on other facts showing the finding untrue or the non-liability of the Government.

Mr. FLOWER. Now, let me ask the gentleman from Texas a question.

Mr. KILGORE. Well, sir.

Mr. FLOWER. The other side of the House, as I understand it, make a point on the Southern war claims that the Court of Claims have no jurisdiction and that their judgment is not worth a rush—

Mr. KILGORE. That is not the proposition.

Mr. FLOWER. Just wait a moment. Now, the Silcott defalcation has been decided in the Court of Claims to the effect that the Sergeant-at-Arms is a disbursing officer of the Government. Do you think that wise decision will be questioned by the other side of the House? [Laughter.]

Mr. KILGORE. Well, now, I do not want to bring any more new matter in this discussion. The complaint now is that there is a large overproduction of irrelevant questions on hand and figuring in this contention to-night. We have enough to deal with at present. [Renewed laughter.]

Mr. PAYNE. I appeal to my friend from Texas to ask unanimous consent of the committee that the Southern claims business be postponed until next Friday morning and the Silcott matter until the motion to reconsider is called up, and that we may go on with the pension business. I hope my friend will adopt the suggestion. I do not want, of course, to interrupt his remarks, but if he has concluded I hope he will allow this course to be pursued.

Mr. KILGORE. I have said about all I desire to say just now. The principal object I had in view was to put myself on record as opposing that omnibus bill and to give the reasons why I oppose it in the shape in which it is presented, and it is certainly pertinent to the discussion to-night. I have been with the other side of this House on that bill, but I am not alone on this side of the Chamber in opposition to it; have displayed a little activity in the contest.

Mr. ROGERS. I do not blame you for apologizing.

Mr. KILGORE. I have no apology to make. I have my convictions on the question, and they are as firmly fixed as are those of my friend from Arkansas. I am generally inclined to stand by them and to urge them, too, on all proper occasions.

Mr. FLOWER. But you do not want to discuss the Silcott matter.

Mr. KILGORE. I do not want to give an opinion on the Silcott case. It is still pending in court. I renew my proposition that this bill shall go over until to-morrow or to such time as will be agreeable to the gentleman from Arkansas, Mr. ROGERS.

Mr. ROGERS. Any time, except Friday.

Mr. KILGORE. Then I move that the Committee of the Whole shall report this bill to the House with the recommendation that it be considered to-morrow morning after the reading of the Journal, with the privilege of discussion fifteen minutes on either side, with the right of amendment reserved, the previous question being considered as ordered. With that proposition I will be content.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. That is to be done by the House after the committee shall rise.

The CHAIRMAN. That is the understanding.

The motion was agreed to.

HARRIET E. BROWN.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 3596) for the relief of Harriet E. Brown.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place the name of Harriet E. Brown, widow of Eleazer H. Brown, late of Battery G, First Regiment Rhode Island Light Artillery Volunteers, on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws.

The report (by Mr. SAWYER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3596) for the relief of Harriet E. Brown, submit the following report:

The claimant is the widow of Eleazer H. Brown, who enlisted in Company G, First Rhode Island Light Artillery, November 4, 1861, and died March 22, 1862. Her claim has been rejected by the Pension Office on the ground that the soldier's fatal disease was incurred after his discharge from the military service. Soldier was discharged upon surgeon's certificate of disability February 15, 1862. There being no certificate of disability on file in the War Department, the cause for such discharge is only known from his final statement, which gives the same as general debility.

From the records of Patent Office General Hospital it appears that the soldier died in said hospital March 22, 1862, of erysipelas; "that he was waiting to be paid and had his papers for discharge, but did not live to have them executed." He was admitted there on March 11, 1862. From a letter written to soldier's relatives by the surgeon in charge of the hospital, under date of May 15, 1862, it further appears that soldier had no money at time of his admission to the same, but had pay due him from January 1, 1862.

It is also shown that soldier, prior to his enlistment, was a very industrious, sober, and steady man, and well thought of in the community in which he resided.

How long he remained in camp of the company at Edwards Ferry, Md., after receiving his final statement is not shown, but the captain, in a letter of March 5, 1862, states that Brown, in company with four other discharged soldiers, went to Washington to get his pay. He had not received it on March 11, 1862, was admitted to hospital as heretofore shown. The delay in the payment of troops, and particularly of discharged soldiers at that period, is well known by those who then served the Government.

Whether the fatal disease was contracted before or after discharge is immaterial. He was to all intents and purposes a soldier until the Government paid him the money due him for his services to enable him to return to his home; in fact, was bound to return him to the place of his enlistment.

The committee believe the claim of his widow meritorious, and therefore report favorably on the accompanying bill and ask that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

M. J. FOGG.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 283) granting a pension to M. J. Fogg.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of M. J. Fogg, late a second lieutenant in Battery E, First Virginia Light Artillery.

The Senate report was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 283) granting a pension to M. J. Fogg, have carefully examined the same, and report as follows:

We adopt the report hereto annexed made by this committee in the first session of the Fiftieth Congress, and recommend the passage of the bill.

[Senate Report No. 456, Fiftieth Congress, first session.]

The records in the office of the Adjutant-General show that M. J. Fogg was enrolled as a private in Battery E, First Virginia Light Artillery Volunteers, on the 9th of August, 1862, at Buckhannon, W. Va., for three years. He was discharged, to date from the 16th of October, 1862, for promotion to second lieutenant in the same battery. The muster-roll of the said battery dates September 13, 1862.

The claimant filed his petition for original invalid pension August 21, 1885, alleging as the basis of his claim that "while in the service, on the retreat from Buckhannon to Clarksburgh, W. Va., on or about the 21st of August, 1862, he incurred rupture of the stomach."

His claim was rejected August 13, 1887, on the ground that "the assault by which he was injured had no connection with his military service; therefore the alleged rupture was not received in the line of duty in the service."

The circumstances under which the injury was received by the claimant are fully set forth in his affidavit, and are sustained by his comrades who were present at the time when it occurred, and also by the corroborating statement of Capt. Alex. C. Moore, in charge of the battery. They are as follows:

The company had been enlisted and was in camp at the town of Buckhannon, Upshur County, West Virginia, when the Confederate General Jenkins made a raid upon the town. The citizens fled, leaving this company to protect the town. They had not sufficient force, and retreated in the direction of Clarksburgh, W. Va. When they had arrived within a short distance of Clarksburgh they met a number of the citizens of Buckhannon returning to that point, among whom was one Charles Trimble, who, supposing that the horse that was being ridden by the claimant was his, endeavored to take it by force, which caused the horse to leap over an embankment, throwing the claimant over his head upon the pike, which accident produced the rupture.

Capt. Alexander C. Moore makes affidavit that—"After the enlistment of the company, and before they were regularly mustered in, on or about the 30th day of August, 1861, the claimant, with other members of that company, took part in an engagement with the enemy at Buckhannon, W. Va. Affiant recollects of hearing said Fogg afterwards, while he was in the service, complain of being injured by a fall he had received on the retreat from Buckhannon, and spoke of having a knot in his side."

The evidence to sustain the fact of the rupture on that occasion is the testimony of his comrades, Michael Boyle, William F. Bryan, Lemuel Rollins, M. S. Thomas, and N. G. Munday, who testify, as does the captain of the company, that when he was enlisted he was physically sound, and that after the fall he was injured by a rupture, so that it was impossible for him to lift any heavy article by reason of this rupture. The fact of the rupture is further shown by the report of the examining board, who certify "the rupture is about the size of a hen's egg; all other organs healthy."

There being no dispute as to the facts of this case, the only question presented is, whether these facts present a case that is pensionable? If the claimant had been wounded by the enemy in their attack upon Buckhannon no one would question his right to a pension.

The fact that on the retreat, under the orders of his superior officer, he was met in the public road and attempted to be unhorsed by one claiming the animal, which in truth did not belong to him, and which act of a third party caused the horse that he was riding to leap over an embankment and throw him to the ground, by reason of which the injury occurred, presents to the minds of your committee a case clearly coming within the provisions of the statute which authorizes the pensioning of soldiers for injuries received in the line of duty.

The soldier is now sixty-seven years of age. He is, in fact, unable by manual labor to earn a livelihood for himself and family. His character and respectability are certified by fifty-five of the leading citizens living in the community in which he resides, and the credibility of the witnesses who testify to the facts on which his claim rests is amply sustained by the papers in the case. His character as a soldier is not only vouched for by the captain of his company, but also by Brig. Gen. B. S. Roberts. (See orders hereto annexed as a part of this report, marked Exhibit A.)

[Special Order No. 35.]

HEADQUARTERS INDEPENDENT DIVISION, MIDDLE DEPARTMENT,
Weston, W. Va., May 18, 1863.

1. Second Lieut. M. J. Fogg, Upshur Battery, is hereby relieved from duty as temporary aid-de-camp in Brig. Gen. B. S. Roberts's staff.

2. Lieut. M. J. Fogg having been deprived of his leave, granted from Headquarters Eighth Army Corps, Baltimore, Md., on account of the recent rebel raid into West Virginia, has permission to take advantage of it now; at the expiration of which he will join his command without delay.

By order of Brig. Gen. B. S. Roberts.

JOS. MCC. BELL,
Captain and A. A. G., U. S. Army.

HEADQUARTERS INDEPENDENT DIVISION, MIDDLE DEPARTMENT,
Weston, W. Va., May 18, 1863.

Lieut. M. J. Fogg, Upshur Battery, having just arrived at his home at the time of the recent rebel raid into West Virginia, reported to me at once for duty at Buckhannon. In the want of artillery officers, he was assigned to duty by me to Ewing's Battery, where he remained until my arrival at Clarksburgh. His complete knowledge of the country and inhabitants induced me, in consequence of the interruption of railroad communication and his inability to join his battery, to attach him to my staff, where he has since been rendering efficient and praiseworthy service. Thus he has been unable (as he has been unwilling under existing circumstances) to take advantage of his leave, and I think it but just that he now be permitted to visit his home and give his personal attention to his family, who have suffered at rebel hands. I have therefore relieved him from duty with me and granted him permission to visit his home.

By order of Brig. Gen. B. S. Roberts.

JOS. MCC. BELL,
Captain and A. A. G., U. S. Army.

Your committee recommend that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

DAVID H. LUTMAN.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 284) granting a pension to David H. Lutman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of David H. Lutman, late a private in Company F, Second Maryland Regiment.

The Senate report was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 284) granting a pension to David H. Lutman, have examined the same and respectfully report: We adopt the report hereto annexed made by this committee in the first session of the Fiftyeth Congress, and recommend the passage of the bill.

David H. Lutman enlisted as a private in Company F, Second Maryland Regiment, September 6, 1861; discharged September 30, 1864, by reason of the expiration of his term of enlistment; filed his declaration for a pension February 13, 1880; granted a pension for one-half disability in 1885; applied for an increase, his claim was rejected, and he was dropped from the pension-rolls April 22, 1886.

The evidence accompanying the papers shows that the claimant was a strong, healthy man when he enlisted in 1861. That in a forced march of his regiment from New Creek to Romney in December, 1861, just after his return to the Army from the hospital at Cumberland, where he had been ill with the measles, he was compelled to wade several streams, the water at that time being extremely cold, which exposure led to his being sent back to the hospital. When he returned to the regiment he was still suffering from the effects of the disease, and continued to be so affected up to the date of his discharge, it being necessary during that entire period, by reason of his physical condition, to assign him to light duty. The evidence further shows that he has been treated from the date of his discharge to the present time by four or five physicians. His neighbors and comrades who knew him before, during, and after the war testify to the effects of this exposure and the disability which followed it. He was granted a pension for "spinal irritation, result of measles."

When examined for an increase of pension he was certified as not entitled to any rating. He charges, in an affidavit filed November 17, 1887, that the surgeon who examined him was in a "state of intoxication and entirely unfit to make the examination," and at the same time filed a letter from his family physician sustaining his right, by reason of his disease, to a pension. He had, however, prior to this date been examined by a board at Hagerstown, and the Pension Bureau therefore refused to reopen the case on the ground—

"That the unsworn statement of Dr. Greene is not sufficient to controvert the adverse findings of two boards, and therefore does not warrant an examination looking to restoration. If the claimant wishes restoration he must furnish good and sufficient sworn testimony, medical preferred, showing as a fact, and from personal knowledge of the affiant, that pensionable disability, due to formerly pensioned cause, has existed since the date of dropping, and this testimony should intelligently state how the claimant is affected and what his condition is irrespective of the claimant's say-so to neighbors or doctors."

Acting under these instructions the claimant filed the following sworn statement of Dr. E. B. Pendleton, one of the most intelligent and able physicians of that section of the country, and a gentleman of the highest character, who states:

"I have on this 4th day of February, 1888, made a careful examination of David H. Lutman, late a private in Company F, Second Regiment Maryland Volunteers, and find that he is suffering from spinal irritation, which incapacitates him from the performance of the manual labor upon which he is dependent for a livelihood."

Second. The affidavit of Dr. C. S. Greene, his family physician, who had been fully vouched for by replies to several confidential inquiries from the Pension Office. His statement is as follows:

"I have this 4th day of February, 1888, examined D. H. Lutman, late a private in Company F, Second Regiment Maryland Volunteers, and find him suffering from an irritation of the spine, caused (as he informs me) from having taken cold on the measles while in the Army, and said spinal irritation prevents him from performing manual labor to any very great extent, and at times he is unable to work at all. I have known said D. H. Lutman for fifteen years and have been consulted by him in regard to his back on a number of occasions."

Third. The affidavit of William R. Jackson, as follows:

"That he has been personally acquainted with David H. Lutman, who is an applicant for reinstatement on the pension-rolls, for the last twenty years, and during said time said Lutman has been a sufferer from disease said to have been contracted in the Army during the war, and that he further knows that the said Lutman has been in a great measure incapacitated from performing any kind of manual labor, and that he is at this time incapacitated from performing anything like the labor of a full hand. I have worked with said Lutman and know that he can not perform a half day's work regularly, and at many times is not able to work at all for weeks."

Fourth. The affidavit of Henry H. Michael, as follows:

"That he is a resident of Morgan County, West Virginia, and a farmer by occupation; that he is personally acquainted with David H. Lutman, late private in Company F, Second Regiment Maryland Volunteers, who is an applicant for reinstatement on the United States pension-rolls; that the said David H. Lutman is now, and has been for years, suffering from, as I firmly believe, the effects of disease contracted in the line of duty in the Army. I further certify that the said Lutman is not now, nor has he been for a number of years, able to perform more than the half of the work of an ordinary hand, and frequently is not able to work at all."

These last two are also creditable witnesses.

After these affidavits were filed the Pension Office refused to order the claimant before a board for examination, although he proposed to go to the expense of coming to Washington to be examined, if required by the Department. The Pension Office held "that the medical and lay evidence recently presented does not warrant another examination looking to restoration, as it fails to describe the claimant's physical condition or to show that a ratable disability has existed from the alleged 'spinal irritation' since March 4, 1864."

Do the facts set out in these affidavits warrant this conclusion? We think not, and for the following reasons: The claimant was pensioned in 1885 for "spinal irritation, result of measles," to date from 1864.

Dr. Pendleton makes oath that on the 5th of February, after a most careful examination of the claimant, he finds him suffering from spinal irritation which incapacitates him from the performance of manual labor, a "ratable disability" that had, under the decision of the bureau, existed from 1864 to April, 1885. Dr. Greene, his family physician, testifies to the same physical condition of the claimant, and that he had attended him for fifteen years for said disability. Jackson and Michael, neighbors of the claimant, testify that he has been in a great measure incapacitated from performing any kind of manual labor, and that he is at this time incapacitated from performing anything like the labor of a full hand; the statement of Michael being "that claimant is now, and has been for years, suffering from disease contracted in the line of duty; that he is not now, nor has he been for a number of years, able to perform one-half of the work of an ordinary man, and frequently is not able to work at all."

In the judgment of the committee, these affidavits from physicians of high standing and laymen of credibility cover every point suggested by the medical department of the Pension Office. It is no evidence of the "say-so" of the claimant, but is the affirmative, personal knowledge of those who have spoken.

The committee is of opinion that under these affidavits a pensionable disability has been shown, and that the claimant is entitled to be reinstated on the pension-rolls as a pensioner in accordance with the provisions and limitations of the pension laws.

Senate bill No. 2206 is reported favorably, with the recommendation that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

GEORGE FITZCLARENCE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 755) granting a pension to George Fitzclarence.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of George Fitzclarence, late private in Company B, Washington Territory Infantry, and Company F, Fourth Regiment of California Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. SAWYER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill granting a pension to George Fitzclarence, have examined the same and report:

This soldier enlisted April 10, 1855, as a private in Company F, Fourth Regiment California Volunteer Infantry. He had formerly served an enlistment, commencing March 27, 1852, to March 27, 1855, in Company B, First Washington Territory Volunteers. He was discharged from his second service November 30, 1855. On September 17, 1857, he filed an application for pension, alleging that he contracted rheumatism and disease of the kidneys in California, October 15, 1865. The claim was rejected by the Commissioner of Pensions October 25, 1888, on the ground that there is no record in the War Department of alleged rheumatism and disease of kidneys and no evidence on file showing incurrence of said disabilities while in service, and claimant states his inability to furnish such evidence.

The claimant states further in his application that these disabilities were contracted while en route from Fort Humboldt, California, with Indian prisoners, to Grand Ronde Valley, California, having no surgeon with the command. He was discharged in about six weeks afterwards. He states that he has since been treated in the City Hospital at Little Rock, Ark.; at City Hospital at St. Louis, Mo.; also at the poor-farm, in Pottawatomie County, Kansas; and that he is unable to find any of his comrades, and that he is unable to make a living. He is now an inmate of the Soldiers' Home at Leavenworth, Kans. He furnishes the affidavits of Dr. M. A. Malord and Dr. J. W. Fulton, showing treatment for rheumatism and disease of kidneys; and the board of examining surgeons at Leavenworth, Kans., rate him at four-eighths for rheumatism.

The fact that this old soldier, after an honorable service of nearly four years, has had to be cared for by the supervisors of the poor warrants your committee in recommending the passage of the bill.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

DANIEL A. CULMAN.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 765) granting a pension to Daniel A. Culman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Daniel A. Culman, late of Company B, Eleventh Regiment New Jersey Volunteers.

The report was read at length.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

GEORGE L. SANDERS.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 772) granting a pension to George L. Sanders.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of George L. Sanders, Company A, One hundred and twenty-first Pennsylvania, and Company I, Two hundred and second Pennsylvania.

The report (by Mr. SAWYER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 772) granting a pension to George L. Sanders, submit the following report:

A similar bill passed the Senate at the first session of the Fifty-third Congress. The facts are fully set forth in the following report, made at that time:

"George L. Sanders, the claimant under this bill, enlisted July 25, 1862, in Company A, One hundred and thirty-first Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served until August 19, 1862.

"He again enlisted August 16, 1864, and was discharged August 3, 1865.

The latter service was as private in Company I, Two hundred and second Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers. On June 18, 1867, he made application for pension, alleging 'that while at Camp Couch, near Chambersburg, Pa., in October, 1864, he contracted a severe cold and diarrhea and night sweats, from thirty-six hours' exposure to cold rain at Baltimore, and was sent to the hospital at Alexandria, Va. The doctor called his trouble intermittent fever.'

"The claim was rejected by the Commissioner of Pensions May 16, 1882, after a thorough special examination, upon the ground that 'disease of lungs and throat and deafness, the disabilities for which pension is claimed, did not originate in the United States service, but existed prior to enlistment.'

"In an affidavit, in response to call from Pension Office to state specifically what disabilities he claims pension for, the claimant states:

"That he claims pension for loss of hearing as the result of intermittent fever, and for lung and throat disease, the sequence of his army life.' Amos G. Becker, Henry W. Sanders, John M. Brown, Jacob Neyhoft, and J. O. Keeley all swear 'that claimant was a sound man previous to his enlistment.' The credibility of these affidavits is satisfactorily established. Amos G. Becker, comrade, swears that 'claimant contracted disease of lungs, cough, and spit up matter in the service.'

"This is corroborated fully by comrades Henry W. Sanders and John M. Brown. The presence of these comrades is verified by the report of the Adjutant-General, United States Army. In the matter of continuance claimant swears:

"That for a considerable time after discharge he treated himself, but at last got so bad that he availed himself of the treatment of Dr. Thornton.'

"Dr. Thornton swears, September, 1877, that—

"He treated claimant for four years past (1873 to 1877) for chronic inflammation of the bronchi, of which at times he is completely disabled from all work. Disease was of long standing when affiant first saw him.' Jacob Neyhoft testifies that he has known claimant from discharge to present time (May 7, 1878), and that he has been suffering all the time with trouble of lungs and spitting up.

"Dr. A. W. Eyer swears, July 3, 1878:

"From a personal examination of claimant, I find hyper-resonance and sibilant rales, large and small crepitation over both sides of his chest, disconnected from any discovered disease of heart. I believe him to be suffering from chronic bronchitis and emphysema, and unfit for any active work.'

"This diagnosis is corroborated by Dr. William Leiser.

"Comrade Amos G. Becker, November 29, 1878, swears that 'claimant has had an affection of the lungs and cough ever since contracting it, while in the service, to the present time.'

"Daniel Sanders, Joseph O. Keeley, Amos G. Becker, John M. Brown testify to continuance. The board of examining surgeons at Williamsport, Pa., under date of May, 1889, states disability as permanent and rates him C one-half total. The same board, February 14, 1893, rates him C three-fourths total.

"The claim was referred to Special Examiner J. P. Wooten, who is of the opinion that the claim is meritorious and recommends further examination. It was then sent to Special Examiner John F. Fitzpatrick for further examination in the field as to merit. The examiner recommends that the claim be rejected. Mr. Fitzpatrick took the testimony of W. M. Brown, a comrade, who states that—"He was hard of hearing prior to enlistment, but not deaf; he remembers well, also, that he had a bad cough; he had a cough when he joined Company I, Two hundred and second Regiment, and thinks he was still hard of hearing.

"Was not requested to testify for claimant; can't say we are on friendly terms; don't bear any malice toward him in the sense of hurting him."

"On this report, as before stated, the claim was rejected. Mr. Brown was certainly biased against the claimant. Since the rejection of the claim additional testimony has been filed, but which seems to have been considered of no importance by the Commissioner, showing unquestionably and beyond any reasonable doubt the soundness of the soldier at enlistment. With this testimony before us, your committee are of the opinion an injustice was done by the Pension Bureau in rejecting his claim, and therefore recommend the passage of the bill."

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. FLOWER. Now, Mr. Chairman, I want to make a suggestion. We have worked very hard here to-day all day, and it has been Good Friday. Now, I suggest that we try our best to make a few homes happy, and I ask unanimous consent that the list of members present be called and that each one be allowed to call up a bill.

Mr. MORRILL. Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Invalid Pensions have voted unanimously that we should follow the Calendar; and for the very good reason that we can pass about 20 per cent. more bills than we could when we have the delay of hunting up the bills. I think we had better go on in the regular order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas objects.

THOMAS DENNIS.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 767) granting a pension to Thomas Dennis.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas Dennis, late private of Company A, One hundred and twelfth Regiment of Illinois Volunteer Infantry.

The report (by Mr. SAWYER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill granting a pension to Thomas Dennis, have examined the same and report:

The claimant enlisted as a private in Company A, One hundred and twelfth Regiment Illinois Infantry, on the 8th day of August, 1862, and was honorably discharged June 23, 1865. On November 7, 1882, he made application for a pension, alleging "that at Somerset, Ky., in May, 1863, he contracted deafness and was ruptured on right side; also had his left leg badly crushed by his horse falling on him."

The claim was rejected by the Commissioner of Pensions February, 1886, on the ground of "no record and claimant's inability to furnish any evidence of origin." The claimant states that he is unable to furnish the testimony of comrades or a commissioned officer, for the reason "that he did not let any of his officers or comrades know he was ruptured or had received injury to his left leg," and that he does not know the whereabouts of his family physician, Hiram Nance, who treated him from about July, 1865, to 1866, and again at sundry times until 1881. That Dr. Nance provided him with a truss. "That he believes him to be dead. The post-office address of Dr. Nance was Kewanee, Ill.

That he has not employed medical attendance since his removal to Kansas for the reason that he was too poor. James R. Hatten and William L. Gochman, comrades, swear that claimant was an able-bodied man when he entered the Army, and that after his return he was not the same man, so far as health and being able to perform manual labor were concerned.

Dr. Lewis J. Warren, examining surgeon, Clay Center, Kans., finds under date of December 27, 1882, "that claimant is partially deaf in both ears, and from the several disabilities claimed gives a rating of three-fourths total."

There was a natural disposition among good soldiers to conceal such disabilities as rupture; and taking into consideration the present enfeebled condition of the claimant, his poverty, and circumstances, your committee recommend the passage of the bill.

Mr. ENLOE. Mr. Chairman, I rise for the purpose of replying to some remarks of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. ALLEN] with reference to the bill under consideration in the House to-day and to some extent here this evening. My attention has been called by gentlemen around me to a remark made by the gentleman from Michigan which I did not hear, a statement that I was charged with having reported to this House and placed upon the Calendar a bill without any authority to do so. I have examined the notes of the Reporter, and the gentleman is reported as saying:

The motion this afternoon reciting that a bill which the gentleman himself reported contained matters never submitted to his committee (a grave charge against him and his committee) presented a question of the highest privilege, which any man of candor and brains—must at once recognize as a question of privilege. The resolution of to-day charged the gentleman impliedly with introducing into this House a bill which he had no authority to introduce. That raised a question of privilege at once, and to shield the gentleman, to shield his committee, to give members who were thus charged an opportunity as a matter of privilege to refute this charge, the motion was entertained as a privileged motion.

That evidently means the gentleman from Michigan himself—

There is a plain and distinct charge that I placed upon the Calendar of this House a bill embracing matters which had never been submitted to my committee, and that the gentleman from Michigan, as Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, entertained the resolution offered to-day by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS] as a question of privilege for the purpose of protecting me against that charge and giving me an opportunity to defend myself. Mr. Chairman, I say that if any gentleman gave him any such information he gave it falsely, and unless the gentleman from Michigan can name the man who gave it the charge rests upon him.

I say there was not an item in that bill, and nobody ever charged on this floor that there was an item incorporated in that bill, without the authority of the Committee on War Claims, and when I reported the bill to this House I reported it by the united action of that committee, with the exception of the chairman, who was the only member to r-ne en il

to ty le-

self nce gs,

lay ch
se,
se,

lar ted an ay
iving ny init

ed
out
ed
m-ber